 MOORESVILLE HIGH SCHOOL students proudly walk through the streets of the town. These students embarked on a fascinating journey. "My senior homeeoming parade was great! Andrea and I make awesome walking billboards, if I do say so myself," senior Tara Sewell said. Tara was not the only senior who enjoyed the homecoming parade experience. "It was awesome walking with Project Ignition. I had tons of fun," senior Alex Schmitz said. Being able to film was also a highlight. "Filming the homecoming parade my senior year was very bitter-sweet, because as I marched in the parade with my camera in hand I felt as if I was leaving the High School memories behind and leaping forward into my carcer of filming," senior Jacob Gabbard said.

More To Moorewille More Than Meets the Eye

The word more can have many interpretations. What comes to mind when one hears the word more? More money, more time, more answers?

Mooresville High School students had their own thoughts of this word's meaning. Some, such as Lauren Rink, felt that "more space would be nice." Sophomore Jake Swigert would enjoy to see a little "more color" in the halls of the school. Even the English teacher, Mr. Mike Savini said, "I would like to see students have more understanding for the importance of continued education." However, both students and teachers agreed that Mooresville High School had more than meets the eye.

At Mooresville High School, students created more memories. Through the continuing of the senior sunrise and sunset, and also the beginning for seniors to paint their own parking spots, there were many moments that are well worth remembering.

Students were given more opportunities with many clubs and performing arts offered. They could either help the community with Key Club or National Honor Society, become updated with the current events by debating in JSA, or even had more chances to perform with choir, orchestra, and/or band. Students at Mooresville were given opportunities that other schools may not have offered.

Mooresville High School was represented very well through our students' athletic teams. From football to golf, the teams and groups that were formed shared their passion, drive, and perseverance that made this school more represented than others. The accomplishments made and goals set show ed that Mooresville had students who cared and understood what it means to represent their team, their coaches, and their school.

Excellence was the key to success. Every student was involved in academics; therefore everyone shared his or her opinion about different classes.

Each class included excellence and involved students preparing for their futures; excellence through papers, tests, presentations, or homework. Excellence was a word meaning superiority and striving for perfection. Students at MHS took pride in this and what they did.

Mooresville High School students provide more memories, were given more opportunities, and improved their skills to create excellence in what they did. There was more to Mooresville.

Memories

Students Experience Bittersweet

Students began making when they started as high school freshmen. Whether the were good or bad, they would always be remembered. Students continued old traditions would always be remembered. States the second and formed new traditions as well. Freshmen walked through the doors to Mooresville High School for the first time. Some of them seemed nervous and others seemed excited and ready to begin the four-year-long-journey. One student felt relaxed on the first day of school. "I felt relaxed because my brothers have been at the high school for the last eight years," freshman Chris Thomas said.

Some freshmen looked forward to being a part of a sport team at Mooresville High School. "Basketball was a lot of fun and took more dedication than middle school," freshman Trey Fauli said.

Freshmen got to experience their first high school homecoming and spirit week. Freshman Taylor Chitwood participated in twin day for spirit week. "I was twins with Brett [Green] because she is my best friend," she said.

Sophomores were eager to start creating of their second year of high school. Some of them had the privilege to get their license and drive to school. "I'm so extremely excited, because I don't have to ride to school with my dad," sophomore Kierstyn Taber said.

Sophomores became eligible for the first time to participate in a high level show choir. "It was really fun, and better than being in younger choirs," sophomore Finesse member Maddie Zook said. Amber Viles was honored to play on the varsity volleyball team as a sophomore. "It was hard and the games seemed long, but it always seemed like the team pulled out on top," Viles said.

Juniors, for the first time, were considered upperclassmen. "Now that I am an upperdassman, I feel like the underdassmen look up to me," junior Kaitlin Craig said.

Juniors also attended prom for the first time. "I'm excited for my first prom. I can't wait to see how everyone looks," junior Ashtyn Fisher said.

Senior Sunise A Tradition, A Memory

As the sun rose up over the horizon, the seniors gathered around for their first activity of the year. The air was filled with excitement as students shared stories of their summer adventures.

It was a brand new year and a great way to start of a school tradition that many students had never participated in. The senior sunrise was a tradition that the 2010 graduating class was fairly new with. This year, the seniors got to take place in it to have something to share personally with their other classmates.

"It was exciting being a part of a new tradition," senior Lasondra Land commented about the parking spots.

"The best thing about both the sunrise and our day of painting was watching the senior class come together and share the experience. I enjoyed watching them become part of a new senior tradition," Mrs. Joyce Gilly said.

New clothes, new tans, and new faces brought talk and laughter to the beginning of seniors final year at Mooresville High School. Several new traditions were started with the 2010 graduating class including painting senior parking spots. Many seniors participated and showed their school spirit through the power of art.

"I was very excited and I like to paint. I also got to help David Myrick paint his spot and that was awesome," senior Nick Bailey shared about the senior spots.

For many years to come, these seniors hope their new tradition would be passed on so everyone in classes below them can participate and be able to say they took place in it. BY: KRISTIN POSEY

Cheer it

Pioneers show spirit

Spirit can't be defined in one word. It made everyone want to paint their faces in their school colors, wear crazy clothing, run a flag on the track, or do the wave in the stands.

School spirit was all about rallying together as a group and showing pride for the school. There were some who did there own thing.

"I went to Wal-mart and got a super girl costume to represent super seniors. I went the whole nine yards with face paint and hair color," senior Scott Brown said.

Brown said every time he got a chance to show some spirit, he and senior Matt Hendrickson competed to see who dressed up the most.

"I took a pair of jeans and cut them to make a pair of daisy dukes. I wore camo hunting boots and I took a plaid shirt, ripped off the sleeves, and buttoned it half way down to show my dedication," Hendrickson said.

When people are going crazy over an upcoming game, the teachers sometimes got involved also.

"My favorite spirit day was favorite music band day, because I got to wear my Styx T-shirt," Spanish teacher Mrs. Alicia Richhart said.

Everyone got into showing spirit. If it was going to a game all decked out or cheering on the choirs and the bands. Everyone could feel it, especially the pep band. They were the ones at games who keep everyone pumped up and excited.

"It was hard and tiring. And in the end, my hands hurt, but it was totally worth it. The screaming was just an incentive to go faster," junior Amy Anderson said.

Showing spirit gave everyone a chance to go crazy. But spirit wasn't only shown at school for these Mooresville students.

"I'm not into anything the school system offers, so I got into doing traditional karate and XMA (extreme martial arts)," sophomore Rachel Davis said.

It was what brought the senior prom queen and the new freshman boy together with the rest of the school. So even though one's high school days were coming to a close and the others were just beginning, they were both brought together by the same thing. Spirit.

Homecoming of Changes

School faces rain on Homecoming day

On Friday, September 25, 2009, rain continued to drop onto the field. For the previous two days, water poured down causing homecoming festivities, such as the annual Powder Puff games, to be rescheduled.

As the clock ticked closer to time for the pep rally, the sky showed no signs of improving weather; therefore causing no other option but to hold the session in the gym. Some thought this to be a disadvantage.

"It was not the same in the gym, because it wasn't as exciting. Since it wasn't at the football field, it just didn't seem right," senior football player Evan Wooding said.

Others, including head football coach Mark Bless, thought that the new scenery was not a bad factor.

"It was a different atmosphere but the school spirit was still at an all-time high," Bless said.

The football players watched as the students piled through the bleachers to get good seats. Both students and teachers competitively fought for the titles of games, contests, and relays. Before the pep rally was over, the senior football players gave motivational speeches.

"Every good hero has a side kick ... you, Mooresville High School, are our football team's side kick," senior Andy Kays said.

Many took Kay's humorous speech seriously and attended the game against Martinsville that night. Blue and gold fans screamed and cheered for the Pioneers.

The team put up a great fight but eventually came up a little short. The final score was 32-40.

"We played a very good first half, but not so well in the second. After half time we lost a lot of intensity," Coach Mark Bless said.

Though the game counted as a loss, the football players learned a valuable lesson which helped them for the next games.

"The players learned to never give up and to finish through the entire game," Bless said.

Heroes vs. Villains Wagon Trails Revue

The stage was dark. The audience waited for the curtains to open. Backstage, the hearts of the performers beat against their chests as they anticipated when it was finally time for them to perform. The curtain opened and the lights came on. The stage was set for the annual variety show, Wagon Trails Revue. With the theme "Super Heroes vs. Super Villains," the show served as a crowd pleaser. The show included appearances from The Flash, The Joker, Professor Xavier, The Hulk and his girlfriend Denise, Poison Ivy, Cat Woman, the Fantastic Four team, Batman, Spiderman, Wolverine, The Penguin, Superman, and many other favorite super villains and super heroes.

Senior yearbook staff editor Lydia Wathen said, "It was an honor and a privilege to be a part of Wagon Trails. I loved being the Hulk's (Damon Martin's) mother, then transforming into cat women. It was awesome!"

Wagon Trails Revue, was held annually by the yearbook staff to raise money to help pay for the book. Keeping with tradition, the show started with the singing of Yesterday Once More, and the slide show that included photos from previous Wagon Trails Revues. The marching band always came right after that, and then Spotlighters concluded the show. The orchestra, and all the other choirs and bands were mixed in the middle.

"Being in guard is a big part of my life now," freshmen Haley Carr said. "It was a great experience to show my family what I do, and I absolutely expect to do it [Wagon Trails Revue] again next year. It's too much fun to forget."

Wagon Trails Revue ran smoothly... for the most part. During dress rehearsal there were some technical difficulties such as the front curtain broke, which caused a delay during the show. The actual show nights ran smoothly as well, but the curtain didn't close all the way.

Band Director, Mr. Weber said, "We had some minor technical difficulties, but they were easily solved and fixed in time for the show."

All the students involved in Wagon Trails Revue spent countless hours preparing for the show.

"My favorite part of the show was our [Spotlighters] flip in the final song. We all worked really hard and had after school practices to get them to perfection," junior Nicholas Hunter-Shields said.

Being in Wagon Trails Revue took dedication. Students still performed even when injured. One of these students was junior Caleb Taylor in Spotlighters. He broke his ankle and he couldn't participate in the dancing part of the show, but when it was time for the Spotlighter's balled, he was out there singing with the rest of them.

Many of the teachers played a key role in the shows production. Mr. Michael Haisten, the French teacher, played the trombone for different choirs while Mrs. Melanie Kassen provided costumes for the skits. Mr. Andy Marine and his broadcast students taped the dress rehearsal for the concluding slideshow. Stage crew was also important because they kept everything up and running backstage.

"This years Wagon Trails was an even better one then last year's. It had some comedy and some seriousness," junior Chris Gwinn concluded.

1. SENIORS CHLOE BRIZENDINE, Raechel Owens and sophomore Taylor Smith sang New Girl in Town from the musical "Hairspray." Before the girls went out to perform, they chanted their cheer to pump them up. "Before every show," Brizendine said, " we would say; We be the what? New girls... in town!"

2. FRESHMAN ERIKA SANBORN performs in Millennium in her first year of show choir. She enjoyed performing with Millennium and said she hoped to make it into a different choir next year. "Wagon Trails Revue was a great experience, and I can't wait for the future and being with all my peers," Sanborn said.

3. JUNIOR CALEB TAYLOR performs during the Spotlighters ballad. He had broken his ankle on the AP History field trip a couple weeks prior to the show. "It was sad not being able to dance, but being on stage with my spotlighters was an amazing experience as always. I just want to thank Mr. Damron for putting me in the ballad," Taylor said.

4. SENIOR JORDAN BRYANT sings on stage at Wagon Trails Revue for the last time in Madrigals. Bryant was also a part of Spotlighters and had been in show choir for her whole high school career. "I have wanted to be in Madrigals since I was in fifth grade, so my last Wagon Trails Revue performance was bittersweet," Bryant said.

5. JUNIOR KAYLA ROBINSON performs with Finesse. She had been in Finesse for two years. "During the show I was thinking of keeping the smile on my face, and the future of Finesse. I think we will do a lot better than last year when [show choir] competition season starts," Robinson Said.

6. SENIOR SALLY RANSOM performs with the Orchestra in her last Wagon Trails Revue. One of the songs played by Orchestra was "Thriller" by Micheal Jackson. "I enjoyed my last year in Wagon Trails Revue, and "Thriller" was a really fun song to play," Ransom said.

7. Junior Susan Perry performs the marching band's fall show on stage. During the marching season, the marching band and guard worked hard during the summer to finish their show. "The hardest thing about Wagon Trails Revue is that the lights blind you every time you toss. I always think about never trying to drop," Perry said.

"My favorite part is seeing the level of performance everyone starts out with and then by the end of the year seeing how much everyone improves and excels in what they love best," senior Matt Hendrickson said.

> "My favorite part of Wagon Trails Revue was performing. I love being on stage and I love the adrenaline rush it gives me," junior Kayla Rode said.

"I loved the way the audience made me feel as I performed for my first performance as a Spotlighter," sophomore Evan Downey said.

"All the choirs did a fantastic job, but my favorite was probably Spotlighters," freshmen Chelsie Allen said.

"The prom skit with Zach and Damon was the funniest skit I have ever seen," Mrs. Marsha Green said.

"My only performance was at the Indianapolis Repertory Theatre in which I played a juror in the play Inberit the Wind."

Caught Reading!

Students, Teachers caught in school-wide reading effort

"The Get Caught Reading program has greatly influenced high school students, it shows them how reading is a great, fun way to learn," English teacher Mr. Jake Allen said.

Mooresville High School adopted this program from the Association of American Publishers. The "Get Caught Reading" phrase was meant to remind people of the joys of reading. The AAP took pictures of celebrities reading books and posted their pictures on Web pages and posters to influence students to read.

The Climate Committee asked the yearbook staff to take posed pictures of high school students and teachers. The "Get Caught Reading" posters placed in the hallways around school were to show students reading could actually be very common and even football players do it. This program was a very good way to encourage students and show them that everyone, no matter who they are, can read.

"I started reading more after I saw all the posters around the school of my friends reading," sophomore Brenda Smalling said.

English teachers decided to let students have a free class of reading time every Friday, or just 10 minutes every day.

"I like reading on Fridays because it's better than doing assignments and getting homework," senior Aaron Belcher said.

Teachers wanted students to have plenty of time for books and to remember how satisfying it could be to browse through the library, hold a new book in their hands, and discover new worlds on the printed pages.

"I have been seeing a lot more students reading in their free time," junior Angela Horton said.

Various Mooresville teachers said the program would be an excellent plan for all schools, and it increased students reading scores drastically. Every student took a pre and post reading test to show how much they improved. Because of the large variety of books in the world, there were many categories for each and every person.

"I've been reading How I fell in Love, I liked it because it made me feel sympathy and not to take life for granted," freshman Shelby Hutchison said.

By reading books it can put people in a world of their own. Reading enabled everyone to get creative with their own imaginations and come up with ideas of inspiration. It was a great way to set people free and teach them things like good morals, or even just how to do something.

Spring Break!

Memories in the sun

At 2:33 p.m. on Friday March 26, students sat in their desks as they eagerly waited for what some would say is the highlight of their year - Spring Break.

After a long hard Indiana winter, students were ready to get outside. They had been planning their spring break trip for many weeks, but many decided to just stay in Mooresville. For some students, the beach wasn't needed for a good time. "I went to the zoo and shopping for Easter clothes, it was just fun to hang out," senior Danyelle Bolin said.

While some decided to stay home over break, others decided to head south to the beach to soak up the sun.

Those who weren't lucky enough to head to the beaches simply went on trips with their families to nearby places.

Prom 2010

Lost In Paradise!

It was a beautiful day on Friday April 30, 2010; girls got all dressed up while their dates anxious to see the final product. Prom was held in the Hyatt Hotel in downtown Indianapolis for the first time.

"[We chose the Hyatt] because of it's customer service and the layout of the place was a lot prettier. We are also going there again next year," Prom coordinator Jennifer Perkins said.

Prom was a major success for many students who chose to embark on the fantastic memory. Before Prom, many students went out to eat with their groups or dates at different restaurants.

"My favorite part of Prom was eating at the Eagle's Nest and dancing with my wonderfully super handsome and goofy boyfriend Zachary Rothenberger," senior and Prom Queen Bailey Wellspring said.

The DJs, known as the Heartbreakers, played some rockin' songs and there ended up being over 500 people who came. At the end of the night the annual crowning took place. Kim Schneider won princess, Brandon Grider prince, Bailey Wellspring queen, and Bill Andrews king.

"I was surprised! I didn't think I was going to win! It was really exciting to hear the DJ cell my name," junior Prom Princess Kim Schneider said.

When the DJ played that song Cale Larrison, Damon Martin, Hunter Richardson, James Ringer, Ricky Redelman, Alex Redelman, Nick Riccardi, Gavin Douglas, and Josh Taylor performed for the whole Prom. They wanted to leave a lasting impression and make an impact.

Overall, Prom ended up being another outstanding and successful night.

Winter Games Cashing In for Prizes

"Welcome to MHS Post Prom 2010!" parent Melodie Halstead shouted as students entered through the doors. Christmas lights lined the entrance hallway. Students had to slide down a "mountain" to get to the game area. Students were eager to get out of their dresses and play games at Post Prom.

MHS parents transformed the gym into "Winter Games." Students could do anything from getting their picture taken on a snow mobile to playing games to earn money for prize.

Towards the end of the night, students began cashing in their money for prizes. Senior Andrew Gibson went home with a brand new XBOX 360.

"I'm happy I won the XBOX, because now I don't have to use real money to buy it myself," senior Andrew Gibson said.

Senior Molly Adams left Post Prom with a 32" flat screen TV.

"It will be a nice addition to my dorm room next year at Purdue," Adams said.

Over all, Post Prom was a fun filled night. The couples had matching T-shirts, the food was free, the games were enjoyable, and the prizes were great. BY: HALI HOPWOOD

AT A TK

"I told myself I wasn't going to cry, but then the senior slide show came on..." senior Molly Adams.

1. AS ALL OF THE graduating seniors waited to enter the ceremony, they laughed and talked with the entire 2010 class for the last time. All together, they waited in the North gym until it was time to walk through the school to the commencement ceremony. "Walking through the halls for the last time was pretty sad but it was also nice because we will all be going different directions. It will be cool to see what everyone does with their life, " senior Josh Teague said.

 SENIOR NICK BOYDEN had a special connection to this graduation ceremony. "Mr. Curt Freeman is my uncle. So, since it was his last year as superintendant, receiving my diploma was even more memorable than I would have imagined," Boyden said.
 SENIOR ALLYSON BACKUS looked straight into the eyes of Mr. Freeman as she received her diploma.

Goodbye Class of 2010 An End and a New Beginning

"This is what we have worked so hard to accomplish over these past four years," senior Scott Brown said.

Graduation consisted of many mixed emotions: happiness, sadness, others full of hope, full of nerves, and scared for what their futures may bring. Every student had a memory at Mooresville High School, and every student had a new and bright beginning. While one phase of life came to an end, another was just ready to begin.

"The feeling of pure joy I had just sitting there watching everyone walk across the stage as all the friends and family in the stands cheered for us was a feeling of accomplishment and joy. Bittersweet joy, but joy nonetheless," senior Alex Zimmer said.

Many of the students had been together since the very first day of kindergarten; growing up through all of elementary school, middle school, and high school with the same kids. The graduation commencement concluded this chapter of their lives and acted as the last moment they all would share together.

As they reminisced with one another by watching a slide show of memories, the young adults looked back at the previous years they had with one another.

"The slideshow was great and made me cry looking back at everything that we've been through," senior Chelsea Bain said. Once the ceremony ended, the students said their goodbyes to those that they would never see again. While some stayed friends, others went their separate ways. Yet with this separation, memories created throughout the journey to graduation remained.

"My wish for the graduates is to live a life of purpose by putting others before themselves and going out of their way to help their community and those in need," Principal Mr. Chuck Muston said.

As the seniors left, they took this advice to hopefully use to their advantage and conquer the next step of life, whatever it may be.

4. THE NEWBORN graduates take their last steps out of Mooresville High School and their first steps into their new lives.

5. THE 2010 SENIORS took their final walk across the stage in the gymnasium, during the graduation ceremony on May 29. Waiting for their names to be called, suspense and anxiety overwhelmed their bodies.

Top Five Memor

"My top memory was getting my diploma and never looking back," senior Darren Rumple said.

"My/Evorite memory was listening to Scott Brown sing his amazing solo," senior Laura Lindstrom said.

"My favorite memory was waiting to walk across the stage, thinking 'Holy Cowl I'm graduating'," senior Chelsea Bain said.

"[My favorite memory from graduation] was watching all my friends receive diplomas and sitting with my classmates for one last time," senior Shelby Kanouse said.

"[My favorite memory] was walking off the stage and realizing I don't ever have to come back... unless I want to see my mom," senior Nick Bailey said.

Freshmen Fashion

The class of 2013 has redefined the looks of today with many of its own styles. After conducting a survey, it was found that most all boys consider themselves to be more of a casual dresser with a slight edge including: polo shirts, having more than four pairs of shoes, owning a pair of Jordans, wearing some sort of Under Armor, and topping it off with a spray of cologne. Similarly, the girls of the class transformed their appearance into a casual laid back look with owning a pair of UGG boots or something similar, appropriate piercings, fun painted nails, side swooped bangs, sun blocking shades, and finishing the fashion with many jewelry pieces.

Opportunities

Students take the lead

As another year passed, drastic changes and new opportunities took shape. In these new prospects, students showed personality, talent and dedication. With clubs ranging from art to foreign language, students had chances to become involved.

In November, performers lit up the stage for Wagon Trails Revue "Being on stage and under the lights is my favorite place to be," senior Deanna Peters said.

During the week, after-school clubs met regularly to prepare for upcoming events. Groups such as the Art Club could be found making tie dye T-shirts and Finesse girls worked on choreography. vigilantly in preparation for competition season.

In October, Michaela Baskerville and Trisha Mason showed off thei unique talent and won the annual pumpkin carving contest.

"I guess it was just luck; I've never carved a pumpkin in my life, sophomore Trisha Mason said.

With obligations to academics and jobs, after school groups became an excellent outlet for students. Student Council paired up with other clubs, and help the community with Trick or Treat for can

"It was a lot of fun; we passed out fliers the first day then went to neighborhoods and collected cans the next day," Student Body President Mike Schiff, senior, said.

After school clubs served as not only a good social experience but also built leadership skills in students. The FFA National Convention in Indianapolis held nearly 60,000 people in the fall of 2009. "It's a way for people to stay in touch with agriculture," FFA sponsor Mrs. Tonya Weiss said.

"Since it's my senior year, it has been a lot more fun," FFA president, Tiffany Waterman, senior, said.

Other after-school clubs helped prepare students for future careers. The JSA political group met on Wednesdays to discuss current events and debate controversial topics.

"I really enjoy when the debates get heated," senior Ashley Terry said.

Many students joined clubs to become more involved. Students. who joined an after-school group made memories, held responsibility, and overcame challenges.

The commitment of the club members pushed their group toward success. Through the opportunities given, they came to persevere. BY: ASHLEY JACKSON

 SEMIORS DEANNA PETERS, Tyler Himes, Megan Stinson and junior Glen Hall give it all they've got during Wagon Trails Revue. The Spottighter members wowed the crowd with their unique vocals and high-energy choreography. Performing hit songs such as "Bring Me to Life" by Evanescence, the Spotlighters headed steadfast into competition season, "Since it is my senior year I am realth hupping we make finals and win a competition,"

A New Start

Spotlighters Turn It Up!

As members of the 2009-2010 Spotlighters waited on stage, a mixture of nervousness and excitement rummaged their minds.

In a few moments the blinding stage lights would be on and every performer would have on his or her best show face.

To be a part of Spotlighters, members could not simply be singers or dancers; they had to be performers. The pressure to remember choreography and lyrics may have been quite great, but the reward of making finals made it worth the work.

"I think that this year the group of students get along better which affects us on and off the stage, " junior Kayla Rhode said.

Not only did the Spotlighters have new talent but also a unique show. The show opener, called Neodammerung, was a German song with dark sounds and a powerful tone.

"Our opener is an epic song and I have not seen another show choir perform a song like this," Spotlighter director Mr. Jason Damron said.

For the seniors of the group, each competition was a chance to show the improvement they had made over the past four years. Not only improving but also helping the new members.

"I feel like I am important to the group as a dance captain. Not everyone can pick up a dance in two hours so I get to help them learn and perfect dances," senior Jackie Goodman said.

The Spotlighters were recognized as an elite group of performers with the capability to go far in competitions. With a memorable show and outstanding performers, the Spotlighters were a group to be reckoned with.

1. SOPHOMORE EVAN DOWNEY, junior Karlie Stanton, and seniors Tyler Himes and Deanna Peters put on a show with the closing song Zero to Hero. Although Wagon Trails Revue was pre-competition season, members used the performance to show family and friends what the Spotlighters were all about. "I believe Spotlighters were good in past years but I think this year we have the talent to exceed them all," sophomore Evan Downey said.

2. SENIOR SCOTT BROWN feels the music as he sings his solo during a week night practice.

It was 5:30 a.m. The Finesse girls were ready for a very eventful day ahead of them. They arrived at the host school, and began their hair and make-up. They warmed up their voices, and fixed minor choreography moves. Then, after all the work, they finally got to perform. Thoughts of singing the right notes, having every move perfect, and showing the right face expression ran through the girls' heads throughout the performance. Awards followed. What would they place?

The Finesse show choir had a very long, but fun season. With Mr. Jason Damron being the only choir teacher, it brought a lot of stress to him, and a lot of the girls, but the love of singing, dancing, and just spending time together gave them a great year.

"We all bonded and stuck together no matter what, and that was what I loved about Finesse," junior Brittany McCloud said.

The most challenging thing for the Finesse girls was having one director throughout the whole year. It all worked out in the end because they all worked together and became one big family.

all the time and effort it takes him to work with us, and keeping our attention," junior Rachel Dreher said.

Finesse had a busy schedule competing at Pike, Ben Davis, Bishop Luers, and Universal Studios in Orlando, Florida. They also performed at the school for Wagon Trails Revue, Spotlighter Invitational, and Spring Spectacular. Finesse also did fun things with each other including slumber parties and the overnight at the school in October.

"You should try out for Finesse, it's a lot of fun to sing and dance," senior Chelsey Bain said.

Rising Stars

Mooresville High School choirs made their voices heard. Every group had the opportunity to showcase its talents with performances throughout the year such as Wagon Trails Revue and Spring Spectacular. Impressive vocals and outstanding choreography demonstrated the hard work and dedication these students had.

Mr. Jason Damron became the sole choir teacher for the department. It was a challenge to take on but it didn't slow down progress. All the choirs performed with poise and confidence.

The Millennium choir glimmered with gold as they took the stage at Wagon Trails Revue.

"Performing is what I like most about choir. When I'm out there performing with all my friends, I'm having the time of my life," freshman Kyndal Pennington said.

Freshman Sensations member Cassidy Kelley said choir was a lot of fun.

"My favorite song was Beautiful December which we performed in the winter show," Kelley said.

Freshman Brianna Love described the Genesis choir as "amazing and fun." They performed a Michael Jackson Melody in honor of the King of Pop at Wagon Trails Revue.

Students at Mooresville High School that enjoy singing not only get the opportunity to participate in choir, but can also join a club. Verbal Essence and Insomniac contained students who wanted to perfect their vocal instruments.

"Verbal Essence is a group of music loving women," sophomore Alexis Siefker said.

Verbal Essence and Insomniac are both a capella groups that perform at Spring Spectacular.

All the choirs in the music department made their voices heard. With many performances to showcase their talents, all the groups demonstrated that hard work and dedication creates an outstanding performance.

utting Rhythm

The Marching band performed its show "Rhythm" for audiences at many different places. Marching season lasted from early summer to late October.

"This year's show was really unique, because all the different sections played a percussion instrument at one point, such as the clarinets on drums," senior Emily Lemon said.

Over the summer the longest practice week was band camp. Normally the weather was extremely hot but it was very rainy. One of the days all the guard members went outside to march drill on the practice field and they got soaked from the rain.

The band worked hard all through the summer and through the beginning of the school year waiting until they finally were able perform at their first contest.

"The first contest is a totally different experience, because all the new members are so used to practice environment that they finally get to feel what its like to perform to an audience." senior Carla Ronan said.

The marching season was unusually rainy this year. All the rain caused the fields to be extra muddy and unusable making some of the contests harder to perform at.

At Greenwood the field was extremely muddy which made all the members slide all over the field, while at Southport they had to perform on the concrete practice field because the field was to muddy to perform on.

"At Southport the students did well, because they were used to practicing on concrete since we always do that here everyday after school," band director Jerry Weber said.

The marching band had a good season, but they unfortunately did not make it on to state finals.

"Being in marching band is very difficult but the experience gained and the friends made make it all worthwhile," junior Sterling Brooks said.

"Our best performance was Evansville Regionals," Passey said. "We were prepared to do whatever it would take to make semi-finals. We left our hearts out on the field knowing we had done our best."

MHS Guard Performing "Joan"

The guard performed a show titled "Joan" with music by Evanescence which was about the legendary Joan of Arc who was burned at the stake.

At the end of the show the girls danced with orange and yellow streamers to indicate fire.

"I liked whenever we were dancing with the fire because it was fun and it was fierce," freshman Jessica Darlington said. The guard practiced for three hours after school every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday to try to learn the whole show in time for contests.

"Most practices were serious, but there were-times when we would mess around and just have fun like one time everyone

The guard made it past the preliminary round at Mooresville and on to Semistate but unfortunately did not make it to state.

"The best performance they gave was performing for the middle school to recruit freshman for next year," guard director Chelsea Lett said.

of Equipment to spin

"Rifle is my favorite. I feel strong when I spin this piece, because I have the most experience spinning it," senior Danielle Hall said.

"My favorite is not rifle or sabre, but dancing. I like dancing because I am good at it and I feel like I can express myself when I dance because of body language," junior Katie Wells said.

> "Flag is my favorite, because I love the way it flows and I can do so many different tosses with it. I also like it because it is the easiest to spin and it is the first piece of equipment you are taught as an incoming freshman," junior Susan Perry said.

'I like spinning everything, but I would have to say sabre because it is one of the more difficult pieces to spin and I always feels strong when I catch any of my tosses right," junior Carolyn Ferrill said

> 'I love spinning rifle. It's exciting to throw a big toss and catch it strong. It always makes me feel good knowing I caught it right," junior Kirsten Taylor said.

"My favorite thing to spin is rifle. I always feel strong when I spin it and I can always do amazing things," freshman Haley Carr said.

> "Rifle is my favorite because it's really fun to spin. It's my first year on rifle so it's also really challenging," freshman Jessica Darlington said.

Pep band played at the basketball games for Mooresville High School. The pep band's goal was to encourage the basketball players and to bring the crowd to its feet to cheer and support the team. Pep band was actually conducted by a student. The two conductors were junior Sterling Brooks and senior Heather Passey.

"It's really fun to conduct music that gets people excited about the games," senior conductor Heather Passey said.

Pep band also performed at the pep rallies at the school. They also did a concert called "Concert on The Lawn" to raise funds.

Jazz band was made up of 16 members. The band performed at Wagon Trails Revue as well as a Christmas performance. Jazz band worked on its concert for the spring play. The band played slow, calming music. It consisted of percussion instruments, guitar, piano, cello, saxophone, and trumpets.

"I liked jazz band because I had more practice time on the piano and it gave me more confidence to play in front of an audience," sophomore Katie Cavin said.

Symphonic band was the main band class. It served as a concert band that participated in ISSMA, a Christmas show, Wagon Trails Revue, a Fall show, and a spring show. Symphonic band played a lot of classical music and had a large variety of instruments.

"I'm second in chair this year in symphonic band, so I get to play the first part which is harder than what I've played in the past years," junior Sarah Lemon said.

Percussion band was made up of 20 members. The band went to each elementary school to perform for the kids. Percussion band consisted of drums and keyboards.

"We perform ensembles of rhythm. I like percussion band because of the variety of percussion instruments available," freshman Charlie Swanson said.

"We tried to provide an atmosphere for the students so they all can enjoy their time in band class. Our goal is for the students to look back and remember the good experiences they had," band director Mr. Jerry Webber said. BY: HALI HOPWOOD

Orchestra Playing the Part

The lights dimmed down as people found their seats. Finally, the music started to play. Decorations were hanging from the ceiling to create a mood, with skeletons, witches, and mummies walking around everywhere.

If someone were to walk into this concert and not know how creative the Mooresville Orchestra could be around Halloween time, they would have been very surprised. Students in orchestra were very dedicated and had fun dressing up for the contest and just to get all those crazy looks from people. The crazier the outfits were, the better.

"I loved dressing up for Octo-Boo," freshman Derrick Willis said. "I dressed up as an old lady, just to be funny. I didn't win the contest, though; some guy in a pirate costume did. But so far, this was my favorite costume worn for Octo-Boo."

Their were plenty of freshmen in orchestra, but even with all the fresh new talent, they still needed help. Some freshmen chose a role model to look up to, but most just learned from the orchestra as a whole.

"I learned a lot from my upperclassmen friends, not only about orchestra but also about life," freshman Derrick Barnes said. "Tyler Huff teaches me a lot about how to tune on my own and how to do vibrato's, which is just a fancy word for making cool noises with your strings."

The director of orchestra, Mrs. Sheryl Fyffe had been directing for 23 years. Fyffe taught the same kids for grades 7-12, so she can had a close, family-like bond with her students.

"We all share our passion for music, but we also share stories with our lives and some of our experiences," Fyffe said. "I definitely have grown musically while teaching my students. Each year brings more talent and new challenges."

1. SOPHOMORE JASON HACKETT readies himself to play at Wagon Trails Revue. "There are only four bass players in the whole high school orchestra. I don't really feel under pressure, but I like to set an example for the younger players, but also look up to the senior bassist. Once she leaves, I'll be the oldest one," Hackett said.

2. SENIOR SHARON ROLLIN and sophomore Claire Ronan dress up for the Octo-Boo concert. "This Cleopatra costume took about three days to make. Most of the accessories I bought from Party City, but I hand made the dress and belt," Rollin said. "I guess I just really like Egyptian stuff."

4. ORCHESTRA TEACHER MRS. Sheryl Fyffe plays along on the piano with her students at the Octo-Boo concert. While the students played the song "Thriller" by Michael Jackson, senior Drew Quillen who was dressed like Michael Jackson came out onto the stage and danced the Thriller dance.

5. JUNIOR NATHANIEL NOVICKI focuses on his music. "We upperclassmen tend to take freshmen under our wing and help support tem through all their struggles," Novicki said. "I plan on going to college for music, and even majoring in it, hopefully Anderson accepts me because that's where I really want to go."

6. FRESHMAN CHARLES SWANSON, junior Jessica Osborne, and sophomores Adam Schmutte and Marcus Warthen dress with creativity for the contest held at Octo-Boo. "I think my the end of the night I got about $2.50 in change put in my cup, but I got a Burger King gift card, too," Swanson said.

8. FRESHMEN REBEKAH WHITEHURST and Derrick Willis dress for laughter at Octo-Boo. "I like being funny and I don't like scaring people," Whitehurst said. "Derrick told me he was dressing as an old lady so I said I would go as an old man. This was definitely my favorite costume that I've ever worn."

7. JUNIOR CHRISTO-PHER KING plays his violin during orchestra class. "It doesn't really matter what you play when your in orchestra, we all work together and look up to one another," King said.

"I remember playing Wizards in Winter at this concert, it was a really cool song," junior Tyler Huff said.

Many of the students enjoyed this night with no worries of being messed up while they played their songs. They had gotten much practice and played the song very well.

Student Council Making the School a Better Place

"My favorite part of working in Student Council is getting to know the students more. Being in the library for the majority of my day, I don't always get a chance to talk to a lot of students; Student Council gives me that chance," Student council advisor, Mrs. Barb Goddard said.

How did someone get into student council? There were many requirements for a student to be able to join Student Council. One must go to Mrs. Goddard in the library or Mrs. Perkins and ask for a paper. On the paper, students wrote why they wanted to be on Student Council and got 50 signatures from peers. From there they are put on a ballot and they won majority votes from their graduating class.

"I love being involved in Student Council! Technically, I have been in Stu-Co (Student Council) ever since I was in the fourth grade, but I have served on Mooresville High School's StuCo for two years," Junior Hannah Jones said.

Student Council provided a rewarding experience for its members. "Being able to learn how to become a quality leader is one of the most rewarding parts of being in Student Council," junior Max Goodin said.

This year alone Student Council members participated at D-9 workshop, collected canned goods, offered a Souper Supper drive for Riley Hospital, and coordinated fall and winter homecoming events. Also, junior Ashtyn Fisher and Mr. Chuck Muston each received awards for their hard work and dedication to their cause.

"My favorite part of student council is State Convention, which is a place where all the districts in the state get together and learn leadership skills. It's a two-day event that is held in a different place every year with hundreds of kids and excitement," Co-Student Council Advisor, Jennifer Perkins said. BY: LYDIA WATHEN

SADD The Purpose of the Club

"The purpose of SADD is to create awareness of teen dangers within the community by distributing materials, organizing events, and educating the public about destructive decisions that teens make today," SADD sponsor, Mr. Brent Olivier said.

SADD has been around for 15 years now and was considered to be one of the most exciting clubs Mooresville High School offered. The students who participated got to go on field trips, teach about drugs, and the effects of alcohol. SADD was about making positive decisions and helping others pursue and obtain those decisions.

SADD stood for Students Against Destructive Decisions. This meant that the students who were in this club were anti-drug and alcohol use. This also meant that these students were working against peer pressure and produces them to listen to one's own conscience.

SADD was a club where the group of people in it are united together to help keep each other accountable on certain decisions. Junior Elizabeth Egler became involved in SADD because of her sister.

"My favorite part of SADD is to be a part of group of students who also make the choice not to participate in destructive decisions. Students should join to help make positive decisions for their life and for others, she said.

What is NHS? National Honor Society

As the National Honor Society students scurry to finish up their year's term of community service and leadership, they must reflect on how it all originally began.

The previous year, many students of the graduating 2010 class were chosen as candidates to represent Mooresville High School's National Honor Society. To even be considered, the students had to have a 3.3 or higher GPA and show signs of character, service, leadership, and scholarship. After careful consideration, 64 members were chosen for the 2009-2010 club.

On April 26, 2009 the new members were inducted into the society through a big annual ceremony. After this tradition, the students considered themselves official NHS members.

"Each member is responsible for at least 36 hours of community service and to partake in one of the five projects which the different groups complete," NHS advisor Ms. Joyce Gilly said.

"Our group started a tradition of painting the senior parking spots. Hopefully it will continue for many years to come," senior NHS member Trevor Chappelow said.

National Honor Society was not only an accomplishment but a responsibility as well. By giving back to the community, the members get to enjoy the reward of knowing their hard work helps others.

Wo[men] Students act

Behind a fog of hair spray and lastminute costume changes, cast members headed to their opening positions. As the time for curtain call drew near, the cast of Little Women waited backstage.

The cast of Little Women had worked for weeks in hopes of showing the community its talent. Although there were some new faces, there were also many familiar ones.

"I have participated in the spring play all four years I have been at Mooresville. It is one of my favorite after-school activities," senior Sheran Rollin said.

To have been able to act in front of a crowd, cast members rehearsed not merely lines, but also body language and even accents. For many in the play, acting was not only a hobby, but also a passion.

"My favorite part about acting is acting with great people. They know when to crack down and get down to business," junior Glen Hall said.

New to the Mooresville drama program was student teacher Mr. St. John. Although it was his first year student teaching, Mr. St. John learned as much from his students as they learned from him.

"It was a great experience to work with a caring/knowledgeable supervisor and dedicated students," Mr. St. John said.

For seniors in the play, the final show came with feelings of accomplishment. Although the tone of the play was serious, each actor gave a heart-warming performance.

"Our characters had evolved so much and all of the actors were very ready," senior Chloe Brizendine said.

This years cast of actors and actresses were dedicated, punctual, and poised. With the proof of their talent in their acting, every member showed tremendous ability.

Stage Crew:

Behind the bright lights and full audience, the members of the Mooresville stage crew checked their lights, headsets, and props. Those students who participated behind the scenes acquired a set of unique skills.

Two different sets of students worked on stage crew - one crew helped with plays, another group helped concerts and other events.

"I've learned how to used sound equipment and how to move spotlights around," junior David Cox said.

To spend after-school hours working, stage crew members were able to build friendships.

"The fun you have getting to stay after school and hang with friends is great," senior Steve Schlangen said.

The memories made in stage crew had the ability to be long lasting.

MHS Key Club

For many MHS students, work does not seem like a fun or exciting experience, but the Key Club members beg to differ.

From raising money for the Special Olympics by participating in The Polar Bear Plunge to trick-or-treating for canned goods, Key Club became greatly involved with the community.

"Being Key Club president, I have to help organize fundraisers and run meetings. To me, Key Club means helping anyone and everyone without being told. The volunteering just comes from the bottom of your heart," Key Club president Kaite Clasto said.

Every year, the club became more and more involved with not only the community, but the school itself. With almost 100 members, Key Club represented itself well throughout the 2009-2010 school year. To help publicize their hard work, a couple members made a banner and marched in the Fall Homecoming Parade.

"We decided to make a banner that said 'Do you have any clue what Key Club does for your community?' We picked this to help spread the word of our hard work and dedication," junior Ellie Clasto said.

In order to be considered an official member, a student met certain requirements. All members completed 60 service hours, as well as maintained good attendance. They also could not have any discipline referrals.

"This year we have a cool project where our goal was to collect a million pop tabs to send to Riley Hospital for Kids. This is equivalent to 92 copy boxes full of these tabs," Key Club advisor Mrs. Lindy Scott said.

"The trip to D.C was my favorite part of JSA because we were able to see all the historic statues and meet interesting people," junior Kayleigh White said.

The trip allowed students to interact with politicians and even sit in for a session of congress. " JSA was a good way to interact with my peers and to relate with others; it helped to channel my political interests and to see the thoughts of my community," senior Jameson Cain said.

JSA Students Handle the

For many high school students, keeping up with political issues in America may not seem too interesting, but Mooresville High School's JSA club had a different opinion

"JSA is a good experience students should have, it teaches you about politics and debate," junior Kayleigh White said.

Junior State of America, JSA, was a club that met once a week after school hours for a session of debate. These debates varied from topics such as abortion, school uniforms, gay rights, and even religion. Although these debates had a tendency to become heated, members acted professionally and handled the situations in an organized, political manner.

"JSA gave students an opportunity to discuss and understand different components of controversial topics and air their opinions," JSA sponsor Joyce Gilly said.

Since JSA had an open forum, it was a common occurrence to see the room divided into political parties or religious sections.

"As a high school student, it's hard to find a good environment to learn about the way politics work. JSA is a great way to incorporate this into our lives," senior JSA officer Jacob Gabbard said.

To better help these students learn the ropes of government and its policies, the students traveled to Chicago and Washington D.C. for different conventions.

The members of JSA were able to learn, discuss, and debate controversial topics in a comfortable environment. It was with this new knowledge that students furthered their interest in politics and with society.

Spanish Club

Spanish Club had its share of fun and exciting field trips. Some of their trips included an Indiana University soccer game, a Day of the Dead festival, and even salsa dancing lessons.

"We went to the soccer game because soccer is the most popular sport in Spanish speaking countries. It was fun for the students to watch a college game," Spanish leader Mrs. Kristin Robinson said.

Salsa dancing lessons was a favorite to most of the members.

"It was really fun to learn how to Salsa dance. I can show off in front of people now," senior Brittany Jensen said.

French club got a new sponsor: Mr. Michael Haisten. He was also a new teacher at MHS.

"I was elated when I found out I wa in charge of French Club. I thought it would be fun," Haisten said.

French Club had very many exciting opportunities to learn and have fun at the same time. One to the most memorable memories members had was the festival they went to. They learned about different cultures and ate different kinds of food.

Teams

Academic teams kept it fully together. They met twice a week and discussed different little topics for their main topic for the whole year. Each different topic had to have something with American civilization. Students got into small groups and researched their small topic to make an outline of it. "It's not hard, but, it's pretty challenging," senior Scott Brown said.

Spellbowl

This club was a good challenge for students who wanted to increase their vocabularies.

There were three competitions in the fall that the team went to.

"If you join Spellbowl, it definitely pays off in the end. You will know how to spell a bunch of random words," junior Morgan Mosier said. BY: KELSEY GROCE

FFA Club taught about agriculture and nature, but it didn't just show students about those features.

"I have learned to be a leader and that I have to make my own choices," Junior Austin LaVullis said. "My favorite part would have been the national convention, and I would highly recommend an underclassman to be in FFA."

FFA readied people for actual life goals. It taught about being in an industrial business, how to be prepared in natural conditions, and if the student didn't know what they wanted to be, FFA helped broaden the horizons of those who only had a small idea of what they wanted to do with themselves.

"I have been the leader of FFA at Mooresville since fall of 1998 and we do different activities all the time, except for All Around Town and FFA Convention which we do every single year," FFA sponsor Mrs. Tonya Weiss said. "Students choose their own activities to judge and to experience depending on what career choices they have in mind."

Sophomore Brad Bailey enjoyed making friends. "My favorite part is just hanging out with friends and getting to know new ones," Bailey said.

Senior Danyelle Bolin participated in Trailblazers for more than one year, and loved her memories made by all the exciting activities.

"I learned a lot while being in Trailblazers," Bolin said. "Even though it was a learning experience, it was mainly fun and exciting. There is something in there for everyone."

AN EARTHQUAKE STRIKES hard in Haiti. The incident occurred on January 12, 2010 with a 7.0 magnitude off Haiti's capital. Port-au-Prince.

4. "A MAIN THING is that we are trying to figure out is how animals react when an earthquake occurs and if they react sooner that we do," junior Brian Heady said. This graph showed the P-wave (the smaller bumps) and the S-wave (the bigger bumps) which shows the strength and the amount of pressure the earthquake produced.

Q-CREW The impact of Earthquakes

"O-CREW is a club of students that are doing state of the art research, and dragging their teachers along for the ride," O-CREW advisor, Mr. Jim Lindsey said.

On a more serious note, the Q-CREW studied environmental behavior and how it affects society. This year that have studied all about earthquakes; the causes, warning signs, and the affects that can occur. Also, their mascots were Seismo and Rauamoko, which were their geckos that they used for their research.

"I like studying the earthquakes and trying to predict them. They're just very interesting and our equipment really helps this process," junior, Chris Beckman said.

Like Mr. Lindsey mentioned before, the students who participated in this group were doing state of the art research that forecasters and scientists today work on as well.

According to CNN news, the Haiti earthquake killed an estimated 200,000 people, 1.5 million displaced, and 194,000 injured. Most of Port-au-Prince was destroyed along with many buildings and infrastructure. Q-CREW learned about this earthquake and discussed its magnitude and strength.

"My favorite part of Q-CREW is getting to learn new information all the time, in a fun environment," junior, Liz Hagee said.

Art Club was open to students who were presently enrolled in art or had taken art in the past. It was for students who were very creative and loved to draw, design, and create very artistic pieces. This was a club where students could reveal their own and other students' imaginative, artsy wants.

"It's a club where we can express school spirit and be ourselves in a creative way! It's really fun too," sophomore Katelyn Sanders said. "I like how I can be myself with no judgment, and also being creative with my friends."

"I took art my freshman year and I enjoyed doing art. I signed up for Art Club the beginning of that year and have been doing it ever since then," junior Nicholas Hunter-Shields said.

Fellow classmates of Hunter-Shields said they enjoyed making the banner for the homecoming parade. They thought it was a lot of fun and it took the cooperation of all art club members. Last year they enjoyed creating the banners for the homecoming parade, making the art club billboards, hosting the pumpkin carving contest – open to the student body, making Christmas cards, tie-dying shirts, and many other fun activities.

"Art Club doesn't mean you have to be able to draw. We do a lot of projects where others do the drawing for you. If you have a passion for art at all, you should join. Art club isn't as intimidating as it seems," junior Katie Moore said.

Art club was a great opportunity for anyone who loved art and had a good imagination. It really influenced a lot of people and it would have been great for anyone who loved art.

"After 35 years as the sponsor of art club, there are numerous memories I have. Just working with the different students throughout those years is memorable in itself," Art Club sponsor and art teacher, Mr. Denny Amrhein said.

Best Buddies was an organization where students were paired up with other students who had disabilities. They did fun activities with their buddies and helped them have the fun that every other person were able to enclose throughout their lives. Best Buddies was dedicated to enhancing the lives of people with disabilities by providing opportunities through one-to-one friendships.

"I chose to be in Best Buddies, because I saw how much fun people I knew were having from being involved and plus I was curious of what it was," freshman Mandy Carroll said.

The students who participated in Best Buddies said they loved hanging out and being around the buddies. Best Buddies loved to have a good time. Individual buddy pairs would hang out together, but the club also had monthly activities, such as attending sporting events or having parties – pretty much everything. They also tried to raise awareness for the integration and social acceptance of people with disabilities.

"I decided to join Best Buddies because it is a club like no other. It is one of the few organizations where helping people and the community isn't a chore – it is just about being a friend," senior Chloe Brizendine said. "My favorite part about participating in Best Buddies is seeing students' perceptions change. I think all of the members understand more about themselves, as well as the students with disabilities."

"Most people didn't see the buddies past their disabilities and that's where they really missed out," senior Taylor Howe said.

Their goal for Best Buddies was to show everyone that people with disabilities are just the same as every other person. Once they saw past that, they really gained a great friendship.

"My first year in Best Buddies, during Christmas time, we went caroling in a neighborhood. One of the buddies couldn't make it so we made a special stop and to her face light up was really cool," senior Raechel Owens said. BY: MEGAN SCHUMACHER

STUDENTS gather early in the morning in Wo By One to read out of the Bible and share a nourishing breakfast with each other. Won By One was held in the library with Mr. Jesse Burgess.

Won by One Many students, One love

Students seeking God could do so with fellow classmates in the Won by One Club.

"I thought that it was cool that they had a Bible study in the mornings and it seemed like a good way to start off a Wednesday," freshman Meghan Fitzpatrick said.

Every Wednesday, students could come together to study the Bible and share their faith. These students enjoyed speaking about Jesus Christ and what He did on the cross.

"I joined because I get to hang out with friends and learn about God," junior Cordon Gregory said.

One club brought students together to share one belief, and that was God.

FCA Sports & Praise

FCA allowed Christians to come together and share their love of Jesus Christ in a comfortable, accepting environment.

"You get to hang out with Christian friends and play sports," freshman Nic Wennen said.

Being able to have time outside of school to talk about God is what FCA provided to its members. They got to meet up and worship Him in prayer and activities that made it worth more than just being called a member. FCA was designed for students who love God and love sports.

FCA stands for Fellowship of Christian Athletes and the members in it fit that description.

They met quite frequently and were able to talk freely amongst themselves about personal issues. FCA was a club that gave that advantage and opportunity to be involved with God outside of a church.

Stressing safety on the streets

Students were not aware of the dangers when it came to driving without a seat belt on. Project Ignition was founded as a reminder to everyone that safe was always the best way to go.

"It gets the word out to be safe when you are driving," junior Stephanie Myrick said.

These students got to stress the dangers of driving in an unsafe manner and they felt they made a difference in getting the word out. Being in this club took a lot of hard work and dedication in order to convince teenagers that driving safe was the decision to make.

"We are able to set up a plan to do something," senior Nathan Vedder said.

Students had pride when it came to representing Project Ignition. With one person at a time, they were able to get the word out.

Represent

Athletes show pride

What does the word represent mean? To Mooresville High School athletes it stood for symbolism and pride.

Every time they stepped out on the field or sprinted across the court, they knew their actions reflected upon their school. Actions spoke louder than words as Mooresville athletes represented good sportsmanship and the willpower to win.

The Mooresville High School football team represented Mooresville at Lucas Oil Stadium. Students flooded the stadium's seats as they cheered the football team onto the field.

"Going to watch our football team play at Lucas Oil was so much fun! Although they didn't win the first game, I think they showed great sportsmanship and I was proud to be called a Pioneer," senior Raechel Owens said.

Special viewers such as Payton Manning got to witness the football team's representation of Mooresville High School. It was an exciting event for the community to experience.

Senior quarterback Andrew Gibson described the game as, "nerve racking, because it was the game of the year and we were playing on television."

Athletes not only represented the school by performing their sport, but also by their accomplishments throughout their athletic career.

Athletes were greatly awarded for their accomplishments made while playing for Mooresville High School.

Senior Maegan Callaway proudly represented the school when she signed off with the Valparaiso Women's Basketball Team in November. She was ecstatic to finally make it official and proud she accomplished her goal of playing college basketball.

"Working hard all the time, staying on top of school work and constantly striving to get better is the advice I'd give anyone wanting to play a college sport," Callaway said.

She as well as the rest of the girl's basketball team has had success out on the court. The team represented Mooresville with much recognition and many victories.

"I feel that our girl's basketball team is a good representation of Mooresville...we show good sportsmanship, leadership, and dedication," Callaway said.

Slow Start, Big Finsh

We Came, We Saw, We Conquered

With new people to the team and even a few new coaches, no one knew what was planned for the boys soccer team. New faces were seen on and off the field were newcomers Zak and Jake Swigert. Transferring from Ben Davis, the Swigert brothers were ready to strip the old purple and throw on a little blue and gold pride.

"I think this school is better than Ben Davis because Ben Davis was a bad school and it was ghetto," sophomore Jake Swigert said.

But for his brother, Zak, the competition was better. They soon would know what it was like to be a Pioneer. The team had a slow start at the beginning of the season. Their first win didn't approach until their fifth game. There on, the number of wins increased every week.

They improved so much that they made it all the way to the sectional championship. Sadly, that was their last game.

"I really thought they had them, but then they started scoring. They shut down after that," former varsity player Casey Sewell said. It was an emotional night for everybody. They had come so far.

Coach Jack Polson comforted the team with helpful words.

"We were missing players, and the conditions were bad. We still played phenomenally," Polson said.

Even though they accidentally scored against themselves twice, the boys put aside their anger and came together to end a good season.

Polson was never prouder. "I came here with high expectations for the team, and they exceeded them again and again," Polson said. Varsity ended its season with five wins, eight losses, and two ties.

The girls team lined up; the crowd beamed blue and gold as an announcer called out the girls names from the loud speaker. They were prepared to start the beginning of a terrific season.

The girl's soccer team was one of the most talented teams Mooresville had seen in years. Their season did not only result in many victories, but they also made history. Throughout the season, they were able to beat the record for the number of games won and the number of goals scored in a season. Their hard work paid off.

The varsity and junior varsity teams begin preparing in the early summer, practicing three days a week. As the hot summer progressed, the girls gradually moved up to practicing every day. By that point, the girls focused on the season ahead of them.

Throughout the season the girls played some tough games, but one game that the girls had looked forward to the most was to play the Plainfield Quakers. Plainfield had been the number one rival for the girls, and they felt determined to come out with a victory. The girls played an intense game, the highlight of their season.

"It was fun to watch the expression on everyone's faces when we beat Plainfield and won the confrence," Coach Jason Damron said.

The varsity girls pulled through and beat the Quakers 2-0, while the junior varsity lost a good game 2-3. Plainfield had been one of the teams that Mooresville really wanted to beat, and they succeeded. Although, junior varsity lost, the varsity game ended in a win for the Pioneers.

"We were so proud of our varsity team members, they fought for their victory," senior Taylor Painter said.

As the season came to a close, the girls played their final game against Center Grove. The girls fought hard during the game, but just couldn't pull it off. They lost a good game, and the girls were very disappointed as they walked away from the field looking at the scoreboard.

"I feel even though we didn't beat Center Grove in our final game, we were all winners at heart," sophomore Hannah Jones said. BY: JESSICA DYE

1. VARSITY PLAYERS STOOD on the sidelines waiting for the coach to call them over to begin the game. The girls would meet before every game to get excited and prepare mentally. "The Plainfield games was awesome; we knew we could win it," sophomore Claire Ronan said.

6. FRESHMAN GOALIE BRITTANY Taczylowski concentrates as she kicks off the game against New Palestine. They proceeded to play a hard game but came out with a tough loss.

7. SENIOR ESTEE OUT-CALT helps the team to win its second victory of the season against the Decatur Central girls. The Pioneers lead the entire game against the Hawks. " It's nice to see everybody stepping up for each other in order to get the win," Estee Outcalt said.

2. AT HALFTIME, the team gathers around Coach Jason Damron to discuss the next half of the game. Meeting together at halftime was crucial to the girls because it gave them a chance to correct their mistakes.

3. THE VARSITY TEAM warms up on the practice field and prepares for the big game against Plainfield. Along with warming up, the girls prepared by staying focused on the goal they had set to win the game.

4. SOPHOMORE VARSITY PLAYER Audrey Warren played her best in the bitter cold game against Center Grove. Warren was wide open as she aimed for the goal to score for the Pioneers. "The fields were muddy during the game, so that made it more of a challenge," sophomore Audrey Warren said.

5. SENIOR KAITE CIASTO tries to kick the ball to her teammate Taylor Painter. She had another opportunity to score against the Plainfield Quakers.

Seniors Gone, Season Lives On

With seniors leading the charge, the Cross Country teams charged towards a good season

The shuffling on the line stops; the flag raises, Bang! The race has begun. This was what the Boys and Girls Cross Country teams experienced through out the 2009 season.

The Cross Country team was more of a family than a team, whether it be their Friday night pasta dinners, their chilly creek runs, or showing their spirit at Homecoming. There always was a great connection that made the team so close.

The season was different for the guy's, because the team included only three upperclassmen compared to the seven underclassmen. The same went for the girls, who had only one senior on the team. Having only four captains didn't stop the seniors from becoming the key players on the team, though.

"Well we only had one captain/senior," junior Michelle Roberts said, "but she was the loudest person on the team, so she made it fun."

The seniors became the leaders in the team's eyes and there were two seniors who had been in the Cross Country program since their freshman year

"We were amazing, best in Mooresville XC history," senior Aaron Belcher said, about being a captain of the guys. Seniors were especially a crucial component, because of the amount of underclassmen who ran.

On the girls team there was lots of learning that happened because of the 2008 season. They lost a very vocal senior class; senior Emily Jones was there to step up and take the challenge of being the team's leader.

Coach Hamlin said, "The girl's team had a building season this year. We did not win many meets, but we had the largest team since I have been here." If the season were to be summed up in a couple words for both teams it would be a season of building a foundation. While the guy's team lost three of its top five runners they gained the experience. Even though the seniors were the leaders, the underclassmen stepped up and took a key role during the season. Many of whom had just began to tap into their potential.

The girl's team was much the same way, with many more runners coming out than in recent years, the team was new to cross country experience; that didn't slow them down with many of the girls breaking their personal records from the beginning of the season to the end.

With the season drawn to a close all that is left to do is break it out. In the mighty words of the guys Cross Country team, "Quack Quack Quack Quack 1..2..3 MXC!"

A New Kind of Leadership

1. SOPHOMORE ROBBIE BROWN prepares to play out the point as doubles partner Sophomore James Fields begins to serve the ball. This was Brown's first varsity match. "We played three sets, and were the last game on the courts," Brown said.

A Season Without Seniors

As the scorecards were flipped and the sophomore captain James Fields said. final scores recorded, Mooresville's Boys Tennis team came out on top in 2009's season opener against Owen Valley. This great start prepared them for a season unlike any other.

While most teams looked to their seniors for guidance during the season, the tennis team did not have any. The leadership role had been left in the hands of the younger players.

"We all picked up the leadership role," sophomore Robbie Brown said. "It took the whole team to take responsibility for our own actions."

Without seniors, the young team came together and helped each other out, which better prepared them for their next season.

"As the season went on and the matches increased, we found our spot on the court,"

Each match the boys played, they put up a fight, gaining a lot of experience along the way. Every player showed improvement in every match. This especially became noticeable towards the end of the season at the Edgewood Invitational where the team reached the championship, but Bedford defeated them in a close match.

"While it is always difficult to not win as many matches as you would like, as a young team, we are excited that we got so much experience," Coach Mike Teders said.

Although the boys may not have ended the season the way they would have liked, they gave themselves a chance of winning in a majority of their matches. Together they grew as a team and better prepared themselves for following seasons.

Fun Fore Juniors Team consists of five girls all in Grade 11

On August 3 the Girls Golf Team one by one got on the bus to set out for the Shelbyville invitational.

Being the first 18-hole match for three of the five returning juniors the bus ride had been filled with nerves, anxiety, and excitement.

With five returning juniors the Girls Golf Team had high expectations going into the fall season. All of the ladies lowered their average score from the previous year. This helped them break a nine-hole match goal of 180.

With being all juniors, the ladies were more than a team; they were friends. When one girl had a bad match, another girl on the team cheered them up.

"It was fun having my best friend on the team. She always knew how to cheer me up when I had a bad shot. We were all pretty close though, we have played together for three years and have fun every year," junior Kelsey Even said.

On September 19 the ladies walked on the bus at 11 a.m. to what might be the last time for the season. Filled with nerves and excitement they set off to Danville for sectionals.

"I was confident that the girls were going to give 100 percent, so they knew as long as they try and never give up I was going to be proud of them," Coach Ali Beam said.

Junior Kayla Robinson had a very good sectional match but ended up falling short by four strokes. She ended the 18-hole match leading the ladies with a score of 92. Even though they didn't make it through sectionals they ended up doing very well. This isn't going to stop them from preparing for the 2010 season.

It's Volleyball

The girls walked onto the court at Monrovia High School. Varsity Coach, Stephanie Burnett yelled, "Come On! Start Low, finish low." Junior Erin Wittell played well for the pioneers with 19 digs, along with Senior Maegan Callaway who put down nine kills and dominated the serving line with seven aces. The girls defeated Monrovia.

"Our season started off strong at our first tourney, The North Putnam Invitational, when we made it to the championship game but lost to Crawfordsville," junior Ashtyn Fisher said.

The girl's volleyball team started off strong, but had a tough season in '09. Working together, the girls knew they had many obstacles to overcome. "Two girls got hurt during the season, which caused us to move girls around on all teams. We were always changing our line up and we had to play positions we weren't use to playing," junior Erica Antic said.

The girls worked together to play to their potential with or without the full team. They enjoyed spending time together and improving as a team. "When we won games it was a great feeling. It's the best possible reward for all of the hard work the team put in during practice," JV Coach Lauren Foster said.

Win or lose the girls had fun being together as a team, and were ready to start working in their off season.

"I will miss the great fellowship with my teammates and the fun that we had at practice, but most of all, I will miss the playing time," freshman Bethany Neese said.

With five seniors leaving the team, the girls knew they would have to step up their game even more for 2010. The seniors' determination and work ethic would be greatly missed by the underclassmen.

"As a senior I will miss all of the inside jokes we had together," Kim Nelson said.

Under the coaching of Kristen Hilligoss, the freshman team ended its season with a record of 8 wins and 13 losses. JV ended with 5 wins and 7 losses, and varsity lead, by Stephanie Burnett and assisted by Kari Kenworthy, finished with a record of 8 wins and 24 losses.

Run the Race, Fight the Fight, Keep the Faith

Faced with adversity the football team rose to success.

Following an 8-3 season the year before, expectations were high for a team who brought 18 seniors back to the line up. The Mooresville High School football team didn't disappoint.

Starting in the winter, the dedicated players began attending camps, lifting and conditioning until the first official practice. The coaches preached the entire off season that with hard work and dedication, the team would be able to accomplish any feat.

Compared to previous seasons, bizarre events occurred frequently. The team played in two games in Lucas Oil Stadium, mud covered fields, earned a mid-state conference title, and witnessed a power outage following halftime.

"My most memorable moment was when we had to come back Saturday to play Plainfield, because the transformer blew and it was the muddiest game of our season. We were still able to win 13-12 which brought us the conference title," senior Evan Wooding said

There were successful seasons all around the Mooresville football family starting with the freshman season. The freshman completed their season with a record of 7-1. Their record proved the dedication that they displayed in the off-season truly elevated their level of play.

The Junior Varsity team accomplished an even better outcome. It completed its season with a perfect 8-0 record and earned the respect of every team it faced. The JV team members agreed that their most memorable moment occurred in a thrilling comeback win against Martinsville that helped secure an 8-0 record.

The players felt excited about the opportunities they had to play in Lucas Oil. Although the team lost its first game, the loss jumpstarted the work ethic the players used for the rest of the season. In their second game they redeemed themselves.

"I think the first time we played in Lucas Oil Stadium we were amazed by how big it was and the atmosphere, but the next time we showed up we were ready to compete and redeem ourselves," junior Aric Bigham said.

The biggest feat the players faced all year came in the second round of sectionals when Mooresville faced 4A powerhouse Cathedral, who had a number 1 ranking throughout the state. The players had no easy task. With the rain pouring down on them all game they gave Cathedral some of the best competition they had faced, but lost in a heartbreaker 24-9.

"My most memorable moment of the season was our final game of the season against Cathedral. Our team played with heart and courage to go toe to toe with the number one team in the state," Coach Mark Bless said.

With over 12 hours of practice a week, the competition cheerleaders pushed themselves to succeed with a victorious season. By placing no lower than fourth place at any competition, the squad gave themselves an outstanding reputation.

"The best part about competition is when you perform well and win. You feel like all your hard work has payed off," sophomore Sara Gilbert said.

The team consisted of seven freshmen, four sophomores, five juniors, and two seniors. To be on the team, all of these girls had to be able to do a standing backhandspring.

State Bound Senior wrestlers finish season strong

The Mooresville wrestling team started the year out with one of the biggest wrestling classes to ever come through Mooresville. Having only lost three seniors, the team appeared to be strong.

The team focused the beginning of the year on the basic moves in wrestling. This allowed all the new wrestlers to become more comfortable with the sport.

"The early practices are meant for learning technique and learning the basics; that's always the focus in the beginning of the season," head Coach Zach Errett said.

The varsity team wrestled tough competition the entire year. Varsity won 12 out of its 14 dual meets, losing only to Evansville Memorial by two points and Franklin Community.

The JV team also wrestled solid tournaments through out the season. The idea was to get the JV as many matches as possible in order to make them more varsity ready for the next year.

The team focused on goals to push them to work harder through out the year. Some of the Varsity wrestlers placed print outs of their goals in the wrestling room so they wouldn't forget why they were there.

"I wanted 35 plus wins, to win mid-state, sectionals, regionals, and semi-state. I also wanted to place at state. I was able to do all of that so I feel like I had a good season," senior Evan Wooding said.

By the end of the year when conference rolled around the varsity wrestlers were ready to bring a conference title back to Mooresville. After a good day of wrestling the team was in second place by a mere 3 ½ points. The team bounced back the next week at sectionals where they advanced 9 out of the 14 varsity wrestlers to regional's. The following week at regional's the team advanced 4 out of the 9 remaining wrestlers to the semistate.

At semi-state, Joey Juliano and Jake Swigert were knocked out the first round, leaving only senior wrestlers Todd Hacker and Evan Wooding. The following round of semi-state was the only thing that stood in the way of the senior wrestler's dreams of going to state.

They both pulled out victories that round. Hacker went on to place third in semi-state and Wooding was a semistate champ. The state bound wrestlers completed their goals of reaching the state tournament and looked to place in the top eight the following weekend.

"It was a great way to close the season and accomplish my final goals as a senior wrestler," senior Todd Hacker said.

Beginning on Friday night the seniors both won their first match earning them a spot in the top eight of their respective weight classes. The next day the wrestlers set their sights on a state championship. Although they came up short, Wooding and Hacker were still able to place in the state meet, which completed their goals for the season.

Overall the team did very well and they completed many of their goals they set as a team. Mooresville had two state place winner wrestlers, two academic all-state wrestlers, and one Indiana all star wrestler.

Mooresville Swimmers Dive into the Season

The cold winter sweeps over Mooresville, but while others are bundling up for warmth, theswinteen wasstripping down into swimsuits and jumping in to start the season. The 2009-2010 swim season was one that really bound the team together.

Shittige

"Entertaining and hilarious," sophomore Evan Dowinay explained about his experience.

The spirit of the team was higher compared to the previous years according to the team. These spirits may be what lead to an impromptusing-off-with the Plainfield swin team at a home most. These gooly times just brought the team doser to each other forming a sort of family connection.

With the team being one of the biggest ever to come through the school, it was also one of the youngest teams that had been assembled. Despite the age, they managed to put out a strong effort against their swimming counterparts, although it wasn't always an easy job to handle.

"Teaching the freshman and sophomores how to deal with life is a full time job," senior captain Matt Handrickson said.

senior ceptein Matt Hendrickson seid. The team grew with each race that went into the books. From the start, the ride was a little rocky, but the swimmers pulled it together to a happy win for the seniors for their senior nights. With one of most talented teams in recent years, Coach Dennis Davis was satisfied with the season.

"It's a good day in the neighborhood, one of the better seasons," Coach Dennis

Davis said.

There are a couple of records that were broken due to the fast swims of the team. One of the records set by senior Chelsea Bain was in the 100 Breaststroke where she clocked a time of 1:16.35. Fellow record breakers were: Aaron Wetzel in the 200 & 500 with a 1:54.47 and 5:24.9, Matt Hendrickson, Even Downey, Aaron Wetzel, and Jordan Bruce in the 400 free relay with a 3:47.49 and Chelsea Bain, Sarah Bonnewell, Andree Cornelison, and Callan Sweim.

"This year the team did better than over! We all improved, and the attitude on the team was avvecome," senior Emily Jones said.

The Team strives to Become Better

"Our team had very little experience returning from last year's Sectional Runner-up team, which brought concern to our scoring and rebounding game," Varsity Coach, Bob Carter said.

The Varsity Boys saw many losses during their season. They knew this was a year of building and working together to create a better basketball team. The team showed tremendous character during the difficult times. The varsity team ended their season 3-18, coached by Bob Carter, and assisted by Jeremy Manning.

"Our greatest accomplishments were being able to stick together and fight through adversity as a team," sophomore Brandon Smalling said.

The junior varsity team was made up of eight sophomores and two juniors.

"We shot the ball really well and kept the turnovers to a minimum. We had good team chemistry between the guys," JV Coach Oggy Brewer said.

JV finished its season 15-5; also going 6-0 in the conference. "I will miss playing with my friends, and practicing against the varsity," sophomore Drew Stahley said.

"The season went well, even though our record wasn't very well, it was a great experience and everyone had fun," freshman Taylor Woodward said.

As a team the boys played well together and they worked well as a team. The freshman team, lead by Coaches Dave Stinson, and Eric Fenwick completed their season 7-13.

"We won five more games than last year, which felt as if we made an accomplishment," freshman Broden Chapman said. BY: ERIN WITTELL

Impossible is Nothing Another record breaking season

Freshman

Going into practice everyday, freshman team members had one thing on their minds: work really hard to reach their goal to be undefeated.

When they defeated the Center Grove Trojans, the girls could see themselves almost accomplishing their goal.

"I loved when we won the Center Grove game by one point in overtime. The teamwork and spirit stayed positive and that was really cool to see," freshman Bailey McNalley said.

Junior Varsity

After losing the first game, the junior varsity team wasn't going to settle for defeat again. Although they practiced hard with varsity the girls still had fun making practice enjoyable.

"During one of our practices in the North gym there was a bird flying around that we named Chuck. After spending half of the practice with Chuck swooping down and pecking at the court, Jama chased him through the halls flapping her arms like a bird. It was hilarious," sophomore Amber Viles said.

Varsity

What do two new members in the 1000 point club, a school record of 25 wins in a season, conference champs, and sectional champs have in common?

The 2009-2010 varsity girls basketball team accomplished all of these things and more.

"This year's team was challenged by their state rankings and wanting to get back to semi-state. They also understood they had a bull's eye on their back and was going to receive the opponent's best game," Coach Mark Hurt said.

Although they had the challenge of playing on a new home court, the girls weren't going to let it affect them.

The girls ended their season as sectional champs and made it to the championship game of regionals.

"Our greatest accomplishments were winning sectionals again, making it to the regional championship again, winning conference and holding the record for most wins in a season," senior Ashley Johnson said. BY: SAMANTHA PERRY

"I was trying not to be nervous so I could make the free throw," freshman Sam Hare said.

"It was a challenging year, but I had girls that were hard working, and wanted to improve," Coach Traci Ball said.

The Varsity team started off its season a little shaky, but pulled it together as the season progressed.

"After our first five games I think a lot of teams thought we would be an easy win, but we pulled together and came back with a winning record," junior LeeDa Allen said.

The junior varsity team seems to have a different outlook of its season.

"Our season went great, we all bonded extremely well and became friends," freshman Courtney Everman said.

They ended their season with a winning record. Many of the girls were sad it was over.

"I will miss the support from the team, even when we were loosing, we tried our best," sophomore Rachel Perry said. The Varsity team ended its season 12 - 13 toached by Traci Ball. Junior Varsity was coached by Suni Johnson and ended its season 13 - 3:

Pioneers Play Hard throughout the Season

The Mooresville Baseball team entered the season with a fresh start in 2010. As all their hours of hard work and practice came together, they entered their season with one simple goal: play hard.

The Varsity players entered their season with a new head coach. English teacher Mr. Wes Neese proudly took the position to lead the team.

"We have high hopes for our season this year," Neese said.

As the season started up, the Varsity Pioneers displayed hard work. The Pioneers played Decatur Central towards the beginning of the season and made a big win. The team brought home the Battle of 67 Trophy for the first time in four years.

"Winning the Battle of 67 was my most memorable moment of the season," senior John Green said.

During 2010's season, the JV team showed improvement. The team worked hard throughout their season, and better prepared themselves for following seasons.

The freshmen team had a successful season in 2010. Many of the games had very close scores. The players found their spot on the field and played well in every game.

Together as a team, the players grew in talent and friendship, and finished off their season knowing one thing: they played hard.

"The season doesn't mean anything to me compared to the friends that I have made playing this awesome game," senior Nick Perry said.

A Season to be Remembered Girls Have the Best Start to their Season in Years

The swing of a racket is all people hear when they go by the courts of the Mooresville girl's tennis team.

The team had been preparing for what would end up being the best start to their season in five years. The girls had been building their team up for the past few years. The team consisted of six seniors who had been playing on the team during their whole high school career.

"The seniors are really supporting, and it's really fun being on the team with them," freshman Meghann Fitzpatrick said.

The girls began practicing in early March to get back to playing daily. It was important for the airls to work on their footwork before their season began. They also use that time to work out all the problems.

"I think we were so successful, because we worked harder at practice and improved our skills," sophomore Kristen Wyatt said.

Halfway through a spectacular season, the girls headed off to the annual Shelbyville Invitational. The team battled its way through the tournament and ended up placing second out of eight teams. That was the first time that the girls had been very successful in the tournament.

The team also gained a new volunteer assistant coach this year, Greg McGuffey. Mc-Guffey had played tennis for 45 years and decided to help this year with both the boys and girls teams. He had a lot of experience in playing doubles, and that is where the team needed some help.

"I really enjoyed working with all the girls in the program. They all had really positive attitudes," McGuffey said.

All together the girls had a wonderful season. They did their best to become close as a team and work together. Even though they played separate matches, they were still a team.

All you need is hard work and dedication

Walking on to the first tee box on hole number one, the boys golf team members started their season in full swing.

With an upcoming freshman, Broden Chapman leading the pack, the boys had a good start coming of the season.

"My best moment of the golf season was when I was medalist against Plainfield. I beat two seniors," freshman Broden Chapman said.

The boys had to contribute hard work and dedication every day. Practicing on the range, working on chipping, and focusing while putting is only some of the few skills needed to work for success.

"This game is mental as well as physical, so we always need our head focused and be ready to come to practice to learn and get better," sophomore Josh Wheeler said.

Walking off the green on hole number nine the boys golf team had a rush of excitement and the feeling of accomplishment for a season well done.

"Golf is a learning experience; we have to take it day by day. We're rebuilding a team to be Stronger and ready for next year," Coach Ernie Adams said.

Success

Although the girl track team didn't win many meets, they had a lot of individual success.

Mandy Fisher, a freshman, led the team during the season in points. She ran the 100 meter hurdles, 300 meter hurdles, the 4X400 meter relay, and also did long jump. She made it to the state meet in the 300 meter hurdles.

"Running and jumping on varsity this year gave me a lot of experience for upcoming seasons and it allowed me to become a leader as a freshman," M. Fisher said.

Along with Fisher, there were other contributors to the overall team score. Juniors Jessica Norris and Ashytn Fisher stepped up big in their events during the season. It was a common sight to see them racing for first place through out the year in their respective events.

"With the team only having two seniors this year I knew I needed to step up and be a leader for the team," Norris said.

Amber Viles, a sophomore, led the lady's for the year in both shot and discus. She was able to score in almost every meet and pulled out some impressive top three finishes.

The 4X100 and 4X400 meter relays also scored for the girls through out the season. The 4X100 consisted of Norris, Bowling, Warren, and Sharp and the 4X400 consisted of M. Fisher, A. Fisher, Sharp, and Bowling.

Coach Julie Hamlin understood with only two seniors and a very young team that it would be hard to win many of their meets this year. She saw it as a building year and hoped that the next year the team will accomplish more with the experience from this year.

"Having a young team was both good and bad we only had two seniors, but we were able to get the younger girls a lot of varsity experience," Hamlin said.

The guys track learn rose to new heights with the help of a new freshman class and last chance seniors.

Among the many new freshmen that came out, there were four who really made an impact on the team. Michael Passmore, Jordan Ooley, Eli Brezendine, and Trey Faull were these stand out freshman. Passmore lead the Pioneers through out the year in the 400 clocking a 51.7 which got him to the State Meet, while Ooley raced out front in the 800 with a 2:03. Brezendine handled the longest race in track, 3200 with a 10:20; Faull took to the hurdles to show his form in the 110 and 300 hurdles with times of 17.64 and 45.61 respectively.

"Being a freshman on varsity was fun and it has really made me better," freshman Trey Faull said.

Seniors really brought it hard for their last year in high school, there were four that stood out in their events. Evan Wooding, Nathan Veddar, Zach Rothenberger, Andrew Gibson, and Britt Morris were the seniors that charged through the season. First time thrower Wooding lead the throwers in shot put with 43ft, Veddar was a first time hurdler that ran 110 and 300 hurdles in times of 17.14 and 43.12 respectively. Rothenberger lead the Pioneers in High Jump with 6ft 2in, Gibson took care of the 200 in 22.94, and Morris ran solid in the 800 with a 2:04.

"Even though it was my first year, I could tell the seniors were a major part of leading the team." senior Nathan Veddar said.

Two of the few varsity athletes that didn't fall into the category of freshman or senior were the junior-sophomore combo in the 100 meter dash. Aric Bighman and Matt Gibson had times of 11.2 and 11.35 respectively. These two were also State Qualifiers in their event.

Along with the great efforts of the individuals, the team ran to a 22-6 record. With Conference champs and State Qualifiers in the 4x100 relay, (Hacker, M.Gibson, Ringer, A. Gibson) time of 43.72 and the 4x800 relay, (Ooley, Belcher, Morris, Passmore) time of 8:08.83. The relays were the powerhouse of the team this year and were interchangable. the theme of this season was stepping up to fill the shoes of fallen teammates.

"Next man up," said Coach Swalls.

The 4x400 had a good display of this motto when their lead off leg senior Damon Martin went done with a pulled hamstring. Sticking to his words Swalls put together the team of (Passmore, Morris, Hacker, Rothenberger) that together ran to a 2nd place finish at conference. This motto was also used for the 4x100 at conference as well, subbing in senior James Ringer for Junior Aric Bigham.

Excellence

Academics Standards Raised

Students showed excellence by the effort put forth into learning and participating.

Many new classes opened and students filled up their schedules with classes needed to look good on resumes. Senior Jacob Gabbard and sophomore Alex Drabing showed excellence by participating on the broadcast team.

"Well, each day I spend two class periods down here and I also spend a lot of time at home editing. A lot of times on Saturday I will come in to work on things that need to be done," Gabbard said.

Being the one who taught this class would be an experience too. "I enjoy teaching both English and advising broadcast," Mr. Andy Marine said. "I find the greatest joy is watching excellence, teamwork and developing leaders. My overall greatest satisfaction is that broadcast is all student produced, I don't have touch a mouse."

Even underclassman could participate in this class. "Just getting to know people that I thought I would never had been friends with, and learning things that I would never know without taking this class would have to be the best experience of this class so far," sophomore Alexander Drabing said. These students showed excellence.

A class that was new to our senior students was IVY Tech English. Seniors Shelby Kanouse and Andy Kays said, "We do think that this class is worth taking. Think of it this way, we are only half way through the year and we already feel like Shakespeare!"

Senior Nicholas Boyden was very much prepared for how hard this class was. "I took the IVY Tech. English to get a taste of the college environment to help with my overall preparation," Boyden said.

Taking a college class without anyone to give advice or to say how hard or easy it is was a brave thing for these students to do. This was showing excellence by being the first to experience something new.

Freshman Cheyenne Colburn had some interesting view points on her first year in high school.

"The rules haven't really changed much from last year in middle school, but they are way stricter on you then before," Colburn said. "Being with the juniors and seniors is hard too, because you have to act mature around them." Colburn showed excellence by being prepared for the future and following the rules during her freshman year. BY: Tessa Waggoner centrates in his lab for his lab in AP Chemistry. "This was one of our most interesting labs. Lighting and melting stuff in class what could be better? I was just thinking one thing, please don't explode," Cox said.

8. JUNIOR RACHEL BALL gets prepared to cut into a cow heart that she has to dissect for Anatomy. "It was disgusting, it smelled bad, and was massive. It was nice to interact with the heart instead of just leaning about it on paper." Ball said.

Math Students ...

Working out everyday problems.

"Math is fun, sometimes challenging, but we will all have to go through it, and we all will get through it," junior Dustin Gardner said.

Math was a required class everyone had to take. Whether they took pre-calculus, calculus, algebra, geometry, or discrete students had to study to pass. Many of the classes can be fun when the teachers do fun assignments like when students made parachutes in pre-calculus or made constructions in geometry.

"My favorite activity was constructions," freshman Megan Small said. "It was fun because we got to color and make designs and I like to color and draw."

If a student had a hard time in math there are plenty of ways they could get help. One way was that they could have asked a teacher to tutor them. The math teachers made time for any student who asked and stayed after school to give the student individual prep. Some students help each other by getting together to study.

"On the weekends, Heidi Shumacher and I study and play math games. We love math, and the best way for us to learn is by helping each other figure it out," sophomore Sarah Malicote said.

The worst thing that could have happened to a student is getting a whole new teacher in the middle of the semester. No matter what the cause, no student really wanted a new teacher, especially after finally getting used to the one they had. Unfortunately for those who had Mr. Jody Monaghan they had to adjust to a new teacher, Mr. Shafer, when Mr. Monaghan resigned.

"Math has always come easy to me. I like teaching math at Mooresville," Shafer said. "I like the kids, and I like knowing I have helped prepare them for their future."

Another teacher who left was Mrs. Cindy Bond. Mrs. Bond had gone into school for a 6:45 meeting on August 20, 2009 when she started having contraction.

"I timed all the contractions and went into the meeting and told everyone that I was in labor and I got to the hospital by 7:30, and had my baby, Sadie, at 10:05," Bond said.

While Mrs. Bond was on leave, Mrs. Christian Owens took over Mrs. Bond's classes. Mrs. Owens went from just teaching geometry classes to teaching discrete classes and geometry honors classes.

"It was nice to take over Mrs. Bonds classes. I got to teach seniors that I taught when they were younger, but it was also stressful because I had to make a bunch of new plans," Owens said.

While Mrs. Owens taught Mrs. Bonds classes, she had two geometry classes without teachers. In order to fix the issue, Mrs. Goodwin and Mrs. Bonds substitute teacher took over Mrs. Owens classes.

"I was out for eleven weeks and now I am out of sick days," Bond said. "I enjoyed my time at home with my daughter but I am also glad to be back teaching." BY: CAROLYN FERRILL

3. SENIOR KELSEY THRASHER works on her parachute for precalculus. "It was nice to have a break from regular math work and get to have fun by making the parachutes." Thrasher said.

4. JUNIOR KEITH GOODWIN watches his parachute as it floats down to the gym floor. Mrs. Manions class made parachutes to see how well each one would work. "I like math. It's a subject that comes easily to me without really having to study," Goodwin said. My favorite

Math class is ...

"Geometry is my favorite because everything makes sense in why it works like it does instead of just having formulas like you do in Algebra," freshman Megan Small said.

"Algebra II is my favorite because Mr. Shafer has a sense of humor and I liked pi day," sophomore Kyle Bryant said.

> "I like geometry best because it's easier for me than the other math classes," sophomore Kate James said.

"My favorite would have to be precal because I have a lot of my friends in my class and I had Mrs. Manion as my teacher," junior Keith Goodwin said.

> "I didn't really have a favorite math class but if I had to choose it would be geometry because Mrs. Bond is funny and helped me understand [math] better by teaching at my level," senior Josh Taylor said.

"MKS, PATEL, SHE is a kind-hearted person and wants everyone to successfully succeed." Junior Carley Mitchell said.

MR. NEESE, BECAUSE he is nice and fun," freshman Paige Martin said.

"Ms. Barnes. She's always down to help a slacker out," junior Jeff VanWinkle said.

"MRS. PHILLIPS WAS my favorite English teacher; she knew how to take information and put it into my brain in such a way that I could deeply understand it, rather that simply understanding it on a surface level," senior Dee Peters said.

"Mr. Allen is my favor ite, because he look just like Mr. Incred ible," senior Stephar Krebs said.

1. "My class brought in the most can goods for the can food drive during Thanksgiving so student council gave up a McDonald's breakfast to celebrate," sophomore Audrey Warren said.

 SENIOR JOHN GREEN reads in his English 12 class with Mr. Zollman. "I really liked my English class this year. The triangle of knowledge helped me a lot!" Gree aid.

3. JUNIOR CALEB TAYLOR outside for Mrs. Phillips English class. "We were grooving. Following in the inspiration of nature and taking time to connect and simplify, simplify, simplify," Caleb said.

4. "I AM AN avid learner, and I enjoy pushing my brain to the max," said senior Trevor Chappelow when asked why he joined Ivy Tech English.

Write On English: A Place Where Creativity Has No Limit

English at Mooresville High school was diverse in its many classes. Whether they took the basics or strived for the more creative classes offered.

"English is very important and you can't go without it, if you want to be successful then open your eyes and learn to your full capability," junior Kayla Robinson said.

In English people learned about literary works and they studied methods of writings and the inspiration behind the creation of those stories. But they didn't just learn how to read or understand them, they also created there own.

Ms. Eickhoff's sixth period sophomore Honors English class wrote and published a book for a Service Learning project.

"Our book is called Imperceptible because it's about people who lead ordinary lives but do something great within them," Mrs. Sharon Eickhoff said.

She decided to have her students do this to make a connection to the non-fiction unit and to allow an outlet of creativity. Also to be a published author was a really cool thing.

"The most rewarding aspect of teaching high school students is being able to make real-life connections through the curriculum and really exhibit to them why what we are doing really does matter," English teacher Mr. Jason Zollman said.

Mooresville High school students learned real life things that would help them in there very near future.

" I have learned how, when I write my college acceptance letters to use a wide variety of vocabulary words, and that will definitely help in the future," junior Ashley McQueen said. Even though everyone had to take English, only some totally embraced it.

"I want to become an English teacher. I chose this career, because I want to make English fun for the next generation of kids," senior Kyle Brewer said.

Not everyone became a Writer or an English professor, but everyone took everything they learned and grew from it.

BY: ASHLEY MEADOR

"All of us juniors were grooving on trees and just connecting with nature," junior Spencer Wilson said.

Mrs. Ann Phillip`s junior English classes were "grooving" on their feild trip to Brownsburg.

"Grooving is were you go out into nature to take time to appreciate life. We studied Thoreau and Emerson. Thro reau was a man who left his normal life behind to go into nature and just think. I've been doing this for approximately 18 years and it has become a revered tradition," English teacher Mrs. Phillips said.

5. SOPHOMORE CON-NOR LYNNE expresses his love for reading while picking out a book in the library. "There's nothing better than curling up in the local Starbucks with my snuggy and a book from Twilight quaffing a venti strawberry and creme frappuccino," he said. 6. IN APRIL, the MHS English Department hosted it's first Book Fair at Barnes and Nobel in Plainfied. Staff members and students conducted readings, created displays and were able to by books with funds earned on behalf of the department at the book fair.

History Classes Take Their Learning to the Limit

"Everything is legal if you don't get caught," senior Michelle Rainbolt said.

To her, this is something she has learned that will help her later in life. She got this humorous quote from government teacher Mr. Jeff Franklin.

"He's hilarious and chill, and down to earth, he likes to joke around and have fun," Rainbolt said.

Word on the street was government is one of the most challenging classes seniors would take in high school. Seniors must pass this class in order to graduate. So underclassmen, prepare yourself.

During students' junior year, they got a chance to push their knowledge to the max. That class would be AP U.S. History.

"Be ready to write a lot of essay exams," junior Kayleigh White said.

But this class wasn't all serious. Students got a lot of laughs from Mrs. Joyce Gilly.

"Her stories and sense of humor is one thing I like about her," junior Jack Waters said, "and the cockroach story."

Sophomores were the lucky ones. They didn't have to take a Social Studies class, unless they failed that class their freshman year.

So, freshman year is where it all starts. It's dumping out all the puzzle pieces and start working on the corners, because those are the easy parts. One class freshmen could take was Geography with Mr. Jesse Burgess.

"He's a really funny teacher," freshman Dalton Kelly said.

Mr. Burgess makes up really great games for learning that students love. He strives to make his students do the best they can. If Kelly goes on a game show and is asked were some weird country is, he'll have Mr. Burgess to thank.

"American Idol represents America because you get to see people make fools of themselves," Allen said. 1. SENIORS LASONDRA LAND and Ashley Terry work on a speaking activity in AP Spanish IV. Hola! Bonjour!

Foreign Language Classes Welcome Change

¡Hola clase! ¿Como estás? Students heard this often at the beginning of their Spanish classes. Those unfamiliar with the foreign language classes may not have noticed the changes that occurred throughout the department.

Change occurred with the Spanish courses offered at MHS. Mooresville began offering AP Spanish IV to interested students. Many chose to take the class to prepare themselves for college, while others took it because they just enjoy learning about the culture.

"The class has helped me learn a lot more vocab and become a better Spanish speaker and writer," senior AP Spanish IV student Ricky Redelman said.

During class, the AP students had to speak Spanish the whole time. Students quickly found out that vocabulary, as well as reading and writing, came to be a major part of the class.

Foreign language classes also welcomed a new teacher to MHS in 2009. Mr. Michael Haisten became the teacher for French I, II, and III.

"He's made the whole curriculum more challenging, so everyone is trying to get used to his way of teaching," senior French III student Chloe Brizendine said.

With a tougher curriculum, students became better prepared for their futures, whether they chose to continue on with French or not. Over all, students enjoyed learning about the French language and culture.

"Some days we get to listen to French music or watch French news and learn about what life is really like," Brizendine said.

Second semester, Spanish II teacher Mrs. Kori Swalls returned to MHS. Students who had been in Mrs. Alicia Richhart's Spanish classes changed teachers halfway through the year. Changing teachers also meant students had to learn from a new teaching style.

"I'm very glad to be back at MHS," Swalls said. "Since I left, we have adopted a new textbook but other than that, things are pretty much the same."

⁶MHS made changes that would continue to benefit its students and encourage more students to continue learning Spanish and French. ¡Adios! Au revoir!

Bring the Pain and the Rewards

Physical Education Flexing to be the Best

"Are we running 40s today? You guys ready for basketball?" These questions could be heard fluttering the halls of Mooresville High throughout the year. The two most active classes offered were Physical Education and Advanced Physical Education. Most students enjoyed their time spent in the weight room lifting with Coach Mark Bless and Mirs. Tiffany Thompson.

"Ireally enjoy Coach Bless's APC dass, because he works us hard to keep us in shape," sophomore Tyler Sunderland said.

While a lot of the students took APG to get in shape and to bulk up, this dass was offered to anyone willing to take the challenge to better their own physical wellness. Underdassmen started their years out with P.E. class. Most of the student body refer to this class as "gym".

dass as "gym". "I enjoy gym dass because it's easy and it brings your GRAup," freshman Brent Moore said.

The students enjoyed running to keep the cardiovascular system in check and healthy, while games like kick ball and football improved the hand eye coordination. These dasses, although they were fun and enjoyable, provided a great foundation to better and maintain the health of Mooresville High students. Teachers, as well as students, felt better after a good work out during dass.

"It's nice to see improvement from the girls in APC dass. I can really see their fitness level improvement," Mrs. Thompson said

Physical Education teachers believed that the students were getting a good experience on how to take care of themselves physical and starting as treshman was a great idea to instill the ideas their first year in high school.

Mooresville's Physical Education and Advanced Physical Conditioning programs allowed the students to expand their muscles as well as the minds. They taught students the importance of healthy living and finishing the sets. After gym class several students went on to be in APC.

Apples to Oranges

Leading charge in healthy living

The cardiovascular system, healthy foods and child development were areas of study that were explored by students. Health and wellness was a mandatory dass at Mooresville. It was designed to teach about how our body works and why it does what it does.

"I teach health, because I enjoy teaching others how to live a healthy lifestyle," Ms. Julie Hamlin said. Health was not the only dass offered to show how to take care of one's body. Child Development was a dass that did what its name suggested, which was to teach about the health of children. This dass drew in students who enjoyed health and wish to study a smaller aspect in greater detail.

These two courses were different about the area of study. Where Health covered a lot in the semester dass, Child Development stuck to the childhood area of study.

"I learned so much in Child Development that I will never forget," senior Ashli Samples said.

All students were required to take health in order to graduate from high school.

"I enjoy learning about my bodily functions and carbohydrates," sophomore Rilay Beasley said.

Interns at MHS

At Mooresville High School senior students had the opportunity to take on an internship in a career that interested them.

The program offered a good learning environment and it was great practice for a career in that field. Students were free to choose the job they wished as long as their choice was looked over and approved by the school.

In order to have been a part of an internship the student must have had a certain GPA, good attendance and must have been on track to graduate.

"We look at attendance because we want to make sure that the student will show up to the workplace and do a good job," Guidance director, Mrs. Debra Page said.

Courtesy, motivation, maturity and other positive characteristics were also needed. The student needed to make a good impression for themselves as well as for the school.

Internships used to only be available at St. Francis Hospital of Mooresville. The new program included a variety such as a vet working at Tender Loving Care, students teaching at the local elementary schools, working at the Mooresville Times, and even working at the Morgan County Sheriff's Department like senior Ashley Jackson.

"I perform the daily duties of the jail workers. I've done book-ins, mug shots, inmate transfers, DNA samples and I've even hand-cuffed people," Jackson said.

Jackson enjoyed working at the jail because it was a good stepping stone to a career in sociology and human studies.

PULSE editor in chief Melanie Laurendine had an internship at the Mooresville Times.

"This program is a good thing for our students and we hope to expand it," Mrs. Page said.

Business Class Helps Students Prepare for Their Futures

"When will I ever use this after high school?" That was a popular question asked by most students at Mooresville.

The students in Ms. Traci Ball and Mrs. Dana Dillman's business classes hardly ever had that question cross their minds. Just about everything they learned in business class could be applicable later on in life.

The Business Department offered a variety of classes. Some students took computer applications to learn how to make things such as cover letters, letterheads, and resumes.

"Last semester I had my freshman level career planning class complete a job shadow experience," business teacher Ms. Ball said.

The freshman had to choose one career of interest and find someone with that career that they could job shadow for a day. It helped the students to learn what education they need to pursue their career of interest and also how to be productive on the job site.

"I am taking computer applications because I want to know how to use the tools and advantages the computer offers," freshman Trey Faull said.

Other students decided to take a more complicated class such as accounting.

"It is at times challenging but I think that's what keeps it interesting," sophomore Hallie Drake said.

A class that many students took in their high school careers was personal finance. The students said that they learned how to calculate gross pay, overtime payment, social security taxes, medicare taxes, self employment taxes, how to write checks and use a check book, how to use a debit card, and most importantly for students, money management.

"I chose to take personal finance because I wanted to learn more about financing before I head off to college this fall," senior Brittany Maurer said.

By the end of the semester, business students had learned how to prepare for a job interview and the work force, fill out many forms such as tax forms and accounting forms, how to manage money, and much more useful information.

Lights, Camera, Action! Classes show off performing skills

Although many students earned their art and music credits through choir and art classes, a select few gained theirs through the theatre arts class taught by Mrs. Melanie Kassen.

The classes began the year learning the basics of acting and stage presence. They used much of their first term learning how to perform in front of crowds. They played improv games and performed short skits which improved their acting ability and volume control.

Once the second term started, Mrs. Kassen informed the class they would perform a Christmas play. The plays they performed were written by Advanced Theatre Arts students.

"I like to see all the new talent that comes from the Christmas play and I like it when they come out for the spring play," theatre arts teacher Melanie Kassen said.

The class worked on their play for the rest of the semester. They distributed parts for their classmates and started making props for the big night.

"Preparing for the Christmas play may have been boring at times, but performing it in front of people and making them laugh made it all worth it," senior Ricky Redelman said.

Finally it was there, the night the class worked for all semester. Mrs. Kassen classes performed two different shows over two nights. After the play ended many of the students were pleased with their individual class's performance. "We took Mooresville by storm, this place will never be the same, we changed Mooresville's take on theatre for the better," senior Shelby Kanouse said.

Mrs. Kassen also taught speech during the year. The students learned the basics of presenting speeches in front of their peers. They were given several assigned topics such as fairy tale speeches, debates, and demonstrative speeches.

"My favorite speech was the fairy tale speech. We had to say the story as if we were talking to little kids. It was fun because I brought in a giant penguin and told the story of Happy Feet," senior Zach Rothenberger said.

MHS students

gain new opportunity to express themselves

How do you express yourself? Art students at Mooresville High School would say by the mark of a pencil or a stroke of a paintbrush. Mr. Brinton Farrand started a new Advanced Placement Art class which challenged upper level art students.

Students took interest in the new AP class. The class required prerequisites of other art classes taken at the school. Students who took AP Art were able to receive college credit from the artwork they produced.

"To improve next years AP Art class I will have more scheduled critiques for the students' artwork," AP art teacher Mr. Farrand said.

A teacher and peer critique of AP art student's artwork was crucial throughout the year. This was in order to prepare for the AP art final. The final included a slideshow presentation of 24 exceptional pieces of art and questioning of their work.

Junior Ashtyn Fisher said she enjoyed her AP Art experience. Being surrounded by other students who appreciated art inspired her. Art was something she said she would keep as a future hobby.

"I saw great improvement in my artwork because of the AP class," Fisher said.

The Art Department at Mooresville High School allowed students to further their passion of art. Adding a more challenging art class to the curriculum showcased the potential artists of the future.

Beginner art classes also worked hard completing projects such as macramé and printmaking. Freshman Taelar Burris chose macramé as her favorite project in her 2D-3D Art class.

"In art you get to use your own thoughts and make something cool out of it," Burris said.

All the art classes enabled students to express themselves through art and design. The possibilities were endless with blank canvases waiting for the mark of a pencil or a stroke of a paintbrush.

"I really like taking time out of my school day to relax and work on an art project," junior Megan Niederer said.

Industrial Technology

Students are able to get a bands experience

Sparks fly and loud noises come from the rooms as the students rush around hoping to be successful on their projects.

Mr. Funk's fourth period manufacturing processes class had worked long and hard on their biggest project of the semester. The project consisted of two students working together to modify a bike. The students were required to make ten changes to their bike by the end of April, which gave them around four months to complete the project.

"It's a lot of hard work when you are trying to make a bike better than it already is," junior Kyle Dye said.

After all the work is put into their bikes, they were then put to the test. Once the boys reached their deadline, they rode their bike around the track one full time for their final grades. Their work for the semester all came down to when they pedaled their grade to the finish line. "It's cool because we get to work on our bikes for the whole semester with our partners to try and make the bike better," junior Kevin Copeland said.

There are various other classes available for industrial technology. One of the most popular classes was construction systems. During this class the students learned various amounts of skills by doing projects.

"The students really seem to like the projects. It is great to teach students using a 'hands-on' approach," Mrs. Lindy Scott said.

The industrial technology department has grown every year at Mooresville. The classes were very important to students because it allowed them to work with different things and still learn from them. It showed the students that when they worked hard at something they can have huge success.

2. SENIOR SAM SIEFKER and junior Rebekah Gerholdt learn how bridges are made in construction systems. This class helped students learn how things are made. "It wasn't too difficult, but it was time consuming," Siefker said.

3. JUNIOR KYLE DYE makes changes to his bike project. Manufacturing Processes class members welded their bikes to alter them and make them better. "I like the class, because it lets you work with different things," Dye said.

4. SOPHOMORE ROBBIE BROWN builds his bridge with his partners. It took their class various weeks to build their bridges. "My bridge was fun to make because I like building and destroying things," Brown said.

5. THE BOYS IN fourth period Manufacturing Processes class take their bike apart. The boys worked on this project for weeks. It was the biggest project of their semester.

What do you like most about...

"Man-upacturing processes helps you build character," senior Steven Tolnay said.

"I like weld-ins because it could ins because it a future ins because with a future profession," junior help you with a future profession, Copeland Kevin aid.

Top 5 Memories

"The field trip to the dairy farm, because we watched mother cows give birth. It was amazing," sophomore Rebecca Gillie said.

> "The class was not at all how I thought it would be. I had no idea it would be so hands-on, but I did love doing the dissections. It was a lot of fun," sophomore Jessica Myrick said.

"I remember all the dissections the most because I really don't like that kind of stuff, and it smelled really bad," sophomore Monique DeRee said.

> "When we made butter and Ice cream because it was really tasty, and it was really fun to make," freshman Katy Hendrickson said.

"I liked whenever we would do handson things with animals and I also liked the field trip to the dairy farm the best, because it was a lot of fun getting to see how to milk a cow," freshman Tori Gilbert said.

1. FRESHMEN JORDAN BELCHER and Jessica McFarland work on putting together their pigs. "We are making pigs to help us learn about genetics," McFarland said. "I liked this project, because I like making different crafts." 2. FRESHMAN MACKENSIE HOHLT waits for her fellow classmate to finish using the paint so she could finish painting her pig. "I like this class, because it is all about animals," Hohlt said. "My favorite thing we did in the class was when we learned about horses. It was very interesting."

3. SOPHOMORE JESSICA MYRICK paints her pig pink. "This project was really fun. I love to paint, and I got the pink paint all over my hands," Myrick said. "I was a mess."

4. AGRICULTURE TEACHER MRS. WEISS prepares all the plants in anticipation of the annual plant sell held by the agriculture department. "We hold the plant sale in April every year and it is run by the kids from my fourth period class. We start growing the plants in January to get them ready to sell in April," Mrs. Weiss said.

5. ONE OF THE hanging flowers usually sold at the plant sale. The plant sale was held from April 26 - 29. They sold at least 8,000 plants at the plant sale.

Agriculture... It's About More Than Just Plants

Agriculture was a department consisting of seven different classes: animal science, advanced animal science, landscaping, plant and soil science, food science, natural resource management, and horticulture.

"I grew up on a farm and growing up I was in 4-H, and FFA, " Mrs. Tonya Weiss said. "I love teaching all of the agriculture classes, because I get to teach a variety of things everyday so I never have to teach the same thing over again."

Horticulture had to do with the study of plants. A lot of the students who took Horticulture are also a part of the FFA and had to take an agriculture class to continue being in FFA.

"I am in FFA and I needed to take an agriculture class to stay in it but the thing I like most about horticulture is the annual plant sale in April. I also loved when we made Christmas center pieces. It was a lot of fun for me," junior Bridgette Ferris said.

Most students who signed up for an agriculture class usually just needed a class to fill their schedule and didn't expect it to be fun. Even though it might have sounded like a boring class, agriculture could be surprising. There were lot of fun activities to participate in throughout the year.

"I took horticulture, because I thought it would be a new thing to learn. I also didn't think it would turn out to be as fun as it was," senior Emilee Lloyd said. Another class that was offered in the agriculture building was animal science. Animal science was counted as an actual science, so students interested in animal science could replace advanced science or some other science class with animal science.

"I want to be a vet, so I have enjoyed all the dissections we have done this year," freshman Ashley Shorney said.

Animal science was sort of like biology, but students learned a lot more about animal bodies then the human body. Students also made different things out in the agriculture building such as butter and ice cream made from liquid nitrogen. Students in animal science also took a field trip to The Fair Oaks dairy farm.

"The field trip to the dairy farm was the best thing we did all year. I got to see how to milk a cow. Watching a cow give birth was also one of the most amazing things I have ever seen," sophomore Brenda Smalling said.

If a student was interested in becoming a vet, doing animal dissections and learning all about animals, then animal science was an excellent class to take. If a student was more interested in plants, being in the FFA and partaking in the plant sale than horticulture, landscaping or plant and soil science was a good class to take.

1. SOPHOMORE KATIE KAYS listens to Indianapolis Star reporter Curt Cavin. "The whole class was paying attention to Mr. Cavin when he was talking about his job," Kays said.

2. "I AM ACTING like my normal dorky self, doing math and eating pop tarts, that's pretty much a typical day in school for me," sophomore Amber Viles said.

3. "IN JOURNALISM II we were doing a photography unit and we walked around school to find the best lighting. We picked the best lighting spot in the cafeteria," junior Erica Antic said.

A day in the life of...

A Yearbook Student

As the bell rang at the beginning of class, while other students would be chatting with their friends, the yearbook staff got down to business.

They started with a meeting on who will take that week's event photos then to brainstorming on what would make the yearbook better. Writing stories, cropping photos, and designing pages were only a few of the daily routines that go on in the yearbook classroom. To some students it might have sounded simple, but a lot of thinking and hard work went into the yearbook making process.

"I like yearbook, because it's a small class so everyone gets to know each other and becomes comfortable working together," junior Erin Wittell said.

At the end of the class the yearbook staff felt happy, because they just finished a deadline, but just to come back the next day and start all over.

148

A Journalism I and II Student

Journalism 1 and Journalism 11 allowed students to get a better insight to the writing world.

Journalism I gave a basic learning on how to write like a journalist. Photography and yearbook skills were also some things learned in Journalism I.

"Learning about photography and broadcast were some of the fun things I did in journalism," freshman Chelsie Bingham said.

Journalism II was simply just a more advanced version of journalism I. They got a creative look into the journalism world. Making CD covers was only one of the very fun projects Journalism II students completed.

"We did a lot of creativity things to help learn, and I like the yearbook unit when we got to look at old yearbooks and design our own cover and theme," junior Erica Antic said.

A Broadcast Student

On August 13, when students were trying to catch up with friends, the broadcast staff started training for the first showing of Wake Up and Fast Break.

While the student body only saw the final product, a lot went into making that perfect show. When looking in the broadcast room students saw a green screen, but when watching it on the television students see a cool background.

The daily routine in the broadcast room started with evaluating the previous show, going to their assigned groups, and filming. To end the day, they edited the show and watched their hard work on the television.

"The best part of being on broadcast is you get to see yourself on T.V." junior Andrea Cornelison said.

All of this hard work may seem like chaos to an average student, but was only an average day for the broadcast staff.

4. JUNIOR RACHEL HAST-INGS took a tour around the school for a Journalism II project. "I'm trying to keep Chelsea Bain warm because she got cold standing by the window, in the glass hallway," Hastings said.

5. "WE WERE WATCHING a video on Olympic mascots to get information for my story for the Pulse and it was actually pretty helpful even though it was a cartoon," junior Michelle Roberts said.

6. "I AM RUNNING the capture station for broadcast which is where the show is captured from, we were shooting the weather," sophomore Alex Drabing said.

"DAMON AND I were jamming on the stage. I actually tripped and almost fell because my shoes were sliding, but don't worry, I tried not to make it noticeable." senior Lydia Wathen said.

TT WAS REALLY fun dressing up and performng skits, because it let the crowd have somehing fun to watch in between each perfornance," junior Megan Schumacher said.

"MEGAN AND I were sitting in a kiddy pool singing under the sea. I was playing Sebastian the crab as an introduction for Dee Peters, who sang 'A Part of Your World'," Sophomore Ashley Meador said.

A Pulse Student

When the Pulse staff walked into class on September 11, the room was filled with joy and excitement as they distributed the first issue of Pulse for the year.

"The whole school reads my work. My efforts go on a pretty, well laid out page for the whole student body and staff to read; it's wonderful," sophomore Emily Judson said.

From brainstorming to distributing, the Pulse staff did it all in only three weeks. Although this might seem to be all hard work, the Pulse staff to let loose occasionally too. They celebrate all their hard efforts with a deserved pizza party. In April, the staff was excited to learn that the 2009-2010 Pulse newspaper was named a Hoosier Star Finalist by the Indiana High School Press Association.

"Pulse has a lot of opportunities to speak with diverse people, not only within the school, but also in the community. Being on staff allows for freedom and enables me to experience the journalistic world I would like to pursue a career in," Pulse editor Melanie Laurendine said.

Exploring Opportunity Students Learn Outside MHS Walls

Area 31, cadet teaching, and the EOC gave MHS students the chance to seize an opportunity that would benefit them in the future or possibly in their careers.

Area 31 students traveled to Ben Davis High School to take classes in a career area they had been interested in. Students could take classes such as culinary arts, EMS, or radio broadcast. A lot of MHS students participated in the health occupations class.

Senior Natalie Carpenter took the EMS class at Ben Davis. During the course of the class she had a chance to drive the ambulance and practice runs.

"The majority of the class is hands on," Carpenter said. "We get to practice taking care of patients."

Cadet teaching allowed students to experience the way teaching works and what it's like to be in the classroom. Cadets learned that there was a lot more to teaching than what students actually saw in the classroom. Many students that took this class plan on pursuing a career in teaching.

Senior Raechel Owens planned on pursuing a career in teaching. She taught a kindergarten class at Northwood.

"I love teaching them," Owens said.

"It is so much fun when I get to see them actually get the things I am teaching them." EOC stood for Education Opportunity Center and gave students the option of a school day different than that at MHS. Students at the EOC went half days from 8 a.m. until 11 a.m. and got worked on assignments at their own pace.

"There's no such thing as an average day at the EOC. No two students are doing the same thing at the same time, so there's not a lot of normal routine," EOC teacher Ms. Jennifer Maurizio said.

Grasping these unique opportunities helped students make career decisions or reach goals they had set for themselves.

2. SENIOR MACIE DEPEW works with a student while cadet teaching at Northwood Elementary. Rather than taking a grade to teach, Depew was a cadet for music class.

3. SENIOR RAECHEL OW-ENS helps a kindergarten student at Northwood Elementary. She planned on pursuing a career in teaching.

4. SENIOR MYRANDA GOTT, and juniors Zach Johnson and Lauren Rink work in the radio room at Area 31. They went to Ben Davis for radio broadcast. "I like the experience that I can't get at Mooresville. We had a radio show for awhile," Rink said.

5. EOC TEACHER MS. Jennifer Maurizio helps junior Michael Elliott on his assignment. Ms. Maurizio enjoyed working with students at the EOC. "I like working with students who a lot of people have given up on – including themselves – and watching them succeed," Maurizio said.

6. SENIOR KAYLA GRAHAM, junior Amber Huddleston, and senior Cristian Suarez work on an assignment at the EOC. At the EOC, students did not work on the same assignments at the same time.

7. SENIOR AERIAL CLARK reads with one of her students while cadet teaching. She went to a sixth grade class at Northwood throughout the year.

8.JUNIOR COREY ROARK works on a car during his time at Area 31. He was taking out push pins in an inner fender well. "I want to actually be a diesel mechanic, but I have a '67 Mustang GT that I'm doing body work to at home," Roark said.

9. SOPHOMORE CLARISSA HALL and junior Michael Elliott work on the computers at the EOC. At the EOC, students were able to work on assignments at their own pace.

"My favorite part is being around my students. I love being able to help them with their work and doing all of our classroom activities," senior Kristen Myrick said.

"My favorite part of Area 31 was using my creativity to excel in the tv production class. I've learned the basics of film production and now I am ready to go to college and either start a show on the travel channel or start an independent film production," senior Luke Petty said.

"I chose to be a cadet teacher because I know that I want to pursue teaching and getting to do it now is really exciting and makes me look forward to getting my own class," senior Raechel Owens said.

"My favorite part of Area 31 is going on the radio and learning the different techniques of radio," junior Zach Johnson said.

Colophon

The 2012 Wagon Trails Yearbook, Volume 64, was created by a student staff and printed by Heff Jones Publishing Company at its facility at 2424 Midpoint Drive in Edwardsville, Kansas. This is the second All-Color Wagon Trails yearbook. The publishing consultant was Cathy Wines, and the customer service representative was Debbie Thomas.

Row 1: Adviser Ada Clark, Damon Manin, Brin Wibtell, Kalli Bednarz, Co-Rditor Lydia Wathen, Co-Rditor Taylor Oswelt, Megan Jankins, Megan Schumacher, Tessa Waggoner. Row 2: Ashlay Meador, Kelsey Groce, Jessica Dye, Ekili Elopwood, Ashley Jackson, Ististin Posey, Zach Rothenberger, Canolyn Ferdi, Samantha Peny.

Lifetouch Photos took all the under class and faculty photos. The senior photos were taken by Prestige Portraits by Lifetouch.

The book was created using Adobe InDesign CS2 and Adobe Photoshop CS2. Many in Mooresville felt the crunch of the economy, so the Wagon Trails staff had a sale in November and sold yearbooks for only $35. Herff Jones followed up with sales in the winter of 2010. The press run was 700 books, and yearbooks were slated for distribution in September, 2010.

A deserving thanks to: Cathy Wines, Debbie Thomas, Rick Briar, Peggy Gorman, Becky Bischoff, Marsha Green, Karen Cochran, Lisa Bailey, Terri Oswalt, Chuck Muston, Trisha Ferguson, and Tim VanWanzeele. The yearbook staff would like to thank the following people for contributing photos to the pages of this book: Dr. Phil Wright, Lindy Scott, Sheri Pierson, Gary Rothenberger, Rick Jones, and Carrie Fisher.

2. SENIOR STUDENTS SPENT their last moments of the final day of school at commencement practice. Class president John Greene stood in front to practice the turning of the tassel 3: THE BELL RINGS and students rush out to their cars to leave the school after a hard day's work. 4. THE 21ST CENTURY room took a lot of work to build. The room was built to further the students' knowledge with the access of new technology. 5. THE DAY AFTER spring break, the students came back to school with brand new opportunities created by the completion of the 21st century room. 6. JUNIOR STEPHANIE MYRICK joined the track team for the first time this year. Myrick accomplished many goals by doing so. 7. WITH THE GREAT weather, the courtyard was widely used. Many seniors ate lunch outside with friends. 8. EVERY YEAR, MHS recognizes the top 20 students of the graduating class for their accomplishments. "It was great to see so many teachers that 1 haven't seen in years. I was happy to get a chance to thank them all for being such a positive influence," senior and member of the Top 20 Molly Adams said.

The 2009-2010 school yearwas full of both snow and rain. According to attendance secretary Mrs. Becky Bischofi "There were seven two-hour delays and one snow day."

More To Moorewille

As the year came to an end, many students prepared for the upcoming summer while others reflected over the previous year. Throughout the 2009-2010 school year, MHS students shared more memories, took advantage of more opportunities, represented more sports teams, and expressed more excellence in academics.

Mother Nature helped create different memories for Mooresville students due to both rain and snow. With the huge amounts , many events were canceled, moved or re-scheduled.

"It rained during many of our football games this year. We all started wearing swim caps and growing gills. Thanks to all the rain, my toes are webbed. It's kind of embarrassing, but I can swim really fast now," senior Shelby Kanouse joked.

Clubs and performing arts offered opportunities by more activities. To help bring awareness towards the dangers of drunk driving, Project Ignition held festivities outside during the Prom Car Show where students could take a test run on a scooter while wearing drunk goggles. Project Ignition was only one of many clubs bringing out more school involvement.

The sports teams represented both on and off the field. Many athletes were team leaders and also named Mid-State Scholar Athletes.

"I like to think of high school sports as chocolate milk. Your education is the healthy part of the milk, but playing sports is the chocolate that makes it so good," senior Mid-State Scholar Tanner McKinley said.

The class of 2010 set brand new standards through their presentation of academic excellence. For the first time in Mooresville history, there were more students other than the Top 20 who had over a 4.0 grade point average. They also hold the record of the most number of students planning to attend an accredited four-year college.

While at the Senior Awards night, Mr. Chuck Muston said "The class of 2010 has achieved so many more expectations than imagined and have thrived in their academic achievement."

Due to budget cuts, Mooresville had to do more with less by only using every other light bulb in the hall ways. Even with this cut, the students were offered more with the Mooresville High School's 21st Century Room. This room gave the high school students an advantage with high technology such as a Smart Board.

At the end of the year, teachers and students buzzed about more changes that would happen the upcoming year. Superintendent Mr. Curt Freeman finished his last year while Mr. Brad Lindsey prepared to take over. Mr. Muston was also slated to become the principal of not only the high school, but also Paul Hadley Middle School, making him a 7-12 administrator.

With hard work in and out of the classroom, Mooresville students once again showed their spirit and dedication. From the first day to the last, they proved that there really was More to Mooresville.
