

Building on Tradition

Student Life	○	2
Academics	○	26
Album	○	46
Sports	○	82
Magazine	○	114
Organizations	○	122
Advertisements	○	150
Index	○	176
Closing	○	182

WAGON TRAILS

Mooresville High School
550 North Indiana Street
Mooresville, IN 46158
Volume 48

Building on TRADITION

Greg Small & Ann Truong

“Traditions generate enough spirit to last throughout the year, Ian Septoski, junior

To become the best, one could never cease to work. There was a definite foundation upon which to build at MHS, but it took the efforts of many to construct a strong tradition. It was this desire that drove students to excel and leave some personal marks for others to remember.

At Mooresville, tradition was the basis for many expectations. Whether it was homecoming, prom, or commencement, the community knew that each event would occur just like clockwork. Yet, it was not the regularity, but rather the quality, that made things so special.

Times and attitudes may have changed, but at Mooresville the more things changed the more things stayed the same. Students and alumni seemed to be present at each event to show their support. Their only task was to join in the singing of the school song after a hard fought battle.

“Students here have a lot of school spirit and back the teams well. Traditions generate enough spirit to last throughout the year,” said Ian Septoski. This was our spirit, unparalleled and unique.

When all was said and done, each individual became part of a much larger whole. No matter what the name or class, each person was a Mooresville Pioneer--the Pioneers that for one year did everything possible to build on tradition.

The Spotlighters' performance excites the crowd. The first Spotligher Invitational, a show choir contest, was a great success.

Seniors Danny Henson, Chad Powell, and Chris Gibbs enjoy each other at a basketball game. Times with friends were special.

