In the midst of cornfields & a growing economic community, in 2003-2004, MHS experienced ~~everything~~ from joyous athletic & academic championships, to the ~~horrific~~ loss of three fellow students. New traditions were presented to students & ~~old~~ traditions were destroyed. Flip-flops became a safety hazard

& were made part of the banned section of the dress code, & t-shirts that simply said:

were sold to show school pride.

Senior paddles vanished,

but basketballs came to the rescue to replace those wooden

~~weapons~~ Freshmen & Sophomores also brought new TRADITIONS to MHS, with their unique styles & interesting hobbies. These NEW traditions evolved into a new atmosphere, especially in the cafeteria, where themes such as, "Cabaret," & "Pizzeria," adorned the lunch lines. Many students achieved excellence, while others GRADUATED without looking back.

Student Life

A year to remember

It was 7:30 a.m. on Monday, October 6. The hallways were flooded with people wearing college sweatshirts, t-shirts, pants, and hats. Students at MHS were full of school spirit, and many thought like sophomore Amanda Jones, who said, "I thought homecoming week was really fun." Jones was a cheerleader, and "we were really pumped up for the game, and we were trying to get everyone excited," said Jones.

By Friday, October 10, four spirit days had passed, but several traditions were left behind. Seniors lost their paddle privileges and accepted cowbells and bandanas. "I was pretty mad that we didn't get our paddles, so I went to Meijer and saw plungers, and they were already blue and gold, so the color inspired me," said senior Travis Burns.

The tradition of senior jeans was also altered and adopted by members of every class, including middle-schoolers.

Seniors also painted their interpretation of homecoming on the windows in the cafeteria, and MHS became the site for new traditions.

"We were really pumped up for the game, and we were trying to get everyone excited," said sophomore Amanda Jones.

A Loss to State Champs

As the seniors stood on the bleachers with the thought of being at their last fall homecoming as high school students, football players prepared for what could have been a victorious night.

"I felt disappointed because I felt we could have done better, but it was cool having all the fans out there, and the fireworks at the end were cool too," said senior defensive tackle, Lucas Catellier.

The town of Mooresville came together on the night of October 10, 2003, to support the MHS football team as they combated against the Roncalli Rebels at homecoming. "We just didn't come together like we should have," said senior wide receiver JR Anton.

The first touchdown was scored by the Rebels, and was followed by many more. MHS managed to score, but by the end of the fourth quarter, Roncalli dominated with a final score of 35 and MHS 14. Although the team lost, the crowd was attentive and cheered until the last seconds.

"I felt disappointed because I felt we could have done better," said senior Lucas Catellier.

Rough Week, Successful Weekend

By: Cassie Brown

As the fall season comes to an end, and November is just around the corner, most of the students and staff are preparing for Wagon Trails Revue 2003.

Then the death of senior Steven Terrell put all the preparations and plans on a slight delay, but everyone had to push forward to get through the practices and dress rehearsal, which was moved to Wednesday night because of the football sectional game. Wagon Trails gave performers something to stress about, other than the death of a student and friend.

"This was the first time I have ever lost a student in my class it was devastating because he was always happy," said senior English teacher Ms. Sharon Eickhoff.

"This was the first time I have ever lost a student in my class it was devastating because he was always happy," said senior English teacher Ms. Sharon Eickhoff.

The yearbook staff, who sponsored the show, also found it difficult to focus on the task at hand. "After we got started and on track, everything seemed to come together," said senior staff member Brandy Gilman.

Although Thursday night was not a sellout, it was a successful show, considering Wednesday's events and Friday night's sectional game.

Every year, MHS tries to get Winter Homecoming to start out with a bang. This time it just didn't seem to happen. Some say that the spirit days were not advertised enough to let students know what to dress up for, so the spirit days kind of came as a surprise. "I usually try to dress up, but I didn't know the spirit days, I didn't even remember that it was Winter Homecoming," said sophomore Ashlee Aspin. The Pep Session was full of laughs, the students took on the faculty, in the Student vs. Faculty basketball game, losing to the faculty once again.

"It was really unexpected. I didn't even know I was nominated. It was a lot of fun!" said senior Carley Wright.

Although there were some speculations about the voting process for the queen and king candidates, senior Carley Wright was Winter Homecoming queen. "It was really unexpected, I didn't even know I was nominated, it was a lot of fun!" said Wright.

The Lady Pioneers defeated the Plainfield Quakers 59-45. The boys team was defeated 68-56. A little bit of spirit, but it was a lot of fun for some students.

Flaws of Perfection

By: Cassie Brown

At one point in time everyone has to conquer the fear of performing in front of an audience. If you are a student-actor, how do you overcome that fear? What do you do if you forget a line or something unexpected happens?

"I just go blank and say the first thing that comes to mind when I forgot my lines," said sophomore Jon Eickman.

Although Mrs. Kassen, spring play director, reported that dress rehearsal was perfect, slip ups and oops were bound to happen. "On the first night, I accidentally knocked over a tree on stage. It gave me a chance to improvise a bit and get a few extra laughs out of the crowd," said senior Ben Thomas. As for senior Stacey Sipos, she accidentally fell going to her position on the stage. "It surprised me, I didn't expect to fall, and then I had to keep from laughing so that I could get out my next line," said Sipos.

Most of those who attended the play "Done to Death" reported that it went off without a hitch. The play was a comedy, murder mystery.

"On the first night I accidentally knocked over a tree on stage," said senior Ben Thomas.

Whether it was at a party, at the mall, or in MHS, friends were present, and made some students' four years in high school an unforgettable experience. "We met on Halloween when we were in kindergarten," said senior Kasey Fancher about her and senior Liz Lester.

Juniors Jayme Beard and Kelsey Stewart were friends since second grade. "We sat across from each other in the lunch room because it was in alphabetical order, but we didn't start talking until we compared our burps," said Stewart.

Friends at MHS were as necessary as toilet paper in the restroom. Without them, life the MHS experience just wouldn't be the same.

The sun blazing on one's tanned skin and the smoothness of fine sand in between one's toes are just a couple of things that many MHS students got the chance to experience during the 2004 Spring Break.

Many students travelled south, mostly toward the Florida area, and others travelled east toward South Carolina, where the sun did not exactly blaze, but simply appeared beautiful reflecting from the Atlantic Ocean. Yet, some students did not travel anywhere, and instead, they stayed in Mooresville raking in the big bucks. "It was long and boring working during Spring Break," said junior Jason Robinson, referring to his job at Meijer. "I only had two days off during that week, but I didn't have any plans, so I stayed home, worked, and made money."

"I only had two days off during that week, but I didn't have any plans, so I stayed home, worked, and made money," said junior Jason Robinson.

Those who travelled east felt the cold. "It was pretty much sunny the entire time, but it was cool [referring to the weather]," said sophomore Wyatt Allegree. Allegree travelled to Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, with fellow sophomore Steve Shimonek's family.

The 2004 Spring Break was exciting for some, and just another week for others. Regardless, it was a memorable one.

The lights slowly dimmed and the sound of MHS students' voices began to ring across the William R. Curry Center. The audience stared in amazement at the sight of the large number of students in the variety of choirs. "It was wonderful to see so many students involved in choir programs here in Mooresville," said a choir parent.

Spring Spectacular contained everything from heart-felt patriotic songs to fun remakes of a collection of songs. One of the soloists, junior Andy McKinney, expressed his patriotism and emotion through the song The Prayer. "I had some friends over in Iraq and the song had a lot of meaning," said McKinney. "Being with an outstanding singer like Jacqueline was also great," added McKinney. Other performers went through a different experience during Spring Spec. Senior Finesse member Allison Stultz became an 80's "MC" for Finesse's remake of a collection of songs, including Walk This Way. "It was a great way to end the year," said Stultz.

For many MHS students, this was their last choir performance in high school, for others, it was just another chance to be caught in the spotlight.

"I had a lot of friends over in Iraq and the song had a lot of meaning," said junior Andy McKinney.

MHS: Modern Freakshow

By: Karla De Juan Romero

Mooreville High School has had its share of unusual moments and unusual students. From the time the faculty dressed in a toga theme for no particular reason, to the time senior Jared Wilcort and freshman Chris Woods appeared as the "Beebop Boys" for Wagon Trails Revue, MHS understood the term unusual. But what about students who had unusual talents, such as people who could extend their diaphragm to look like they were pregnant?

That's right, folks, MHS had its share of strange talents. They existed throughout the school. Some could hyperextend their elbows to make it look like their arms were bent backwards, and some could stick their tongues in their noses. "I discovered it in like sixth grade," said sophomore Melissa Grubbs, about her unusual ability to stick her tongue in her nose. Freshman James Call had a very unusual deformity on his arm. After Call broke his arm on three different occasions, doctors had to replace half of it with titanium. "Some teachers asked me not to raise that arm in class," said Call about his arm.

Students with unusual talents or deformities made MHS the diverse environment it was.

Night of Memories

The lights that softly lit the sparkles on the girls' dresses, the sounds that made MHS students move like never before, and most of all, L'Amour, made the 2004 prom a magnificent evening.

Prom was filled with enchanted moments. From the magic and sight of so many excited people, it was one that will be remembered mostly for its style and uniqueness.

"Prom was awesome since it was my senior year," said senior prom queen Jessica Riley. Riley also won fall homecoming queen, and said in

Pirates Steal the Night

After dancing the night away in a "garden of love" at Prom, many prom-goers headed to a relaxing time at Post Prom, with the theme "Pirates of the Caribbean."

"Junior parents did a great job building everything, and they put a lot of work into it," said senior Heaven Dayhuff.

Also, as a new tradition, the junior parents hosted a car show the Monday before Prom. Seniors and juniors could enter their cars into the competition and classmates voted on the "Best Hot Rod," "Jeff Foxworthy," and other categories of cars.

Not only was the car show a new tradition, but the breathalyzer tests given at the door of Post Prom were a first.

"The breathalyzer was almost inconvenient because everyone wanted to get in and have fun, but it was a good idea. It made a lot of people think twice before drinking after Prom," said senior Rikki Harrison.

With such new traditions and old ones, the Post Prom proved to be a real Pirate's party.

Oh, Happy Day!

What makes people happy? Is it being surrounded by loved ones, a sense of achievement, or is it simply the small things in everyday life, such as petting one's dog on the front porch? Regardless, there is one definite thing that makes people happy, and that is good, clean fun.

At MHS, students seemed to have enjoyed every bit of this good, clean fun and that was thanks to a number of hilarious students who shared their happiness with the rest of the students everyday. Many students will never forget the day that senior Josh Cave came to school with a freshly-cut mullet, and others will never forget when senior queen candidate Jasmine Khosravi appeared at Winter Homecoming with a risky outfit. "I liked to make the little children happy," said Khosravi. Happiness is necessary in life. Without it, people would be...unhappy, and no one likes to be sad. At MHS, happiness floated in the air like the smell of smoke in the sophomore hallway, and as Khosravi put it, "Happiness is like a milk shake, it's cool..."

"Happiness is like a milk shake, it's cool," said senior Jasmine Khosravi.

Smiles Mix with Sadness

Although graduation was a time of happiness and excitement for most members of the senior class, some graduates teared up as the images of their childhoods flashed up on screen in the South Gym.

"Thank goodness it is over, but I still have all of the memories," said senior Holly Murphey, who led the class in the changing of the tassels.

Most graduates reported that the most nerve-racking part of graduation was the act of walking up on stage. "The scariest part of graduation was walking around the corner and seeing everyone in the bleachers," said Murphey.

"The scariest part of graduation was walking up on the stage," said valedictorian Brian Acker.

So, all 12 years of an education led up to this moment, and most seniors had stage fright. Yet, there were no reports of any trips or falls at graduation.

"I felt like I was getting something back for all the hard work I put in," said senior Brittany Love.

"Thank goodness it is over, but I still have all of the memories," said senior Holly Murphey.

Prom Theme: Fact or Rumor?

By Jessica McCauley

For many juniors prom is a first-time experience, and many want to make this night a fun and lasting memory. There are hours and hours of work that go into making this a great night. Dates, friends, dinner, dress and transportation all have an impact on how the night will play out. Another major element of prom is its theme. The theme of prom is decided by the prom steering committee, a group of juniors who sold 14 or more magazines in the magazine fund-raiser in the fall. Every year, rumors begin to fly about the theme of the prom. It was no different this time with the rumor that the it was going to be an "alternative" theme. An alternative theme would involve going non-traditional in just about everything. The rumor was that the colors were orange and white, the dress would be casual instead of formal, and all of the music would be alternative or punk rock. "It's not true at all. I don't know who started it, it's not a very nice thing because I don't think that anyone realizes how hard the prom steering committee works first off. I don't think anyone would let that happen with prom," said Prom Steering Committee member Megan Taylor. Although the rumors were abundant and caused alarm, the prom theme stayed traditional and made the night special for the junior class.

Being a sophomore comes with many privileges. For most sophomores, the biggest privilege is driving; however, some sophomores choose not to drive. "Even though I'm sixteen, I don't have my license yet. To be honest, I'm not that anxious to get my license, because it's kind of scary. I hear of so many accidents, and I'm just not that experienced in driving," said sophomore Lindsay Faull. The sophomores who do not drive have to rely on parents, older siblings, or friends for rides. Sometimes asking for rides can get tiring. "The best thing about driving is that now I don't have to wait on parents," said sophomore Nathan Samples. That small card gives one the sense of freedom. This sense of freedom gives many teenagers the idea that driving alone means they can do whatever they want. Driving with the radio blaring, talking on cell phones, or the distractions of friends in the car is a common issue for teenagers, but this can be very dangerous and is the cause of many accidents. Most teenagers do not realize that driving is a huge responsibility. It is meant to be taken seriously. When driving, be aware of the other cars, drive carefully, and always wear a seatbelt. Although this advice sounded so simple, it sometimes seemed difficult to follow.

Too Much Time Watching TV?

By Jessica McCauley

Many students at MHS who had busy schedules and were very active did not take time to sit down and watch TV. Most people had an after school job, played a sport or participated in one of our many clubs or activities, like freshman Khadijah Hashem, who said "I don't watch TV because I have better things to do, and I am always busy." There were some students who spent most of their after school time at home, doing homework or watching a younger sibling. Then, there were those other students who spent their time in front of a television. Many popular shows consumed the time of students. Friends, a sitcom on NBC that aired for nine years ended. The popular reality show Survivor has had so many seasons that it began an All-Star season, bringing back contestants from previous seasons. American Idol produced its third superstar. With all of these defining moments in TV this year, it was easy to be entertained or distracted by the TV for hours on end. Most of us remembered the character Mike Teevee from Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory. Like Mike, they spent their time watching program after program. "...On a school day, I watch TV from about three in the afternoon until one in the morning," said freshman Kevin Huskisson. So, is there such thing as spending too much time watching TV?

"I get up at 4:00 a.m. to check e-mail and have coffee, then come here to swim; so by 7:30 a.m., I'm raring to go! I take attendance first, usually address the classes by reminding them of what is due today and tomorrow, then either spend the period in front of the class teaching, explaining, or set them to do the assignments at hand. After four morning classes, I need to be away from students for a half hour to eat and talk with adults for a while, so I can gear up for my last two classes of the day. ... At 2:34, I either go home to walk off the stresses of the day or check my e-mail at home...I usually take home 2-3 hours of grading every night and enough to keep me grading most of the day on Saturday and Sunday afternoons. I put the week's grades into the computer. I usually quit grading an hour before bedtime, so I can read for enjoyment because if I grade too long, I dream about papers and students all night long. I need to rest so I can get up and do it all over again."

If there's a demonstration or presentation to give that day, I'll usually call the students to the front of the room for closer observation and questions. Usually by noon, there is only 15 minutes left of my fifth period class. I like my students to work on projects and assignments until about 12:10, leaving the last five minutes for 'cleanup.' Once the 2:34 p.m. school bell rings, that's when the next school day starts for me. After releasing the students, I'll spend time going around the room making sure tables are clean and stools are in order. I'm the Art Club sponsor, so we meet on an average of once a week, and then there are days when students will stay after school to work on projects. I'll usually load or unload the ceramic kiln before or after school...Most days, I'm here at school until 3:30 before I head for home."

(A SEASON IN PERSPECTIVE)

Girls Golf ponders 3-47 season

By Jennifer Barks

With an overall season record of three wins and forty-seven losses, it was difficult for the girls golf team to stay united. Coach Jeff Franklin said that if senior JoAnna Thomson wouldn't have been on the team, the girls may have splintered off into their own directions. "Jo was a senior leader with a young team," said Franklin.

The team consisted of only five girls, making it vital for the girls to show up to as many matches as possible. The girls had to overcome another obstacle; players were involved in multiple sports or extracurricular activities. Freshman Brandi Barrickman was unable to play in ten of the matches due to a conflicting cheerleading schedule. The coaches of both of the activities wanted Barrickman to be able to participate in the two sports, so they had to share her.

Beech Grove was the only match the girls won during the regular season, and to them, it was a huge accomplishment. Although it was a memorable win, it was not what the girls were going to remember most about this season. The most memorable moments are going to be the practices and the bus rides.

The girls also remembered their embarrassing moments. "When I was teeing off, I hit the ball and there was a girl standing far away, and I didn't think it would go that far, and it hit her and she threw her club and started to cry! I felt bad though," said freshman Shelby Wisner.

Soccer teams avoid a drop in season records

By Cory Tanner

Varsity, a team full of star players—a team knowing the way to win and how to intimidate their opponents. With nine wins, eight losses, and one tie, the varsity team was at the top of its game, even making it to sectionals. Although they did not make it beyond sectionals, the team did achieve a big accomplishment this season. A personal achievement for junior James Howard was winning Male Player of the year, which was announced at the Decatur-Mooresville competition.

Junior Matt Evans said, "Our biggest accomplishment was beating Whiteland, which we never thought we could do." Varsity experienced a season of building because of a new coach and a young team. Despite everything the team went through, the fact of the matter was that the team qualified for sectionals.

Although junior varsity did not compete in the sectional, they still worked hard to reach team goals. With a record of four wins, five losses, and one tie, the junior varsity nearly had a winning record. "Our team's biggest accomplishment was playing hard against some of our biggest and hardest opponents," said junior Jordy Smith. Freshman Andy Fortner said, "The hardest thing that we went through this year was having to do conditioning and running."

Varsity and JV were different in their own ways, but they both had their goals to meet and had their different accomplishments. "For next year our varsity team needs to unite and play without arguments," junior Dan Whitman said.

Girls soccer kicks young team into shape

With three losses in a row, the girls Varsity Soccer season began in a slump. Inexperience and youth took a toll on the team's achievement in the beginning, but as the season progressed their record was a roller coaster ride. Ending the season with a record of 7-10, the girls were proud of the improvements they accomplished.

Sophomore Katie Swisher commented, "The hardest thing about the season was not having much experience and a younger team." The team's starting line included five sophomores, two freshman, two juniors, and one senior. Some of the starters had either never played before or had never started on a varsity team. As one of the younger players, sophomore Kayla Smith earned a season high for most goals and quickly adapted to the varsity level. Senior captain Alicia Overton had a solo job to do: take the traditional leadership role as a team leader and mentor for the younger, less experienced players.

"The funniest thing that happened this year was when the most quiet girl on the team, Katie Swisher, smashed a cupcake in Mr. Damron's face," said Overton.

Although the teams' youth did not work to their advantage this season, the players and coach anticipate next season with many returning players and a year of experience under their belt. "The happiest moment of the year was the amount of improvement the girls that had never played on the varsity team made, and how well the girls came together as a team towards the end of the season," said Coach Jason Damron, music department.

Returning players come back with a slam

While making many strides, the boys tennis team had virtually the same team as the previous year. As a team, the players showed a lot of improvement by winning five more matches, and as individuals, the boys beat their own personal records.

Leading the team, captains junior Jon Dowden and senior Devin Love, dominated many of their opponents at number one doubles. Love was also voted to the Boys Tennis Academic Team. As a consistent singles player, sophomore Scott Evans ended the season as number one singles. "The main thing I would change about this year would be to have done better in sectionals. For next year, to improve we should practice more," said Evans.

Freshman Jason Dowden and sophomore Todd Breedlove were key to team victories. The two players finished the season respectively as number two and number three singles. "As a young team, we are still learning how to win and how to close out matches. It is exciting to watch a young team grow and get better from year to year," said Coach Mike Teders.

The team's winning triumph was at the first annual Edgewood Invitational. In a total of six hours and only two matches, the team defeated Bedford-North Lawrence and the host Edgewood to take home first place. "This year's team was very fun to watch and coach. The players should be extremely proud of their improvement over the year," said Coach Mike Teders.

Experience came in the long run

By Jennifer Hietberg

For the girls Cross Country team, it was a building season. In order to compete, five runners are mandatory for a team. Exactly five dedicated runners completed this season. With little experience, the team consisted of four freshman and one senior.

Challenges sprang up throughout the season, including a final record of 0-10. "Even though our record is declared as zero wins and ten losses, the entire team contributed a one hundred percent effort toward practices and meets, demonstrated a positive attitude, and showed excellent improvement," said Coach Jeri Meyerholtz, Spanish.

Although the team did not have a victory, senior Katie Brant achieved several individual victories. "Winning sectionals was my highlight of the season as an individual," Brant said. As a mentor and leader for the four freshmen, she set a prime example as an ambitious runner. "The hardest thing about the season was trying to keep up with Katie Brant as much as possible," said freshman Kelsie Kanouse.

As the season came to an end, each runner improved her personal record and achieved personal goals. For the next season, the two main goals for the team were progress and unity. With four experienced freshman returning, the team and coach look forward to next season and are hopeful for more runners to join the team and to keep improving.

(RUNNING FOR THE TITLE)

Are we there yet?

By Jennifer Barks

Running, running, running and running some more. Yet, cross country is not just about running. It is also about training and teamwork. The team worked together to accomplish a majority of their goals and one of them was becoming Morgan County champions. Not only did the team earn the title of county champs, freshman Derek Farnworth and junior Chris Vaughan earned the title of All-Conference champions. The team averaged fifth place out of nine of their meets.

Consisting of only eight runners, the team was relatively small. Most any other team would consist of at least sixteen runners. "Cross country is a very hard sport with a lot of training," said junior runner Charles Haggee.

"Chris Vaughan helped encourage everyone on the team and helped to push me the entire year. Next year we should definitely be a dominating team because we'll have five strong returning seniors, enabling us to win more than usual," said junior runner Zach Wathen. This will give the team a small advantage since they have already had the opportunity to train together and bond.

With training, teamwork, and leadership, an outstanding season was in perspective. Next year will be great for the team when it comes to senior leadership. The team consisted solely of underclassmen. "Everyone will be coming back next year," said Coach Graves.

Varsity Volleyball spikes two wins above 500

By Jennifer Barks

From "He's mine!" to "It's mine!" the Varsity Volleyball team experienced some difficulties with communication and drama. The season didn't come easily for the girls, even with a 16-14 final record.

Although there were many struggles, the girls persevered. Freshman Kristin Hilligoss was the second all-time leader in digs for the season. A "dig" means an opposing girl spikes the ball and a home team player saves the ball from the opposing team getting a point. Other accomplishments of the season included senior Carley Wright being named The Indianapolis Star's All-West Honorable Mention All Conference and senior Sarah Harper being named Mooresville Times Player of the Year and All-West Honorable Mention All Conference. The overall team accomplishments included winning the Terre Haute North sectional game and beating Franklin, the team's big rival.

The girls had to depend on each other to make sure that everything with the team fell into place. "We had a new coach, our third one in four years, so it was hard to get used to another coaching method," said senior Brittany Love.

Another serious issue was "everyone not getting along at times and all of the gossip and rumors that tore our team apart," said senior Sarah Harper. Team positions became a topic that the team fought over. "Jealousy was a big thing, certain people deserved spots but didn't get them," said Sophomore Megan Couch.

JV and Freshman Volleyball scores spike to victory

The JV volleyball team was made up of seven sophomores and three juniors. The JV team had a record of 5-7, with a total of twelve games. Even though they had more losses than wins, they still worked as a team and knew that the season would end with memories. Junior Michelle Lehr said, "My most memorable moment was the cookout and campfire at Coach Schneider's house. On the hayride, Schneider's boyfriend and Coach Price's husband jumped out of the corn field with chainsaws."

The freshman team had a record of 12-24, meaning they played 12 more games than the JV team. The freshman team had an even 500 on the season. One highlight to the freshman season was a win against the undefeated Brownsburg team. Beating an undefeated team was just a part of what made the season memorable, though. Freshman Priscilla Rozzel said, "My most memorable moment was the big volleyball over-nighter!"

Although they did not make it to any championships or regionals, they still remembered how hard they had to work to get where they were. They had fun times during the seasons and left with a lot of memories. Sophomore Olivia Breedlove said, "The funniest thing that happened this year was when Megan Manion mooned the bus on the way to a tournament."

Varsity Football triumphs

By Cory Tanner

The Varsity Football team had several triumphs. The team was the Sectional Champion, and they advanced to the regional game against the state-winning Roncalli Rebels. The triumphant season ended on a cold, rainy night, just like the cold and rainy night that ended the life of a popular senior player, Steven Terrell.

Terrell's death occurred the week of the Sectional Championship game against Greenwood. The team had its sights set on beating Greenwood after an earlier regular-season, overtime loss to the Woodmen, 30-33. Under the circumstances, the team considered forfeiting or postponing the game against Greenwood, but in the end the team decided that Terrell would have wanted a win over Greenwood, and the team played the scheduled game. "Our biggest accomplishment this year was becoming sectional champs," said junior Chad Flake.

After the accomplishment of Sectional Champs, the team prepared to battle Roncalli on their turf. Neither the team nor the fans could forget the scene that played out at the Homecoming game with a 14-35 loss to Roncalli. "It was embarrassing when we lost our homecoming to Roncalli," said junior Joey White.

The team dealt with the regional loss in a different way than they dealt with the loss of a teammate. The team understood that with every triumph comes a loss, on the field—and they learned that with triumph there can be loss off of the field.

Training to be varsity, teams learn the ropes

Just imagine the sun setting, and the stands are beginning to fill with proud parents and crazy fans. The team is in the locker room saying their pregame prayers, and the announcers are testing their microphones. The band marches the field, the national anthem is sung, and the student tunnel has taken its position on the field. Suddenly, the adrenaline-driven football players smash through the blue and gold banner. This scenario is what the JV and freshmen teams look forward to after their years of training.

The two teams practiced just as hard as the varsity team. They were expected to be successful and to carry on MHS football legacies. They too had rivals and important games. Each player had a favorite game. "Beating Greenwood in the [varsity] sectional championship game after the accident [with Steven]," said sophomore Derek Wilson about a special game.

The freshmen team finished its season with a 6-2 record. The team had a lot of potential with future varsity players—one of which was freshman Nathan Payne. One of his goals for next season is "to go undefeated," said Payne.

From the locker room rituals to the motto of being "chained together," the teams had many traditions and inside jokes. With a bond like this, the players were able to help each other train and reach their highest potential on the field. Keeping their dreams in mind, the players may someday get their chance to run out of the banner onto a field surrounded by screaming fans.

Fall Cheerleaders bond with student body

By Jennifer Barks

An "A" for an awesome season. The fall cheerleading squad pumped up support for the football team, and even if it rained, the squad got the crowd to rise to its feet. With chants of "Pioneer Pride" the cheerleaders noticed more and more participation from the crowd. "The cheerleaders really appreciate interaction of the student body and fans. It's so cool to have a crowd acknowledge them, the squad feels a bond with the fans," said Coach Cathy Bothwell, math.

To most people, cheerleading isn't considered a sport. Just Ask any Pioneer cheerleader and they'll tell you it's a sport. The girls practiced six hours a week for regular season. An exception was homecoming week, when the girls practiced everyday after school.

Senior Rosie McKlary and sophomore Marie Angermeier prepare for the team to rush the field through the new cheerleader's banner.

The squads also assigned spirit days, prepared pep rally events, promoted school spirit, and decorated the school. They also represented our school to the public.

When Operation Football came to the school, it was the cheerleaders that greeted the cameramen. Also at summer camps the girls represented MHS. At camp, the girls received the Outstanding Sportsmanship Award. The squad also went to the State Fair competition with a goal to place in the top ten. This was the first time in years that the girls were able to go to the competition, they missed their goal by seven points but still were able to compete with top squads. Overall, the girls felt that this season was full of laughter, hard work, and rewards.

Team Displays Individual Success

It was a wrestling season with more ups than downs and full of individual triumphs. The MHS varsity wrestling team ended the season with a victorious record of 10-7, including impressive performances by senior Andrew Prather, junior David Shoemaker, and sophomore Alex Warren.

Senior Andrew Prather led the team with an amazing record of 26-4, and his best win was conference champion. Following not too far behind, junior David Shoemaker came out on top with a final record of 21-11. Shoemaker's greatest individual successes were conference champion and semi-state qualifier.

In a league of his own, sophomore Alex Warren portrayed his talent on the floors of Conesco Fieldhouse. As the only team member to qualify for the state tournament, Warren became a teammate that others admired. "My most memorable moment of the year was watching Alex Warren at state," said sophomore Ryan Lybarger.

Wrestling, unlike other sports, relies mainly on individual success and development, which means players did not depend on their fellow teammates, but they depended solely on themselves while on the mat. This involved hard work, dedication, and weight management. "The hardest thing about this season would easily be cutting weight," said sophomore Alex Warren.

Girls dive in with out a splash

With a season of young swimmers the girls swim team needed a build up of effort and support. New swimmers stepped into place and most places were filled, except for a female diver. Although there were no official school records broken, there was still individual success for many of the swimmers. "My big thing was overcoming my fear of starting blocks," said sophomore Amanda Heinsman.

A season of 0-12 for the girls may have led them to give up; instead, the girls strove for team support. "At sectionals when we all pulled together as a team and did a team cheer," said junior Marie Angermeier about a memorable moment of the season. The girls practiced hard throughout the week, and on Saturdays they would get up early in the freezing mornings of winter to come to the school and practice.

The team also consisted of a foreign exchange student, senior Gitte Bornermann from Germany. Bornermann was welcomed on the team both as inspiration and a new face for the season. "Gitte was inspiring, I think, because it's really cool that she's a foreign exchange student from Germany and that she got involved with the swim team. She did her best for the team," said Angermeier. "I just had fun," said senior Gitte Bornermann. Even with no wins, the girls were able to grow individually. Individual strengths will come into play next season when the girls try to overcome their 0-12 record.

Struggle for a victory

By Jennifer Hietberg

With determination and persistence, MHS varsity boys swimming stuck with it through an upsetting season. The final record for the boys was 0-12. As a team they didn't have any victories, but they still achieved individual goals and had fun at the same time.

"The most exciting thing of the year that happened to me this season was when I dropped five seconds off of my one hundred yard freestyle time," said junior Justin Bain. Other swimmers, such as junior Brandon Doulaki had a personal high when he made finals in the mid-state competition and consolations in sectional.

Sophomore Alex Brunk made an impressive stand on the team, being the first MHS swimmer to to make the championship round of the boys sectional one hundred back stroke. He received fourth place, but he also gained respect from his teammates. "The most exciting thing that happened this season was seeing Alex Brunk get his name on the record board five times in a row," said senior Al Pierce.

Although the boys team lost one senior, they can only come together and work harder for next year. Having no victories under their belts as a team, they boys stayed optimistic and hoped for the best next season. "For next season, the one thing I would change about this season is to train more," said junior Brandon Doulaki.

(BECOMING A TEAM)

Team learns from seniors

By Cory Tanner

The Varsity team had a record of 10 wins and 10 losses this season, with a loss in the first round of sectionals to Plainfield. "Winning conference was the most exciting thing this season because that was one of our main goals for the season," said senior Evan Steward. The team agreed that they worked together, but they hoped for an above 500 season and strong team leadership in the future. "If I could change something to make next season more successful, it would be me being more dedicated to practice to be better at playing basketball," said junior Leland Kinnett.

The team did have a new leader in its coach, Mr. Bob Carter, in health. Carter led his team through several close calls, like the loss to Bloomington South in overtime. Several players also commented on the frustration of losing to Greenfield Central, 56-80. After such defeats, the team had to regain its confidence. They did so with hard work.

As the players did their share of hard work, they had fun at the same time. "The funniest thing that happened this year was when I got the cooler full of ice-cold water poured on me in the shower," said junior John Fields.

The team shared the Mid-State Championship when Plainfield lost to Franklin, and both teams tied for fourth in conference play. Although, when the Pioneers faced Plainfield in the first round of sectionals, the season came to an early end.

Teams work in overtime

The JV boys basketball team had a total of 20 games, with eight wins and 12 losses. They had one overtime game against Terre Haute and lost by three points, but they still put up a good fight. "The night we stayed at the school for an overnighter was what made us work better together," said Junior Jeff Martin. The over nighter at the school was for fun, but it helped them get to know each other, which really helped them work as a team and accomplish the tasks that they achieved, even if it was only nine wins.

The freshman team's season was an overall success. They had 12 wins and eight losses, for a total of 20 games. The teamwork that the team showed was what got them as far as they went, and it helped them beat their strongest opponents.

The freshman team had several accomplishments and its biggest one was going to the Mid-State Championship. It brought dissapointment to the team when they lost the championship. "The most embarrassing thing about this season was losing in the Mid-State Championship to Plainfield," said freshman Nathan Payne.

All-Conference Champs, second Sectional Champs in a row, Honorable Mention Star West, Regional Champs the first time since 1985, Hall of Fame Runner-Up, and runners up at Semi-State, the girls basketball season, as a team and individually, was full of accomplishments. Seniors Rachel Kenney and Sarah Harper both made it to the top 40 workout where they got to compete with individuals from other schools for the chance to be a part of the All-Star team. Junior Kelsey Wys made Academic All-Conference, and sophomores Lauren Kenney and Megan Couch both made honorable mention. With so much success this season, the girls had a lot to be proud of.

"I think overall we had a great year, we shocked a lot of people by how far we went in the tournament," said Senior Sarah Harper. Harper was able to play in the game with her younger sister sophomore Heather Harper. The girls played a hard-fought game but fell short to North Central with a score of 44-60 in the Semi-State game. Sisters came in an abundance on the team. "Lauren and I started hanging out more, and I began helping her with basketball skills; AKA free throws," said Kenney talking about her younger sister sophomore Lauren Kenney.

The overall season record was 21-6, and the girls hard work throughout the season showed up until their last game. "Advancing to Semi-State my senior year just goes to show that our girls put a lot of effort and pride into their game," said Senior Brittany Gardner.

(GIRLS SHOOT TO WIN)

To win or not to win?

JV had a record of 13 wins and six losses. Having six losses may not have been what they wanted, but having 13 wins did make the JV team feel like they were close to being at the top of the game.

Many of the girls on the team said the hardest thing to do was leave teammates behind and start all over again. But with a new year ahead of them, the girls stuck together as a team and worked very hard for the wins they got. Working as a team is what made them a good team. It was the reason they done so well.

The JV worked hard and were determined to go very far and that was what made them such a good team this past season.

Opposite of the JV team, the freshman have had only had three wins out of 17 games. With a low number of wins, the freshman team definitely had work to do in order to be more successful. "One thing we need to work on is playing more like a team and practicing a lot harder than we do now," said freshman Chelsy Gott.

The season proved difficult for many players. "The hardest thing for me this year was having to start from the beginning again when we first started the season," said freshman Jessica Walton. With very few wins, the team looked forward to a better season next year.

Team advances runners to regional, pole vaulter to state

By Cory Tanner

The team celebrated its successes with a second place in the Mid-State and first place in the Morgan County Meet.

Senior Evan Steward broke his own record in the pole vault and advanced to state. Junior Zach Wathen advanced to regionals in the two mile, junior Chris Vaughn went to regionals in the 800 meter, and freshman Derek Farnworth went to regionals in the 1600 meter race. Although these were great accomplishments for the team, many team members focused on personal victories.

"One of my major highlights of the season was when I broke 17.0 in hurdles," said freshman Sean Walton. Many of the team members believed that the team was strong, and that they got along extremely well. "We did really good as a team this year, even though we are pretty young," said freshman Sean McFarland.

The team had four seniors. Seniors Marion Spencer and Tyler Jugg competed in the discus, senior Ryan Gregory sprinted, and Steward pole vaulted. The younger runners learned from their leadership and looked forward to future seasons. "As a group, we've all improved greatly preparing us for cross-country," said freshman Bryce Newton.

The team had some accidents that didn't cost them the win but caused a lot of embarrassment. "There was only one bad thing that happened to me this season, and it was when I was going over a hurdles in the 300's, and I tripped and fell," said freshman Sean Walton.

By Jennifer Barks

Sophomore Kayla Smith hurdled her way to the state track meet in the 100 and 300 hurdles. She also broke the 300 hurdle school record.

Although Smith's accomplishments represented a peak performance, many track team members ran their way to personal records. Senior Katie Brant ran in four events at the sectional: the 3200 relay, the 11600 meter, the 800 meter, and the 4 x 4 relay. She placed second in the 800 meter race at sectionals with a time of 2 minutes 32 seconds. Brant set her season PR in the 1600 at the regional meet with a time of 5 minutes and 25 seconds.

"Everyone became serious and focused at the the Mid-State meet. They learned what they could do," said distance Coach Meyerholtz, foreign language. As a team, the break-through meet of the season was the Mid-State where the team placed fourth. After Mid-State, the team was geared up and won the Morgan County Meet held at home.

Just after claiming the Morgan County Meet Championship, the team prepared for sectionals and regionals. "The highlight of the season was having a lot of girls advance to the regionals. Over half of the team advanced," said sophomore Kayla Smith. "We took more girls to regionals than ever before," said junior Sara Walton.

(A FEVERISH PITCH)

Team ends season with three straight wins

The varsity softball team played as one this season. The team's record was 7-17. The most memorable wins were against Plainfield and Bloomington South. Yet, the 12-1 defeat of Danville was a late season highlight.

They were able to stick together under the guidance of the coaches; although, Coach Taber and Coach Murphy stepped down as the team coaches for next season. "My highlight of the season was how well we all got along. I loved the seniors and the coaches, and we will miss them next year," said junior Kelsie Wys.

Several team members commented on a memorable team moment that took place during the Perry Meridian game. Senior Tasha

Lloyd went to catch a pop fly and tripped and fell before she could catch it. Many of the girls on the team said it was "hilarious."

By Cory Tanner

The team wondered about the future and next year with a new coach. A majority of the team had Taber and Murphy as their coaches the entire time they played softball.

The team won only seven games, but they ended the season with three straight wins before sectional. The team stuck together throughout each game and did not quit until it was over. They played Terre Haute North in sectionals and suffered a close loss, 1-2. As the season came to an end, the girls looked forward to a new year with new coaches and a new beginning for the team.

"Dirtbags" advance to Semi-State

By Jennifer Hietberg

No rain delays could stop the MHS varsity baseball team from beating its opponents. With four rainouts, the boys still managed to end the season on top with fourteen wins and ten losses.

Though the season started out rocky, the team brought focus and unity to the game. For the first ten games, the boys won only three games, but then they began their winning streak. "When we started out, we didn't play together very well, but towards the end of the season we united and started winning as a team," said junior Deric Miller.

Victory soon became second nature to the boys. One of their most substantial wins was against the number one team in the state, Center Grove. With a defeat of six to two, the team brought home a new sense of pride and a load of bragging rights. "A major highlight of the season by far was beating Center Grove," said junior Joe White.

The team defeated Martinsville in the sectional match-up, which was a lucky draw. They faced Shelbyville in the regional game at home and won. They went on to play in Evansville in the Semi-State game and lost. Including the baseball team's sectional win, MHS won four sectional titles in sports, which was a record-breaking year.

A team united wins baseball games. As for this season, the boys showed the state and all of high school baseball what they were made of.

Boys end seasons with a grand slam

By Jennifer Hietberg

Two teams playing the same game could not be more different. The MHS JV baseball team came out victorious with a final record of twelve wins and four losses. With more losses than wins, the freshman season ended with a record of four wins and six losses.

Pride and improvement are the best words to describe the JV baseball team. The boys held the title of four years by winning the Mid-State championship once again. They won some crucial games and lost some hard fought battles. "The most dramatic thing that happened this season was going eleven innings against North Central and winning nine to eight," said sophomore Paul Stultz. While not out playing ball, the boys took time to bond and play pranks on each other and the coaches. "At Golden Corral when Coach Neese was in the bathroom, Aaron Loomis moved his car," said sophomore Thad Miller.

Though the freshman boys did not come out on top, they took time to have fun while improving their skills. "Sean hitting Coach Waggle's truck and listening to Waggle's stories was the funniest part of the season," said freshman Abe Wathen.

With a love of the game, the JV and freshman boys enjoyed the seasons for all they came with. Both worked on team unity and received their expected results. "Towards the end of the season the boys gained more confidence in their game, but they need to work on more consistent confidence," said Coach Aaron Thomas, English.

(A SEASON OF REBUILDING)

Teamwork throughout the season

By Jennifer Barks

Even having a season with five senior players, the team's transition to a new coach proved to be difficult. The girls were used to having female coaches, and the new coach was Mike Teders. "In the end, everything was okay and the season was fun," said senior Karla De Juan Romero.

Also on the team was foreign exchange student Gitte Bornemann. Overall, Bornemann played just as well as her other teammates. The girls' success this season wasn't what they wanted it to be. As a team effort, the girls were able to win against Indian Creek and Martinsville. "The effort was there, we just weren't winning," said senior Alicia Overton.

The girls all had their own preference on playing styles. The girls either played doubles, which is with a partner, or they played singles. The three top single players were freshmen Kayli Schafer, Jennifer Saferight and Chelsy Gott. "I preferred to play doubles because it made me feel better about myself even if we lost," said Romero. "I wanted to play doubles with Danielle Strohmeyer, and we kept on losing. It was still the most fun I've ever had being a loser with another person," senior Overton jokingly said.

Overall, the season was more about teamwork and rebuilding than it was about winning. Now with the five seniors graduating, those top three singles players will have to keep the team on top.

Team drives to meet lofty goals

The golf team had a regular season record of seven wins and three losses. The team had four seniors: Landry Bates, Morgan Lollar, Chad Undercoffer, and Drew Kouns. The team had 16 players, which helped the team utilize the top five golfers.

Golf was mainly an individual game where team members competed for the lowest scores and the top spots on the team. The top five spots alternated between senior Landry Bates, senior Mike Amore, senior Morgan Lollar, sophomore Kegahn Hopwood, senior Chad Undercoffer, or sophomore Steven Tutterrow. They usually competed two on two in match play. "We did great in dual matches, but in invitationals we struggled. We also did not play well on Saturdays," said senior

Morgan Lollar.

Sometimes bad things happened, even in golf. Golf team tryouts carried intense pressure for all players. Most players focused on earning a low score, but sometimes there were distractions. "One of the first days of golf tryouts, Morgan Lollar hits his driver and it broke and flew over the road," said junior Kevin Farmer.

Most of the team's problems were minor. "The funniest thing that happened during the season would probably have to be me getting attacked by two geese," said senior Landry Bates. Unfortunately, minor problems can become major in the game of golf.

Squads expand their territories

By Jennifer Hietberg

Once the cold weather hits, the MHS cheerleading squad moves in...to the basketball court that is. The girls had an exciting season cheering on the basketball teams. While encouraging the athletes' achievements, the girls received an honor of their own.

When the season was over, the squad was asked to cheer at the Indiana Pacers game in Conseco Fieldhouse. "We were so excited about cheering at the Pacers game, but nervous at the same time. When our routine was over, we were like, 'Did we actually just do that?' It went by so fast," said sophomore Heather Wilson.

A crowd pleaser was a fun cheer and a creative dance, which the girls spent a lot of time preparing. One factor for a squad is that every person completes the team, no matter how small her part in the routine may be. "We take a lot of time preparing the routine, and if someone would be sick or not show up, we would have to change the entire routine. It was frustrating," said senior Kristen Wright.

Part of the criteria for being a cheerleader is cheering on other's success and that they did. As the girls basketball team continued to advance, the cheerleading squad was always there, pumping them up throughout the tournament. The girls also had the opportunity to cheer at the Semi-State Final Four, which is a first for the squad. "A highlight of the season of course would be cheering on the girls at the Final Four," said head coach, Kathy Bothwell, math.

Sophomore Josh Hoffman puts a plant in a basket to hang in the greenhouse. "The class was a lot of work, but it was fun as long as you didn't mind getting dirty," said Hoffman.

Senior Morgan Wilkins fixes some flowers in the greenhouse. "I think the class was fun, and I learned a lot too," said Wilkins.

Junior Nathan Watson plants seeds that the agriculture class later sold to the public. "Planting flowers was a very great experience," said Watson.

Junior Derek Burton plays with a baby chicken on a free day in class. "Bonding with the baby chicken was a very emotional experience for me," said Burton.

Despite popular belief, agriculture is not a class for hicks and farmers. For some students, agriculture means more than planting flowers in the backyard. It is a career choice that involves the natural beauty of mother nature and the enjoyment that comes with working with something that is alive. "I took the class because I wanted to know about horticulture. Now that I have taken the class I know about different flowers and how to plant them right," said senior Shana Beecher.

The Agriculture class spent a lot of its time in the greenhouse planting and maintaining flowers and plants. "We put a lot of hard work towards planting flowers and when they get big enough we sell them for mothers day and the profit goes to buying flowers for the next year of Ag," said junior Justin Gentry.

All of the hard work that the Agriculture students put into the greenhouse paid off with field trips. "This year we went to White River Gardens and the Flower and Patio Show. The purpose of these field trips was to learn about new types of flowers and different flower arrangements. It was fun and I think everyone learned a lot," said junior Chris DuBois.

• The Power of Body

The body is only as powerful as the mind behind it. Working out, eating healthy, and staying away from drugs are a few important aspects of keeping the body fit. APC, gym, and health gave students the stepping stones to building and maintaining the healthy body that every teenager should have.

Health was a requirement to graduate. It gave teenagers a chance to look at important topics from a different point of view, that way they had the knowledge to make the right decisions about their health.

There were two kinds of gym classes that students took: regular gym, which was required, or APC, which was for the die-hard workout fanatic. Regular gym got students into basic shape while giving them the fun they could use in the middle of their school day.

APC was a lot more work than regular gym but it could help students get in the best shape and develop work ethics that could be used for a long time. "I take APC to get into shape for next years wrestling team," said junior James Bailey.

By taking APC or regular gym classes, students could get class credit and get in shape without taking time out of your busy schedule.

• Careers with Classes

MHS offers a great variety of classes, but certain students have a thirst for knowledge that can only be obtained by spending hours a day studying their career choice. "Not everyone that goes to these courses is going to like them, but it is very helpful if you already know what you are going to do with your life and want to know more about it," said senior Caleb Slocum.

Classes at Ben Davis covered auto, computer, health, culinary, cosmetology, and several other areas. There was even a class called pre-occupations, which let sophomore students come to Ben Davis to try out different classes to see what they would want to do in the future. "We get to try three classes throughout the year to get a feel for what we like, and then we choose what class we take the next year," said sophomore Allen Ashbrook.

The classes at Ben Davis were all hands-on. In the culinary arts class, students ran their own gourmet cafeteria called Le Gallery, which served made-from-scratch entrees to students and staff for a reasonable price. "A big slab of meat would come in and it was our job to trim it, cut it, and cook it. We even made our sauces to put over it," said senior Adam Whitney.

Sophomores James Manza and Will Vick use K'nex for a project in their Pre-Occupations class. "We were building a boat to learn about building trades," said Manza.

Seniors Lindsey Bailey and Caleb Slocum tinker with a computer in their computer repair class. "We were making sure the monitor worked and hooking up CD roms," said Bailey.

Senior Lucinda Davis helps kids cut out drawings in her early childhood education class. "We are either in the daycare at Ben Davis or Robey where we help handicapped kids," said Davis.

• Tools of the Trade

A big building full of mechanic-related materials. Materials most people wouldn't recognize. Materials like a carburetor, a lug nut, or a fuel pump.

For the students of Auto Mechanics, these materials were a part of class everyday.

One way to avoid the drudgery of classroom work was to enroll in classes like Auto or Construction Processes, where students used their hands more often than their pencils.

"It will keep me from spending lots of money by paying someone else to fix my car," said senior David Pate.

A major part of these hands-on classes involved learning to use the tools of the trade. For Construction Processes, taught by Mr. Kelly Maxfield, students learned to use the tools involved in constructing buildings and other structures.

"I love to see what happens to these kids when they learn something new and how to use tools and the equipment. It's just interesting to see a student learn how to use a piece of equipment and how they apply that piece of equipment," said Maxfield.

Combine these classes with the skills they teach, and students get the best of both worlds. "Knowledge learned like that lasts a lifetime," said Maxfield.

"Replacement for displacement," said senior Andrew Zipoff as he works on his car.

Senior David Pate concentrates as he works on a car's brakes.

"After high school, I plan on learning how to be a sheet metal fabricator, but I'm not going to go to school to learn how," said junior Jason Bryant.

Corey Baize

Senior Stacy Powell works on her articles in her business and personal law class. "I'm taking the class to learn the law for when I become a homicide detective," said Powell.

• Own Your Own

It seems like the popular thing to do these days is to work in a profession and own it too. Lawyers own law firms, chefs own restaurants, singers own record companies. This may be a way of sinking your hand deeper into the cookie jar or a true passion for what you do. One thing is certain, the art of business is escalating to new heights and shows no signs of withdrawing for a long time to come.

Business classes at MHS give students the head start they need to enter the hectic world of business. Keyboarding classes give students the basic computer skills that everyone needs, no matter what the career.

"I can type a lot faster now than I could before, so I would recommend the class to everyone," said sophomore Wyatt Allegree. If students still felt like they needed additional skills with computers, they could take the computer applications class to learn more about print sheets, application problems, and how to manage money.

There were many business classes that students took that started as an introduction to business and up. "We take a lot of notes and tests, and learn how to be entrepreneurs and run a business," said junior Justin Gentry.

Megan Shimonek

Junior Candice Medlen delves deep into her accounting assignment. "I learn a lot about the elements of running a business, which will help me later in life," said Medlen.

Junior Sarah Beck solves problems with her calculator in her accounting class. "The class has given me insight to my future job as an accountant," said Beck.

• Teaching to Learn

One program that is offered at MHS, is Cadet Teaching. It was offered to seniors and was a learning experience for both the students and the cadet teachers.

Mrs. Tricia Ferguson, social studies, sponsored the Cadet Teaching program. "Teachers are excited to have cadet teachers and they are lucky to have an aid," said Ferguson.

While the cadet teachers taught the kids, the kids also taught them. They all learned about things beside school. During the year, senior Evan Steward taught one child how to tie his shoes.

"I really like interacting with the children. I like learning about the way different kids learn," said Senior Audrey Farrand.

The cadet teachers also had a chance to learn about the reality of teaching children. They had a connection with the kids like an adult would. "The kids are a lot of fun. When the substitute teachers are there, the kids talk a lot and I have to quiet them down," said Senior Holly Murphy.

Whether it was a high school student or an elementary student, the Cadet Teaching program was a learning experience. It allowed both students and teachers to learn.

Senior Sara Bradley helps a student with an art project. Bradley said, "I enjoyed being around the kids and learning from them."

Senior Evan Steward quizzes students at Northwood. "The kids brighten up the end of the day," said Steward.

"I've really enjoyed getting to know the kids," said Senior Allison Lundy.

Megan Shimonek

Megan Shimonek

Megan Shimonek

"After high school, I will be attending International Business College and major in Graphic Design, which is the basics of designing a page and layout. Then I want to be a major magazine designer," said senior Cassie Brown.

"Publications and broadcast are fun because every day offers a new challenge. The staff is able to reward groups and individuals and help make important changes that improve the school environment," said Mrs. Diana Hadley.

Junior Cory Tanner and seniors Jennifer Barks and Trista Cole crop pictures for their yearbook pages. "I enjoyed bonding with the staff," said Barks.

• Keys to Communication

Some schools don't have newspapers. Some schools don't have yearbooks. Some schools don't even have broadcast programs to relay important daily announcements.

So how did MHS get to the point where it had a journalism program with newspaper, yearbook, and broadcast staffs? Strong leadership.

For 33 years, the leader of the journalism department was Mrs. Diana Hadley. This strong leadership attracted many students to the Pulse, Wagon Trails, or AMMHS staffs.

Students were attracted to the programs for several reasons. Senior Alicia Overton, a member of the AMMHS staff said, "It gives me the freedom to show my creativity."

Being on staff was a way for them to do what they loved to do. "I like having the chance to do what I do best," said junior Michelle Lehr.

Lehr wasn't the only person who found a love for journalism. Hadley retired from the department to take a position in the Indiana High School Press Association at Franklin College.

"I love journalism because it is something new every day. The world is interesting, and journalism reports those interesting things," said Hadley.

• To Express ... Words

By: Megan Shimonek

Everyone uses words in just about everything they do.

"Words are the core of human existence; we use them not only to communicate and enlighten but also to bring joy," said Mrs. Ann Phillips, chairman of the English department.

While words did bring joy and were a source of entertainment, they had potential to be harmful as well.

"People may say, 'sticks and stones may break my bones, but words will never hurt me.' I disagree. I think that people's actions and words are equal, which makes them both very powerful," said Mrs. Candice Due, English teacher.

Students used words everyday in the hallways to communicate messages about friends, classes, and plans for the day.

"Words are our main way to communicate ideas," said English teacher Mr. Joel Beebe.

Words could also explain different people. Some people wrote stories about one another, and even authors put a piece of themselves in everything they write.

"The words we use are something other people have to make assumptions about us," said Mr. Wheeler, first-year English teacher.

Without words, where would we be?

"I am going into architectural and interior design in college. I took this class because it deals with some of the aspects of my future career," said senior Courtney Chenoweth.

"I am going to be a wedding planner. This class has helped me to understand fabrics and to create a design for anyone based on color or other elements of design," said senior Stephanie White.

Freshman Lisa Clayton looks through wallpaper samples. "We were making sample boards for our blueprints. It was all part of our final project," said Clayton.

Freshman Khadijah Hashem spreads frosting over a cake her group made. "The cake was delicious. I wish I had more," said Hashem.

Sophomore Rachel Gentry, senior Scott Zigler, and junior Tasha Clampitt measure flour. "This class is great. Who would think you could get credit for eating," said Zigler.

Junior Missy Clements works hard on her blueprints. "We learned how to measure out and draw floor plans," said Clements.

• Perfection Tastes Good

Cooking, designing houses, and developing relationships, in classes that are not required, but taken seriously, can help in the future.

In the nutrition and wellness classes, students not only learned the basics about cooking, they learned how to maintain a nutritional diet. Their main focus, though, was to make food that not only looked good, but also tasted good. "It's a fun class except none of our food turned out," said freshman Megan Moore.

Cooking was an important skill for future independence, but some students were already proficient at this skill. "Finally a class that I can get an A in," said senior Tommy Johnson.

Often there was pressure to create a perfect floor plan or cake. "You have to work really hard for an A," said junior Ashley Abney.

Other courses offered in the Home Economics department included Child Development, Interpersonal Relations, Nutrition, Advanced Nutrition, Housing, and ICE. Sophomore Nutrition student Tiffany Bigham had some words of advice for future students. "Don't pick the flowers on the field trip," said Bigham.

Senior Sarah Harper performed in the Spanish IV play. "I had a lot of fun rehearsing and performing," said Harper.

Megan Shimonek

Freshman Jessica Clark studies hard in her French class. "It's a lot more fun than I thought it would be," said Clark.

• Learning to Speak

Foreign language is something that everybody at MHS experiences when trying to qualify for CORE 40 and Academic Honors diplomas.

For some people, it was a difficult subject. "Sometimes Spanish is frustrating because it is re-learning how to talk," said sophomore Angie Woodrum.

However, some people enjoyed taking other language classes because they felt it would benefit them. "I believe our country is becoming more and more diverse, so I think Spanish will help me later in life," said junior Leland Kinnett.

English was a foreign language for some students that attended MHS. The foreign exchange students had to learn English in order to attend. Senior Paty Barousse said, "It is difficult to learn all the slang terms, and I still don't understand them sometimes."

Foreign language classes gave people the chance to experience new things. The Spanish classes performed a play, students took a trip to Europe in the summer, and foreign exchange students got to experience MHS.

• Repeat the Process

Does history repeat itself? Year after year, students repeat the process of learning about history and the social sciences.

The social studies department offered a variety of classes including U.S. History, Geography, Government, Economics, Psychology, Sociology, and Law.

"U.S. History will help me later in life by teaching me the history of our country, and it will teach me why things work the way they do," said junior Heather Harris.

Along with U.S. History, many students took other social studies courses, including Law Education. For that course, students created a mock trial in which class members tried a case with each person taking a role in the trial. Law Education was an elective course.

Most students took history as a required course. "It's probably a requirement because history is always repeating itself, and it helps us to make the right decisions about picking our future leaders," said junior Cassie Jurey.

Senior Zach Morris argues his case in the mock trials. "The trials are of the sort that are hard to defend or prosecute," said Morris.

Senior Jasmine Khosravi presents her country to her geography class. "I had fun being one of the only seniors in class, and I enjoyed being made fun of by the freshmen," said Khosravi.

Freshman Mara Fisher presents her geography project. "I chose Australia because I went there for the 'People to People' student ambassador program and I thought it was a wonderful place," said Fisher.

Counting the Ways

Math is a subject with which many people struggle. Sometimes learning all the equations and all the rules is just too much for some people to handle. On the other hand, math is an easy subject for some people.

For those people, life was a little bit easier. For example, when they applied for or worked at jobs that required math skills, they were successful. Many jobs required some sort of knowledge of math. "It will be easier for me to get into a good career if I learn math now," said junior Matt Smith.

Whether math was easy or hard for a person, math was a priority in every high school in Indiana. Even if someone was not in a profession that dealt with math, everyone dealt with taxes, bank accounts, and credit cards. "All of those areas require some basic math," said senior Liz Lester.

Other areas that required specific math skills were science and engineering. "I want to be an engineer and math is the main part of engineering," said junior Robert Strieb.

Since all freshman had to take Algebra, the math program was sure to excel at MHS by getting students into advanced programs quicker.

Megan Shimonek

Sophomore Dustin Spurlock studies hard in Mr. Neal's class. "Algebra is pretty easy for me," said Spurlock.

Nicole Didot

"Building the kite was the easy part but flying it was hard," said sophomore Erica Fugate.

• Harmonious Hearts

Although there are a total of seven choirs at MHS and hundreds of choir members, each choir member is unique.

So, why do students enjoy being a part of such a huge program that involves performances at Choirs Under Construction, Wagon Trails Revue, and Spring Spectacular?

"Choir is fun because a lot of my friends are in it, so we get to hang out at all of the performances," said sophomore Amber O'Dell.

Some choirs had more time to spend before performances because they were the "show choirs." Spotlighters, Finesse, Millenium, and Madrigals were the show choirs. They put in extra time practicing for competitions where some choirs competed as a group and some choir members competed individually. Spotlighters and Finesse went to Tornoto, Canaada where they performed at a high school.

"I loved hanging out with friends and seeing all the cool things at Niagra Falls," said sophomore Katie Swisher.

Every chior at MHS took a lot of pride in their performances. The love of music and lasting friendships created the tight bond among choir members.

Genisis ends its show after singing "Old Time Rock n' Roll" at the Spring Spectacular performance.

Sophomore Kelsey Barnett performs "Give Me Wings" at the Spotlighter Invitational. "I had a lot of fun at the performances," said Barnett.

Karla De Juan Romero

"I am hoping to go to ISU and major in early elementary education. I would like to study music on the side because not only do I enjoy it, but it also helps to stimulate the kids," said junior April Shover.

"I am going to attend IUPUI my first year of college, and then I will finish my schooling at IU. I will be studying music production and teaching at IU," said senior Justin Eaker.

Megan Shimonek

"Choir was a lot of fun this year, and I'm sure I will have more fun in the future," said freshman Lara Nelson, a member of Sensations.

• Constant Experimentation

By Corey Baize

When most people think about science, they think about doing labs and experimenting with the elements. The MHS science classes do plenty of both, along with other fun activities to make the school day go by faster.

Physics was one example of learning through experimentation. Often times, physics students would be seen roaming the hallways measuring distances and calculating numbers.

Then there were projects such as the spaghetti bridges and boat races that were the talk of the entire school. For the spaghetti bridge project, students had to build a bridge made only from uncooked spaghetti and then see how much weight it could withhold before snapping. "I thought it was a fun project," said junior Valerie Young.

In chemistry, students devoted a lot of time to labs. They used all of their senses and some laboratory equipment to conduct their experiments, and then the next day they did a lab report with every detail included in it. "The labs were a lot of fun, but I hated the reports that followed," said junior April Kelly.

Science classes offer fun and variety to the school day, and the labs allowed students to experiment with new ways of learning.

Corey Baize

Juniors Jacob Wright and Jacqueline Blessing time how fast they walk a meter for a physics project. "It's a challenging class that has a lot of neat projects," said Blessing.

Corey Baize

"I want to be a genetic engineer because my family has a history of medical problems, and I want to help out my future kids. I also think it would be fun to play God," said sophomore Craig Jeffrey.

"I want to be a pilot because there are not many woman pilots out there and I like to be different, plus I think it would be fun to fly," said junior Mandy Hudgins.

• The Years We Share

Without teachers, we would still be the mindless mush that we were in preschool. Teachers helped us to not only grow in knowledge, but in character also, and although we owe so much to them, we won't realize it for a long time to come.

Teachers dedicated their lives to stuffing vast amounts of knowledge into our brains, and we had several teachers who decided that it was time to move on. These teachers included Mrs. Hadley, Mr. Ash, Mrs. Landwerlen, Mr. Grover, Mrs. Grow, Mrs. Aliff, Mrs. Colbert, Miss Rogers, and Miss Roberts.

Student teachers invaded the school this year as well. Even though they were not much older than us and didn't have their teaching methods perfected, they still gained our respect and attention because student teaching was the only way they would improve. "Having a student teacher was fun, but it was hard sometimes when you are used to doing things a certain way," said junior Megan Shimonek.

Together, teachers and students form a symbiotic relationship. They give us knowledge, and in return, we give them papers to grade, headaches, and sometimes some fun memories of the year.

"After retirement, I plan on doing whatever I want whenever I want to do it," said Mr. Joe Ash, retired business teacher.

• Drawing the Way

Art is a very important part of life for some people. Everyone has a different view of what art is.

MHS offered a few different types of art classes. First, a student had to take the basic arts class. After that, there was drawing and painting. There was also a fiber arts class that taught students how to do things such as macrame, making rugs, weaving, and stitching. Ceramics was another class that showed different techniques like pinch, coil, and wheel throwing.

A lot of students enjoyed art because it was a way to escape. Sophomore Elizabeth Bodle said, "It is a completely different way of looking at the world."

It was not only enjoyable to students, but to the teachers as well. Mr. Brinton Farrand was one of those teachers. "In this pessimistic linear thinking world, a wholistic right brain optimist is a breath of fresh air away. All the rest of the classes in this school teach the left side of the brain, and I am the only one that teaches the right side," said Farrand.

So, no matter who the person is, everyone appreciates art in their own way. "Half a brain is good, but why not have the whole brain?" said Farrand.

Sophomore Elizabeth Bodle paints. Bodle said, "It is like looking at the world in a new way."

"I am trying to make my box pretty," said senior Patty Barousse as she decorated her box for ceramics class.

Senior Courtney Chenoweth perfects her pizza in ceramics. "I had fun making it," said Chenoweth.

Imagine being selected out of 1,300 students to uphold the definition of leadership and to represent MHS at regional conferences with other area high schools. To be selected as member of TSLA, a student must achieve high grades and show great leadership in the classroom. A teacher must recognize this and nominate the student. Not only does a student have to be book smart to be in this program but also be willing to participate in certain physical activities.

TSLA stood for Teen

Leading the Way

Student Leadership Academy.

These selected students also worked on an original project and were granted money. By winning, special education students were given the opportunity to attend prom. Not only was this a leadership organization but a test of each member's character.

"We each wrote a goal on a board and broke it with our hand. Breaking it symbolized conquering our fears and doubts about achieving our goal," said sophomore Heather Wilson. In the end, most of the members fought their fears, even if they included heights or shyness with new people.

Imaging the president of the United States entering an election at the last minute and doing so without considering the responsibility of being voted president. Is it possible that the leader of a nation could do this? No. What about the leader of the student body? Maybe.

Student Council consisted of students that were elected by the student body of MHS. For every class, there was a president, vice president, treasurer, and a secretary. Those were the top four positions in the student government. The student body also elected a student body president and vice president.

Seniors Ben Thomas and Ryan Gregory ran a serious campaign and were the 2003-2004 student body president and vice president. Much of the student body enjoyed Thomas and Gregory's interesting, and often times hilarious antics. Many of the students found it to be refreshing from the usual, stressful school day. Junior Courtney Humes said, "I find them very entertaining. It's funny when they sit on the senior benches and Ben plays the guitar and Ryan sings along."

Power Antics

Senior Allison Stultz agreed. "Ben and Ryan crack everyone up at all the meetings," said Stultz. Sophomore Marie Angermeier said, "My funniest moment for me was when we got our t-shirts back, and we realized Mooresville was spelled wrong. Most of us didn't even notice."

The most important thing for a majority of the members was being able to try to improve the school. Student Council planned many of the events at school. They put a great effort into school events, such as Homecoming and dances. For a majority of the members it was really stressful when they forgot their meetings. "It's hard to remember sometimes," said sophomore Tasha Clampitt. "The most stressful thing for me has not being able to get things accomplished. It takes so much just to change one little thing," said Angermeier.

With all the drama and stress of being on Wagon Trails yearbook staff, it is surprising that a whole book can be put together in one school year. Somehow, through procrastination and hard work, it managed to get done.

Wagon Trails Revue, a mixture of a talent show, choir and band performances, and humorous yearbook skits, was a tradition of many years. The staff worked at producing the two-night show in November. Plus, they went to a countless number of sports games tournaments for photos. They made it to nearly every classroom trying to capture students in their everyday environment. The student body assumed that the staff threw together a bunch of pictures and words and added a little design, and that made a page. Yet, it was a lot harder when pictures could not be found, surveys were not returned, and computers shut down.

All together the sixteen staff members managed to put together yet another Wagon Trails yearbook. Every year, the staff was unique in its own way, and this one proved to be no different.

Sophomores Cody Whitley, Robbie Petty, Karah Jackson and Canie Dorsett promote Prom Promise before Prom on May 8.

UNITY, one of the many clubs at MHS, focuses not only on prevention, but also on understanding what really goes on and how to change it. Understanding Needs In Today's Youth, commonly referred to as UNITY, has been a part of MHS for many years. They were involved in numerous school activities including the mock car crash. UNITY members participated in helping the needy families locally, helping kids at orphanages, and even helping Mooresville's own students.

Making a

To make a difference was very important to the members. That was the main reason most people joined. "I believed UNITY could make a difference and I'm the type of person who likes to do that. It seemed like a perfect fit," said junior Nick Oschman. With many prevention clubs available to students, UNITY just seemed to be a good choice for some. Senior Jessie Manges explained, "I was originally a member of just SADD, then I realized that UNITY was just a step further. I have been a member for now two years."

Much of the service they provided was community service. UNITY members did it every year in abundance. Junior Jacqueline Blessing said, "My group provided Christmas gifts for two little boys in our community over the holiday." Helping others was just a normal part of being in the club to many. UNITY tried to help persuade young teens to stay away from drugs. They tried to show that kids can have a good time without doing something dumb.

Some of the best times for members were the Christmas gift giving and the UNITY training camp. Oschman said, "I went to ITI in Vincennes for a week long camp on leadership. It was rough mentally, but I had some of my best times down there." Through hours of community service and dedication, UNITY members helped numerous people in the community and continued to do so.

Sophomore Courtney Demeter and junior Jaqueline Blessing participate in a game of jeopardy at a PUSH school.

Do you remember sitting in class when you were in elementary school, admiring the older, but cool, high school students teaching you the significance of staying drug free? Did you ever imagine being their age and taking on the job of teaching kids about the dangers of drugs?

This is exactly the responsibility that many student took on when they became members of the group PUSH. PUSH stood for Prevention Using Student Help. This was a group of selected drug-free students to travel to all of the elementary schools. Their responsibility was to inform younger students about the effects of drugs. While educating the younger students, they organized games and other fun, original activities. Some groups made posters with visual pictures that showed the younger classes what they could face as they get older.

life, and I think I can help someone by this," said sophomore Ryan Lybarger.

"I like visiting with the kids, and I know that I felt very uninformed about real-life stuff like this when I was in school at those ages. I didn't want any kids to miss out," said sophomore Heather Wilson.

No matter what the reason for joining, many members felt that their jobs were important for several reasons.

Often, the students would ask more questions about high school life than about drugs. Although, the questions about drugs were often comical.

"A little second grader asked if eating cigarettes was as bad as smoking them," said Lybarger.

Yet, the issue of drug abuse was not comical, and PUSH members took the job seriously. "Little kids look up to high schoolers, and you make an impact on their lives," said junior Megan Shimonek.

MHS's students who are anything but mediocre make up the five academic teams. The teams were math, Mrs. Bothwell, science, Mrs. Zook, fine arts, Mr. Dameron, social studies, Mr. Adams, and English, Mrs. Gilly. Mrs. Ferguson was the head coordinator for all the teams. These students spent countless hours studying and reviewing for their many competitions. On average, the teams met about once a week.

This year was anything but a piece of cake for the majority of the members and sponsors. Mrs. Kim Zook, who was the Science Team sponsor, explained the chaos. "This year was poorly organized by the state. There were no sample questions provided, so that made it harder. The kids worked harder, but received less results. Overall, this year was very frustrating. Conflicting schedules and working around everyone's practices was hard," said Zook.

There was a total of three meets this year, and overall the teams did fairly well. The English Academic Team, sponsored by Mrs. Gilly, won second place at Mid-State. The Math Academic Team won two first place trophies. The first was at Greenwood Invitational and the second was at the Mid-State Conference. The team placed twenty-seventh in the state. Mrs. Kathy Bothwell was the Math Academic Team's sponsor and was for the last six years. One of the interesting things that happened, unlike the past years, the Math Team missed three questions at every meet.

Senior Katy Sears said, "My favorite times were when we met at Starbuck's. That was always fun." Sears was in the English Academic Team. Although none of the sponsors were on an academic team in high school, many of the students were involved in one for more than a year.

These 40 golden angels sang their hearts out during each and every performance and made a few friends along the way.

Finesse consisted of sophomore, junior, and senior girls who were required to tryout for the choir. Not only did the choir meet during class everyday, but they met twice a week for two hours. The year started out with the annual performance at Wagon Trails Revue. During the competition season, they traveled to various places including

Singing

Ohio, Illinois, and areas of Indiana.

For Finesse, it wasn't just about traveling and performing. It was about working hard and achieving goals. "I think choir is a place to perform and a goal to achieve. We are all striving for the same things, so we end up achieving things as a group," said junior Brooke Burns.

Not only did the members work and perform as a choir, but they made friends. The sleep-over that took place helped bring the girls together, which included games and activities that helped the members get to know each other a little better.

Out

Finesse also traveled out of the country to Toronto, Canada to perform along with the Spotlighters and Madrigals.

Not all aspects of Finesse were just about singing and dancing.

Never giving up and improving played a key role in the choir. "You work hard, you fall, you work harder, you trip, and then you work so hard that you become a performer.

A true life performer is achieving one more step in true life, whether you're in choir or not," said Burns. "Everybody put their heart into it and everyone had fun and that's what made us more successful," said senior Heather Huffman.

Being the only all-girls show choir in MHS, Finesse worked hard to uphold their reputation. Throughout the year, the choir bonded on and off of the stage.

Junior Austin Roberts, auditorium crew director, communicates to his crew backstage.

Auditorium crew, while working behind the scenes, does a lot that no one knows about. Directed by Michelle Shea, with help by Mr. Scott Johnson, they make an auditorium performance function. Many of the performances at MHS in the William R. Curry Center wouldn't run smoothly without them.

The crew members also helped with moving heavy equipment around in order to ease the confusion and chaos. They helped people to their seats during big performances, such as

Making

Spring Spectacular and Wagon Trails Revue. While some loved that job, most wished they didn't have to do the hard work. Sophomore Alicia Skirvin was one who enjoyed it. "It's fun when you help usher people to their seats," said Skirvin. Senior Kyle Box along with junior Allison Brown both admitted that was one of the worst experiences of the job.

Many of the crew members had a mutual response when asked their favorite experience. "Building the Haunted Auditorium," said junior Christie Seidl. Brown agreed that this was a favorite activity.

Senior Jamie Parvis said her most memorable thing this year was her party. "They threw a surprise party for me on my birthday because we had to work at a performance that night," said Parvis. Of course not everyone got a party, but they still had their fun. Hanging out with their friends and fellow crew members was definitely an added bonus.

Why join a club with so many responsibilities and stresses? There were many added perks, of course. "The best perk is getting a free yearbook and being able to work at Wagon Trails Revue," said Box.

"My favorite performance to work at is the Spring Play. It is a great bonding experience," said Brown. Another favorite of hers was the Haunted Auditorium. "I liked painting the Jack in the Box; I received a lot of compliments," she said.

Percussion, Color Guard, and Marching Band gather together on the football field for a half-time performance.

Color Guard continued to stay on top, with a number-one ranking going into the semi-state competition held at MHS. They worked countless hours to uphold a tradition of excellence. Although it seemed easy to some people, most people didn't see the hard work, many hours, and dedicated devotion to their performances.

The Kansas City Regional trip was one of the most memorable times for many of the Color Guard members. "My favorite part of the trip was that we became a lot closer that weekend. Before we left, we were always fighting and that affected our show and performance," said sophomore Chelsea Terry. Sophomore Erica Fugate agrees, "We really bonded on the way to Kansas City. It helped us become 'one'."

With all these girls, there was bound to be some interesting moments. Sophomore Rachel McKinney reminisces, "One time at band camp... We had races to see how much food we cram into our mouth at once. It was hilarious."

McKinney probably didn't think her embarrassing moment was that funny. Terry recalls, "It was funny when Rachel fell three times during our preliminaries."

There were a few traditions the members upheld. One of the most important traditions included praying before their performances.

It was not always fun and games. "This year has been the most stressful for me because of the tragedy and increased homework load," said Ashley Miller. "My worst moment was at the Woodlan competition. It was probably the worst I've done in all my three years of Color Guard," said junior Ashley Harpe.

Winter Color Guard often practiced three hours a day, twice a week to improve their performance. The performance featured patriotic music, colors, and words. The girls performed on the image of an America flag. Even other school's spectators commented on the power of the Color Guard's performance.

For some reason, two days out of school, four days in sunny California, and a plane ride across the United States sounds like fun to members of the band and color guard.

Even if the purpose of the trip was to take part in an intense national competition, most members agreed that the most fun experience of the band season was the trip to San Diego, CA, April 16-18. "The trip to San Diego was my favorite part about this year," said sophomore Chris

Schilling.

The purpose of the trip was to perform, along with five other bands, and have professional musicians judge the performances. The band earned a Silver Rating from the San Diego judges.

These competitions kept band members excited about the work. "My favorite part was working so hard, having fun, and watching our hard work pay off with all the awards," said junior Andrea True.

With the United State's population continuing to become more diverse, the need to be fluent in a foreign language is becoming a necessity. There are currently two foreign language clubs at MHS, Spanish and French. The German club was discontinued last year after the class was removed the year before.

Both the French and Spanish clubs were very active. They participated in many activities both in and out of school. The Spanish Club went to El Rodeo, a restaurant in Mooresville, and both of the clubs went to Zydeco's early second semester.

Junior Morgan

Flavor Abroad

Petty, along with a few other selected juniors, were offered the chance to take a trip this summer to Mexico. The trip was seven weeks long. Petty went with the IU Honors Program in foreign languages. It was a study intensive program geared to help students who were planning on pursuing a career in a foreign language. Petty said, "I want to major in International Relations and Spanish, so I can hopefully work in International Business."

Jessie Manges, a four-year French Club member, also planned on using a foreign language in her career. She was accepted to the Indiana University and chose Journalism as her major.

With the need for knowing a foreign language growing, the more students involved with a foreign language class or club has also increased. Both languages were very popular and remained the two romantic languages in the world. Whatever the reason, there was something in a language that made it so interesting.

Senior Marion Spencer is up to bat with sophomore Tyler Jugg pitching at an FCA meeting in February.

About 25 student athletes gathered once a month at Coach Steve Hilligoss's house to play games and discuss their faith.

One of the popular activities was whiffle ball. Junior Leland Kinnett agreed, "Winning the FCA Whiffle Ball Championship last year was one of my most memorable moments of FCA." This tournament was a tradition. Many of the FCA members participated.

The reasons that most members were in FCA were very similar. People such as sophomore Courtney Demeter discovered the benefits of being in FCA. She was a member for a year. "The best thing that happened to me during FCA this year was I got closer to my friends and God," said Demeter. Sophomore Sarah White commented that she just liked learning about God with her friends and also having the chance to build her spiritual bond with God. She was in FCA for four years.

Through the bad times, they still confided in one another for support.

Faith

Demeter's worst experience was quite a bit different. "When my team was up to bat, Adam let go of the bat and hit me in the mouth. We laughed about it, although my lip got a little swollen," said Demeter.

FCA members were involved in nearly every athletic activity. They ranged from football, track, baseball, soccer to basketball.

FCA was about sharing Christian faith with fellow friends and students while strengthening the bond with God. Overall, FCA was an organization where members developed friendships, shared faith, ate good food, and played fun games. With a blend unique members, athletes learned to play their best through anything. "My most memorable moment was learning that when you are playing a sport, you should play it for the Lord," said Demeter.

Freshman Sheila Hacker allows the elementary students to interact with a duck at the FFA petting zoo.

FFA, Future Farmers of America, was an extracurricular activity which anyone can join just as long as the prerequisite agricultural classes are taken.

Most of the club consisted of traveling around to different competitions. Club members showed animals such as horses, sheep, pigs and other farm animals. Not only were animals shown, there were other items such as soil, insects, and tree leaves presented in competition. There was also an academic portion of the contests that included essays, scholarship offers, and judging for job interviews.

Not only were the members judged, but they did some judging themselves. Junior Morgan Breedlove judged at a convention where she placed thirteenth out of 54 in her class. Morgan was also the president of FFA. "The most difficult part was upholding the responsibility and setting a good example. This includes making sure I didn't mess up," said Breedlove.

Nicole Didot

In the community, FFA assisted in a range of activities, which included elementary schools in their "All Around

Our Town" fair, which compares to MHS's Career Day. Many members worked in booths representing FFA. They also hosted a petting zoo for Northwood Elementary students, which resulted in 200 students attending.

for Success

FFA also traveled to Louisville, Kentucky where they attended a national convention. This convention consisted of 45,000 FFA members across the United States. While visiting, they heard guest speakers talk about the importance of FFA. They also got to stop at the Kentucky Derby track and other sites.

FFA will continue to travel to conventions, but they won't be traveling in 2006 when the national convention is held in Indianapolis. The FFA national headquarters is located in downtown Indianapolis.

To our dearest princesses, what a joy it has been to have seen both of you become young women. May the future and your hard work bring you as much happiness as you have brought us.
Love, Mom, Dad, and Travis

Jessi Beard

What can we say? We cannot believe these 18 years have gone by so quickly. We are very proud of you in all your accomplishments. We know you will continue to strive for the best. Is this one reason you don't wear pink dresses? We love you very much!
Love, Dad, Mom, and Jayme

Randy Vangundy

My, how the years have flown by. We are all proud of you. As you receive your diploma, keep in mind, "you made it." Anything you attempt in life, you can conquer.
Love, Mom, Dad, Rob, Selinna, Austin, and Alan

Nicole Richart

Believe in yourself and your dreams will take you beyond your deepest thoughts.
We love you, Mom and Danny

Morgan Lollar

To the kid that was less than perfect in swimming but never sank to temptation. Believe in yourself and remember that nothing is impossible with God. We are truly blessed to have you as our son.
Love always, Mom and Dad

Landry Bates

Landry: Congratulations! May your future bring joy to your life as much as you have brought joy to ours.
Love, Mom and Dad

Melissa Wilson

Dear Missa, Our baby girl. We are so proud of you. Your memmie is smiling now. The last of six to graduate, way to go.
Love, Mom, Dad, Crystal, and Logan

Natasha Goodman

You were a tiny golden heart beat all brand new, when you were first born. Your Dad and I promised to love you forever. We are so proud of you. Love always, Dad, Mom, and Shenna

Holly Murphy

We are so proud of you and all of your accomplishments. You have become such a beautiful young lady. We wish you the best playing softball for Belmont! Always be true to yourself and trust in the Lord. We love you, Mom, Dad & Corbin

Rosie McKinney

Rosie, FRENCH TOAST!!! Mom and Dean, Chris, Caleb, April, Malachi, and Paytie

Trista Cole

Words cannot describe how proud we are of you. You've grown up so fast. We love you and will always be there for you. Love Now and Forever, Dad, Mom, and Erin

Maranda McGuire

Maranda, As you leave childhood behind and go out into the world. May God's light always shine on you. May his love surround you and his angels protect you. Love, Grammie

Walt Kirkling

Your high school run is done. Now let's see you fly through life! Wishing you smooth landings! Love, Dad, Mom and Kelly

Jacob Roth

You are a great son and brother and will always be our baby. We were very proud in the manner that you handled yourself after losing two of your dearest friends and we respect the man you're becoming. May all your dreams come true!

Jamie Elrod

Jamie aka: Katt. You have come a long way being your last year of school. But you have also become a very smart young lady. We hope all your dreams and wishes come true.

We love you, Dad, Mom, and Jason

Nicole Shanklin

I can barely begin to tell you all of my wishes for you. Use your heart as a compass to find your way in the world. Realize you are unique and nothing is an accident. Because you are your own person.

Love, Mom, Dad, and Rhianda

Matthew Spencer

Just wanted to let you know how proud I am of you. We have been through some rough times and you have always been there for me. Love you very much.

Way to go!
Love, Mom

Rachel Beals

To Rachel,
My bestest friend, then and always. You are greatly missed.

You're one of a kind, and we love you for your uniqueness. Keep singing, your talent will take you far.

Love, Mom, Dad, Jed, Kym, and Keegan

Congratulations Class of 2004!

In Loving Memory

"Steven was a hard-working young man/ Steven had his career and life in his hand. Steven would've never done anything to anyone/ Steven was a good person to all and the only son. Steven was a person liked by all, Steven will be remembered playing football...Steven is missed and cared for/ Steven, to most, meant so much more." Poem by Senior Matt Hall

Steven Terrell

November 24, 1985 - November 1, 2003

"Steven was like a brother to me. He always took care of me whenever I needed help or just someone to talk to. He is unforgettable to me, and I'll always love him." Senior Melissa Covey

"Steven always worked hard at everything he did. Nobody could stay mad at him because he always made you smile. He was like a brother to so many people." Senior Luke Catellier

In Loving Memory

"Lewis was my best friend. Even if you didn't know him, he probably knew you. He knew everything about anything and, if he didn't, he made you think he did. He loved to camp, fish, and hunt. He taught me how to play and win at cards. I wish we could hang out again but until we can, just remember, close your eyes and picture him." Senior Ted Cooper

Lewis Collins

September 9, 1985 - February 18, 2004

"Whenever I was with Lewis, he always made me smile. He always put others before himself. Lewis was the most charming, caring person. I thank God I was able to know him." Senior Tori Poole

"Lewis was one of the funniest people I've ever met. He knew how to play with people's heads. We'd be in class and then suddenly, there he went, messing with people, telling them all kinds of crazy stories. One time he tricked me...The next day in class, I told Lewis, and he started laughing, then he said, 'I got ya.'" Junior Abdu Hashem

"I'll always miss you, but I'll remember the good times.
Ruprruupp."
Senior Jeremy Law

"He always wore a bandana outside of school. He tried to hang out with everybody. He always tried to find the good things in everybody." Sophomore Amy Wilson

Devin Deaton

January 27, 1986 - February 29, 2004

In Loving Memory

"He was a fun person. He always made you smile. He was approachable and outgoing. He always had a bandana on. His family meant everything to him." Junior Ashlie Lair

Closing

Throughout the cold

fall & winter, the school days became monotonous &

routine, with each unique day blurring into 1 long stretch of weeks and months. Yet, as

*
Spring

approached, the days

became filled with the excitement of Spring Break, Prom graduation.

Just like the

flowers that grew in Spring.

the students found

- new - life & energy

closing of the school year.

The quiet students suddenly blossomed and ~~won~~ Oscars, and the ones who were often seen & heard organized a group of bicyclists who

Excellent!

rode to school on 2 wheels. Although the year was filled with its rainy days,

From small beginnings
come great things.
