Stand<sup>Up</sup>

After years of teachers their students to sit down, it was time for students to stand up. At Mooresville High School, there were many opportunities for kids to stand up.

Some students chose to stand up by joining a club that was dedicated to helping the people in the community and at Mooresville High School. Others stood up by fighting for what they believed in.

"I love being in Key Club, because it lets me make an impact on others in our school and community," sophomore Jackie Harris said.

Students chose to stand up physically. Maybe they stood up to listen to the national anthem being played.

"I love watching all the people in the stands stand up in silence as the national anthem is being sung," junior Heather Means said.

More students stood up by being members of Student Council and participating in fund raisers for Riley Hospital.

"With the dance marathon and the help of the elementary schools, we managed to raise over $1700 throughout the week," Student Council Sponsor Mrs. Barb Goddard said.

Whether these students stood up physically or stood up for their beliefs, they chose to stand up for something.

Indianapolis Hosts Super Bowl XLVI

Super Bowl XLVI was a huge success for Indiana; it brought money to the state and awoke nap town. Many Hoosiers stepped up to help set up for the Super Bowl and make it the best the world has ever seen. From heat lamps to zip lines, Indy set new standards for Super Bowls to come.

Many Hoosiers participated in the Super Bowl set-up, because they knew the money made from the attractions would help the state and its communities. It proved to be very useful, with the money helping with.

The city spent a large portion of its $425 million Rebuild Indy program to repair decaying roads, bridges and sidewalks. People flocked into Indy to see the super bowl, spending an average of $54 per person. Whether they were looking for a place to park or finding a place to eat many establishments made record amounts of income.

Senior Frank Brock said "I had a blast trying to find somewhere to park, it was very busy".

Many of Mooresville students and faculty visited the super bowl village having their own share of experiences. Junior Ryan Denton said, "We visited all the areas and even saw Madonna".

Whether it was a run-in with celebrities, or the activities downtown everyone had an excellent experience.

Spanish teacher Alicia Richhart said, "I had a lot of fun going downtown and seeing all the attractions and some celebrities."

Super bowl XLVI was played by the New York Giants and the New England Patriots. The game was well fought with the final score of 21-17 with the Giants coming out on top.

Although our own Colts were not a part of it, Hoosiers still cheered for who we thought best between the two contenders.

The Circle Center monument was surrounded by fans wanting to pose with the Super Bowl XLVI decorations. Indy 500 cars were decorated in each of the NFL team logos. Roman numerals were another addition to the decorations. Fans will forget the decor of the Super Bowl XLVI in downtown Indianapolis.

Juniors Clay Huddleston, Breanna Lair, and Bailey Hawkins stand by an ice sculpture done for the Super Bowl. Many students went downtown to see all of the new additions for the Super Bowl.

The NFL Experience was an event put on for fans to be given the opportunity to experience a taste of what professional football players do everyday in practice. This was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for citizens. Super bowl fans in future generations will always remember what they experienced on that day.

Living It<sup>UP</sup>

Life Outside MHS

Through the stress brought upon Mooresville High School students and faculty's daily lives by school, work, and other activities, hobbies were sometimes the only thing keeping them sane. Students and faculty found creative ways to spend their free time.

Junior Mason Gonterman, seniors Austin Jones and Aaron Rice, and Mooresville High School graduate Billy Turnbull went about their days a little differently. The band started Velero in 2009 and attracted a lot of attention through their hard core music style.

Traveling everywhere while on tour during the summer of 2011, the band had many amazing times. Velero's biggest gig was at Ichthus, a Christian music festival in Kentucky. The band was left with many lasting memories.

"We slept in a Wal-Mart and got kicked out, because we were so tired of sleeping in the bus. It was worth it," Gonterman said.

Musically inclined senior Gage White also played music in his free time, but in a much different style. He played a ukulele alongside juniors Mason Gonterman and Coleman Bryant as they played the bongos.

"I like to play rap music with my ukulele, because it sounds more interesting," White said.

Sophomore Jesse Lacer spent her free time hunting when she got the chance.

"I have hunted squirrel, deer, and turkey every season since I was six," Lacer said.

Teachers had gotten involved in some unique activities as well. Spanish teacher Mrs. Tamara Skaggs showed and judged koi fish.

"My family and I have been showing for about ten years and go to five or six shows a year. It's a great family activity," Skaggs said.

The activities students and teachers took part in were just a few of the ways they stood up.

by Abbey Prilliman

Competitive cheering had become an exciting sport for junior Logan Smalley and sophomore Allison Quest. "I cheer for the Infinity team at Indiana Martial Arts. I tumble more than anything else. My most embarrassing moment was when I face planted on the mat right in front of everyone," Smalley said.

Logan Smalley

Senior Kaytlin Farrington spent her extra time playing lacrosse. Mooresville did not have a lacrosse team, so she sought out an alternative. She became a Center Grove Lady Trojan in 2010 when she joined their lacrosse team. "It's a really good team, and we have team bonding together. It's really fun," Farrington said.

Kaytlin Farrington

Freshman Alex Aguilar found a unique way to spend his free time. He had three pit-bulls he showed. "I show pit-bulls with my dad. We lived in Arizona and would travel to Wisconsin to show them. My biggest prize was first place," Aguilar said.

Alivia Duerlinger

Alivia Duerlinger took part in her Church at Stones Crossing by helping fifth and sixth graders in the Merge class, seventh and eighth graders in the Flow class, and attended her high school class Motion.

"Being a part of Merge ministry and being on the leadership team for my youth group definitely keeps me motivated to be excited and stoked about living for God," Duerlinger said.

Mrs. Kelly Patel smiles with one of her many scrap books. She began scrap booking in 2001 and she attends retreats where she can practice her scrap booking skills. "I have six albums for Sam, and I just started my other album for my other son. I just started making digital scrapbooks recently. I also attend Brownsburg Treasure Memories Scrap Book Retreat," Patel said.

Mason Gonterman plays his drums in front of a crowd. He loves meeting fans and had a perfect opportunity for doing so on tour during the 2011 summer. "We met a lot of people in places like West Virginia, Illinois, Ohio, and in Kentucky," Gonterman said.

Mr. Lindsay

Earth Space science teacher Mr. Jim Lindsay had been doing Civil War reenactments for about 21 years. "I got involved because I am interested in history. I traveled to Michigan and wherever big battles took place," Lindsay said.

Sophomore Jessie Lacer holds her gun and turkey with pride after a hunting trip. Lacer loved hunting. "Hunting has been a fun experience for me since I was little," Lacer's biggest game was a 10 1/2 inch beard and 5/8 spur turkey.

With New Technology

English Teacher Mrs. Stephanie Burnett demonstrates My Big Campus while her freshmen log on using their new laptops. "It is lighter than books and easier to do homework," freshman Ian French said.

For the first time, students received individual log-ins to use on school machines. Each computer screen displayed the following log-in screen.

Mooresville High School went big in the fall of 2011.

One of the most ground-breaking changes was that all freshmen and PHMS eighth graders had a chance for the first time to lease a new laptop from the school corporation for a $40 technology fee. MHS teachers also received school issued laptops.

"I love seeing all the freshman students and teachers use their new laptops. I also think it's really cool that upperclassmen bring in their own laptops from home and use them at school," Mooresville Schools Director of Technology Mr. Robert Sendelbach said.

By carrying laptops, students had updated information, and the students didn't have to carry so many books.

While many students enjoyed their laptops, others missed using traditional paper books.

"Books! I think we really need to go back to books, they never work and they are too complicated," Freshman Riley Greenup said.

Freshman Madi McGuire saw good and bad sides to student laptops. "I think people get way too distracted by playing games and messing around on the internet than doing their work, but I do like that I can type out my notes and make them nicer than on paper."

Another big thing that Mooresville got was My Big Campus. With a layout similar to Facebook, students and teachers could communicate in a safe environment.

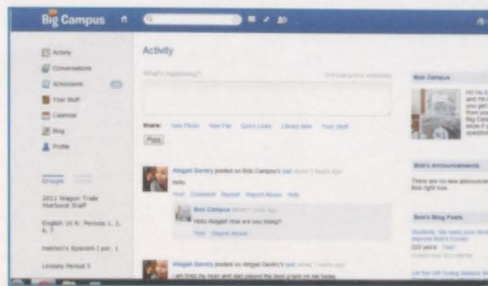

"I love My Big Campus, I use it everyday. It makes all my technology classes so much easier. My students can get to their files that they need,

Many students enjoyed their new computers "It is good for homework with Internet access," freshman Elijah Pingleton said.

This picture below what My Big Campus looked like after the students logged in. My Big Campus was a useful tool that students used during school to communicate with friends or teachers.

Mr. Robert Sendelbock Head Director of Technology for Mooresville Schools

"I love My Big Campus, I think it is a great resource to have for posting assignments," freshman history teacher Mr. Adam Allen said. "In our class we use technology/ laptops everyday. We try to utilize this technology so our students are equipped and prepared."

and they know when all their deadlines are," technology teacher Miss Traci Ball said.

MHS students also followed a new cell phone policy. All students were now allowed to use their cell phones in class if the teacher permitted them to do so. Because of an increasing number of smart phones, students could use their phones to research while in class. Students were also permitted to use cell phones in the cafeteria and in the hallways.

The positive thing were that students could look up things that they needed in class quickly.

"The only reason I like having a laptop is I can easily look information up on the internet, but it stinks, because everything is blocked," Hunter Kock said.

Students also had to have the self-dicipline to keep from texting when they should have been concentrating in class.

The crowd cheers along with the cheerleaders while marching to the beat. "School Spirit, you're just born with it," senior Brandon Smalting said.

Sophomore float builders showed love for Kaitlyn Fulkerson by putting her initials on their float. "We felt like it would be important to us if we recognized her," sophomore Kayla Harpold said.

The Flash Mob made up of juniors kicked off the Homecoming Parade. Junior Cole Long said, "I really enjoyed dancing with my friends and having a good time."

Sophomore Levi Jennings pulls as hard as he can to try and beat the senior class. "I had a lot of fun even though we lost," Jennings said.

Pumping UP

SHOW YOUR SPIRIT

All week the Pioneers were pumped for Friday's big homecoming game against the Whiteland Warriors.

Spirit was different than most, instead of having funny classic themes the school did more helpful themes because the Student Council wanted to raise money for Riley in order to become an honored council.

"I was so proud of the Student Council for raising $1783.91 for Riley," senior Chenea Lambton said.

They usually raised money throughout the year, but for the year of 2011, they wanted to raise money throughout the game and they held a dance marathon the following night.

Even the football team changed their tradition. Instead of Thursday's dinner being pasta night they had pizza instead.

"Thursday's dinner really got me pumped," senior Connor Lynn said.

Friday's pep rally was filled with fun and excitement that led up to the game.

At half time, the Pioneers were down but they ran through the plays and kept their spirits high to keep each other motivated.

The Pioneers were in control the second half of the game. Unfortunately, they missed a few key plays that let them back.

In the last seconds of the game, the Warriors kicked a 30 yard field goal. Which made the Pioneers lose. The final score was 23 to 21.

"Even though we didn't win, I still had a great time giving it my all with the boys," junior Cole Long said.

1. Freshman Murray Meredith gets pumped up during the pep rally by participating in the cupcake eating contest.
2. Sophomore Haley Wyble gets pumped up by cheering on the football team during the games.
3. Juniors Jacob Mourning and Hannah Tolbert get pumped up by making team shirts for the games they participate in during the pep rally.
4. Some of the seniors get pumped up by creating their senior jeans and showing them off the day of Homecoming.

Junior Dakota Bain stands on the sidelines while watching the last play of the game. "It was tough watching us lose in the last minute by a field goal," Bain said.

The Sophomores showed off their skills by designing an ambulance as their float. "Our float was super awesome, I enjoyed building it," sophomore Jacob Johnson said.

The Homecoming Court smiles big for the camera the day before they found out who won. The nominees were, from left to right: Veronica Smith, Rachael Crawford, Taylor Chitwood, Abby Anderson, Amber Viles, Jordan Allen, Tara Davis, and Hannah Shelton. "I wasn't very excited when I won queen, but it's okay," senior Amber Viles said.

The football team finishes their talk on the field before making the next play. "It was disappointing to lose, but I still had a great season with my boys," senior Kyle O'Dell said.

Indianapolis Colts fans were shocked when the team owner, Jim Irsay, made the announcement that Peyton Manning would not be returning to the Indianapolis Colts after 13 years with them.

As soon as Manning became a free agent he had multiple teams looking at him. Manning signed with the Denver Broncos.

The Colts ended up drafting not Griffin III but Andrew Luck from Stanford.

READY TO FIND A CURE

The Winter Homecoming events got kicked off with the cheerleaders leading the pep rally during the school day to get everyone pumped up for the big games.

"The pep rally is always a fun thing to do and participate in. The best part is getting out of class," sophomore Bailey Pryor said.

Due to time limits, administrators decided against hosting the traditional the student vs. faculty game. Many seniors were not happy about this, and threatened to protest all the pep rally games. Before the pep rally arrived, the senior class and the administration came to an agreement that the seniors would have their own game against the faculty.

By the time the first whistle blew at the Girls game that evening, the Curry Center was packed with people all dressed up in baby blue for colon cancer awareness.

The Athletic Department picked the theme, colon cancer awareness, in loving memory of Michael Avery Viles, senior Amber Viles' father, and Susan Ann Smalling, senior Brandon Smalling and sophomore Morgan Smalling's aunt.

The girls team took the lead early in the game and kept a pretty constant lead the whole game. They came out with the win of 50-42.

"It was nice to see the girls play well in such a great atmosphere," Coach Mark Hurt said.

The boys team stomped the Quakers right off the bat. The boys allowed them to catch up quite a bit, but in the end the Pioneers came out with the win with a score of 82-61.

The Homecoming Queen and King were crowned during the halftime at the boys game. Cyli Hart won queen and was crowned by Erica Antic and Evan Downey was crowned king by Mac Norton.

Senior Brandon Smalling jumps up to block the ball from the opponents players. "This Homecoming game was very special, because it was my senior year and I was playing for my aunt and Mike that game," Smalling said.

Dance It <sup>U</sup><sub>P</sub>

Toward the end of the school year, many students lost focus and look for something to be excited about. Prom was one of the most exciting events all year for students at Mooresville, and this was no exception.

Students were ready for prom to happen and when it finally came it was even better than they could have imagined.

"I had a really great time with all my friends and boyfriend," senior Saysha McMannis said.

Prom was so great because of the people behind it.

"I got involved and I feel that prom has been a success. The kids seem to like the DJ and that's what makes it fun," Mr. Brent Olivier said.

The prom committee worked hard to set up the "Midnight Sky" theme and to ensure that prom was great for everyone.

"Prom was a lot of work to set up, but it was worth it in the end, because we got to dance afterwards," sophomore Sydney Kanouse said.

While some people were ready to dance all night, others were more shy.

"I sat at a table most of the night with my date. We weren't big on dancing, but we still had a great time," senior Devan Whedon said.

For many, prom was even more exciting than usual.

"I couldn't wait for my senior prom and because it was my senior year it was more important," senior Calvin Loechel said.

Overall, prom was a great night for all involved.

"It was a lot of fun. The cathedral was really pretty. The brownies were really good and I got to dance a lot," junior Bailey McNalley said.

Prom and the surrounding season was fun for many people and unforgettable.

by Jessica Stinger

Senior Rachel Davis enjoys a slow dance with her date. The two danced all evening. "It was great that I was finally able to take my boyfriend. The fancy dinner was nice, but the dancing was definitely my favorite part of the whole night, because everyone gets into it and all the lines between cliques fade. Everyone dances with everyone and that's what makes it a blast," Davis said.

Seniors Aaron Montgomery, Callan Swaim, Ashley Meador, and junior Kyle Blackwell break it down at prom. They had a great time that evening. "It was the time of my life and it was worth every bead of sweat," Blackwell said.

Junior Damon Harrell holds his date's waist. They enjoyed the upbeat songs. "Dancing with my date was amazing. I could never forget it," Harrell said.

Senior Nick Collins and junior Hannah Creech dance. Nick had gotten hot and unbuttoned his shirt to cool off. "Prom was like standing on the sun," Collins said.

Seniors Justin Stockhoff and Chenea Lambton smile after performing the senior dance. The two had a fantastic night. "I had a great time with Chenea and I wouldn't have missed going for anything," Stockhoff said.

Seniors Abby Anderson and Kayla Aguirre smile with junior Haley Daugherty. The girls had a wonderful night at prom. "Prom was so much fun. I wasn't nervous. I would say prom was a success in my book," Anderson said.

King and queen Parker Mowery and Sammi Jo Acres smile with the princess and prince Nichol Crose and Nic Wennen. They were elated to win their crowns. "I felt like Prince Charming. I felt blessed for having good friends that voted for me," Wennen said.

Senior Jordan Duke stands with his date along with Katie Cavin and her date Aaron Schaler and Patrick Atkinson and his date Ally Phillips. They took many pictures while preparing for prom. "I smiled a lot for the pictures, but during prom I couldn't stop smiling," Atkinson said.

Junior Brandon Topie and sophomore Rachel Head reach up to catch a glow stick. The entire dance floor wanted the sticks. "I felt so accomplished when I caught the glow stick for my date," Topie said.

Junior Jordan Belcher dances with Tam Nguyen and Hannah Belcher. Jordan had a great time dancing while at prom. "If you're going to prom, you have to go all out and dance your night away," Belcher said.

The start to a new beginning.

The class of 2012 was a very academic striving class. This class had many accomplishments throughout their years at Mooresville High School.

Molly Whitley became the valedictorian of the graduating class. Hannah Jones, the student body president, became the salutatorian. Both of the girls presented speeches at the graduation to express how they felt about the journey the class had taken together.

"I was really nervous because I knew saying the "Ben part" would be hard, and I kept thinking about it throughout the entire speech. I was so embarrassed to be crying in front of everyone," Hannah Jones said.

Ben Elo was one student who did not have the opportunity to finish his high school career. The class of 2012 along with many other students, will forever remember the good times and great memories they shared with Ben. His memory still lives on, as they hold the annual Ben Elo Memorial Soccer Camp every summer.

Allie McLaughlin, the class president, spoke to her peers as well. McLaughlin and Jones had collaborated throughout high school to make Mooresville a better place.

"Being able to lead my class in the turning of our tassels was a memory I will never forget," McLaughlin said.

The graduating class came together for one last time to celebrate their accomplishments.

by Maddy Cooper and Breanna Lair

Senior Chenea Lambton can only smile proudly after receiving her diploma. Her Poppy was so proud of her. "I was glad to achieve such a big accomplishment in life and I couldn't have done it without my family's encouragement to me to succeed," Lambton said.

Senior Kelsie Mulvehill walks in ready to go on stage and receive her diploma. She was glad this day had finally came. "When I was walking in I realized that high school was officially over and that I had finally succeeded," Mulvehill said.

Senior James Fields shakes the hand of Mr. Muston as he receives his diploma.

Senior Kyle Bryant is all smiles when as he receives his diploma. "Receiving my diploma from Mr. Muston was an honor and a once in a lifetime experience," Bryant said.

Senior Connor Lynn walks into graduation. He was relieved that this day had finally came. "As I was walking into graduation I was thinking, is this real life? Everything that I had worked for, in school and on the field all payed off and got me there. If it weren't for my family and close friends pushing me I wouldn't be here, graduating today. I appreciate everything they have done and continue to do for me," Lynn said.

Freshman U.S. History students pay close attention to what's going on. Mr. Allen showed them a video of the Jimmy Dean 1993 ESPY Speech. He wanted to add a little inspiration and motivation before they began their speeches.

Blast from the Past

There is one world, 4 oceans, 7 continents, 196 countries, about 18,000 islands, and 2.5 million years of history to be taught in just 180 days of school. The teachers do a pretty good job of fitting it all in. History not only better the peoples knowledge of past history, but the history swarming all around us.

History alone was a struggle to stay on task, but help from the History teachers kept everyone from skipping out on the important events in the past.

Freshman Kia Hreno took Mr. Adam Allen's freshman U.S. History Honors class. "We always have a fun time in the class, and Mr. Allen can make history fun to learn about," Hreno said.

Seven different classes made up the social studies department. World History, Geography, U.S. History, American Studies, Government, Psychology, Sociology, Law Education, U.S. Government, World History & Civilizations, and Economics are the history classes offered.

Sophomore Kayla Karr took Mr. Mark Hurt's U.S. History class. "I'm glad I took this class because it has enlightened me about the history of our country, but also kept me up to date on current events," Karr said.

Many students who took Mrs. Joyce Gilly's classes said they had positive experiences.

"I was kind of nervous on the first day when I walked into Mrs. (Joyce) Gilly's class, but once I got further into the semester, I started to really enjoy the class, and I am very glad I took it," junior Taylor Chitwood said.

Whether someone was learning about Ancient Egyptians or the Bermuda Triangle, the mystery of history was told by the people who enjoyed it the most. History will never end. It being written and rewritten everyday. There's always another story to tell and to be told about the world and the people in it.

Laptops played a big key role in the freshman history classes. When asked about how the laptops improved student success in his classes.

"The laptops enabled my students to view history in a variety of different ways. Projects were a big focus of my class and having the laptops allowed the students to work on and complete them in the classroom as well as at home. The increase in technology has led to higher student grades, because I feel they are engaged more on a daily basis," Mr. Adam Allen said.

Freshman in Mr. Allen's U.S. History Class gave their JFK presentations. By dressing up, students had the opportunity to get extra credit. Many students took advantage of the extra credit day.

Juniors Samantha Duncan and Brett Green dug deep into their history books. "Sam and I had to study a lot for Mr. DiLisio's Sociology class," Green said.

During their JFK presentations, Mr. Adam Allen's history class listened close to hear his lecture before they began. "I liked giving the presentations because it gave us a lot of different perspectives," freshman Kaley Huddleston said.

Wake up and work out!

Whether it was being active or studying in the classroom students learned about health.

"Fitness is important because it improves the quality of life," Coach Kevin Hutchins said.

In the classroom students covered areas such as nutrition, body systems, and diseases. These areas help students learn what to or what not to do in order to maintain a healthy lifestyle.

Many students participated in physical activities. Mooresville offered classes such as yoga, wellness, gym and Advanced Physical Conditioning to keep students active.

Studying in the classroom included learning the food groups and learning how many servings they should have of a particular food group. Eating too much unhealthy food could lead to obesity or an unhealthy lifestyle.

The weights class also included going out and shooting around. They played basketball or stayed in the weight room. "I exercise everyday just because it's fun," senior Kyle Means said

Other students worked out to maintain a healthy lifestyle. If they were not lifting weights, students were active in other activities such as running or playing sports.

"I bench to get stronger for the wrestling season," freshman Randy Scott said.

Students took APC for many reasons. Some desired to get stronger, or they just took it to see what it was like.

"APC interests me, because I like to look good for the ladies," senior Brandon Smalling said.

In Physical Education, students participated in various activities such as playing sports like basketball and football. Participating in sports could help the person in many ways.

Being healthy could lead to better opportunities later in life.

by Nik Brunk

Many people enjoyed taking yoga class. Yoga is a good way to get exercise and keep your body fit. "I think people should exercise to prevent from becoming obese," freshman Anna Jackson said.

Pioneers Get Fit

How Do You Get Your Exercise?

"To get exercise, I do crunches, stretch and yoga," freshman Tiffany Lawrence said.

"I play basketball and I lift, that's how I get my exercise," sophomore Jacob Johnson said.

"I like to play basketball," junior Dennis Thomas said.

"I play basketball, football and lift to get exercise," senior James Fields said.

"I think everyone should exercise regularly because it helps lead to a healthier life," Coach Kevin Hutchins said.

Some of the boys preferred to be in the weight room, while others would have rather been shooting around on the court. Either way their work outs are always fun. "I think exercise is important to build stamina," junior Dennis Thomas said.

24 Mooresville High School

If they weren't playing basketball or running, the boys lifted weights. Exercise is essential to staying healthy. "I exercise five or six times a week," freshman Brandon Willis said.

Yoga was one of the fitness classes offered at MHS. Many people really enjoy this class. "I exercise everyday," freshman Tiffany Lawrence said.

While in school or out of school the boys were expected to stay in shape. They have to work out a lot. "I work out 6 days a week," senior Brandon Smalling said.

The boys on the basketball team worked out everyday to get ready for their games. A main part of preparing was lifting weights. "I lift and practice everyday," sophomore Brent Walker said.

Seniors, Brandon Smalling and James Fields do lunges. Mr. Jeremy Manning always put the boys to work to make sure that they stayed fit. "I like to exercise so that I stay in shape and young," senior James Fields said.

Looking Forward to the Future

All around the world technology surrounds people and their lives. Therefore, it's only natural for students to want to learn more about it.

That's why there were several classes at Mooresville that covered technology related topics.

Mooresville High School offered Computer Applications, Technology Systems, Accounting, Media Arts, Web Design, Advanced Computer Applications, and more.

Mooresville High School acquired Mr. Christopher Bowman to the teaching staff for the 2011-2012 school year. I was his first teaching job.

"MHS is a great place to work. The students are a lot of fun and the faculty is very friendly and helpful," Mr. Christopher Bowman said.

Although it was not only curiosity that interested the students to take the class. Some students may already be looking for things that could benefit them for later on in the future. These classes may have served as a great benefit for their dream career.

"(Accounting) will help me keep track of financial records when in management or owning a business," senior Robbie Brown said.

Some students might not be planning for the future, they just took the classes for fun. Sophomore Jacob Delk liked the laughter and joking in the class. Sophomore Audra Pieper enjoyed learning about fun things.

"I enjoyed the class atmosphere. Although the work can be labor intensive, the class as a whole still jokes a bit," senior Amber Viles said.

Many students recommended it to those who had not yet taken the classes. Some of the students say it will help you get ahead in life.

"It is a very good way to use your creativity in a different way," junior Grayce Daniel.

by Paige Baker

Junior Jonathan Fulkerson works in a computer program called Inventor to build 3-D replicas. "We had to build a toy train, it was fun and easy to build," Fulkerson said.

Freshman Joshua Darrenkamp works on building his chair for his manufacturing production class. "I enjoy the class and using tools like the sander to build things," Darrenkamp said.

Media Arts student, junior Grayce Daniel takes a picture of various colors of sunglasses. "It was fun. It was a nice experience to take the class," Daniel said.

Media Arts student, senior Paige Ellenberger captures a picture of opening and closing the aperture and the depth of the field," Ellenberger.

Sophomore Logan Kendall cuts wood to build a chair for his project. Logan was in the manufacturing production class taught by Mr. Christopher Bowman.

Two technology system students, freshman Shawn Carte and freshman Robert York work on their hovercraft project. "I built the hovercraft in technology systems, building it was the most enjoyable part," York said.

Media Arts student, sophomore Caitlyn Hymer captures a picture of neon lights. "We were working with ISO and aperture to capture light. It was really fun," Hymer said. Students who took the class learned several new settings to capture different types of media.

Media Arts Teacher Mrs. Lindy Scott takes a picture of puffy paint tubes to demonstrate for her students how to use aperture correctly. "Aperture is depth of field of focus," Scott said.

A group of bachelorettes await the final decision from Santa Clause. All were eager to get chosen, only to be disappointed by the choice he made in the end - he chose his wife, Mrs. Claus.

Amelia Phillips plays Barbie in the bachelorette version of the Christmas play. She was crying, because she could not make up her mind between Santa and Ken. "I was really starting to miss Ken, and I was having a mental breakdown. When we reunited it was magical," Phillips said.

Act it <sup>U</sup><sub>P</sub>

The 2011 Christmas play theme was based on what previous plays Advance Theater students wrote. One of the Christmas plays was themed as Santa being a bachelor and many fictional girl characters would be the bachelorettes. The main characters were Cat Woman, Mrs. Clause, Wonder Woman, Barbie, Ken, and elves.

The other play was called The Christmas Ball Spectacular. It had characters such as, a baker, Shrek, Santa, Prince Charming, A Beast, Fiona, etc.

"The play went fine. There were no major issues with kids asking for lines." Mrs. Kassen said.

by Breanna Lair & Jackie Farrand

Levi Jennings plays an elf helping Mr. and Mrs. Clause. "I wanted to play an elf because it was a big role," Jennings said.

In theater class, the kids come up with scenes to act out in front of the class. This scene in particular, Hannah Morris is yelling at one of her partners, "Our play was about two girls who were actors, and my character was clearly the better one," Morris said.

Nick Schmutte and Logan Allen debate in speech class. They had to give a debate on whether or not prison luxuries were good or not. "I got to wear these cool purple sun glasses, and I liked it, because Mrs. Kassen is my favorite teacher," Schmutte said.

The classmates were eager to see what their peers had come up with to perform. These girls were acting out a scene from an Eddie Murphy movie.

Talk It <sup>U</sup><sub>P</sub>

Speech class was also taught by Mrs. Melanie Kassen. It involved the students by having to recite debates throughout the semester. Speech class helped students be less self-conscious, especially if they had not spoken in front of a large group of people before.

"I took Mrs. Kassen's class, because she is a cool teacher and I am going in to teaching so it is helpful," Logan Allen said.

Yet another class that was taught by Mrs. Kassen, Theater Arts. This was the class that was taken in the same semester of the Christmas play. Students worked on their acting skills, and they also got their script for the Christmas play in the middle of the semester.

The following semester, if the students decided to take Advanced Theater Arts, they were responsible for writing their own Christmas play, and if it was well written it could have been one that was chosen for a future class to act out.

"I like all of theater arts, it is just fun," Quinn Cavin said.

by Breanna Lair & Jackie Farrand

Juniors David Trusty and Logan Smalley rap for their poetry presentation in Mr. Marine's English 11 class. It was definitely a sight to see. "We went with a 21st Century kind of poem, I thought we would have a little bit more fun with it than everyone else," Trusty said.

Reading<sup>U</sup><sub>P</sub>

Pioneers and Literature

Junior Megan Passey reads The Jungle. AP Junior classes read a lot of difficult books during the year. "This book is really interesting, it gives a good idea about the workers in the 1800s," Passey said.

From Romeo and Juliet to The Kite Runner, students have dug deeper into the literary elements of their school life.

Freshman classes read Romeo and Juliet and Night.

"I thought Romeo and Juliet was interesting, a little difficult, but definitely something worth reading," freshman Shawn Carte said.

The sophomores took ECAs during their English classes.

"I think I'll passed the English ECA because English is my best friend," sophomore Morgan Lawson said.

Sophomores also read Julius Caesar, Of Mice and Men, and Anthem. "I really liked the project we did in Mrs. Eickhoff's class for Of Mice Men," sophomore Ariel Halstead said.

Juniors read The Crucible and the AP classes read Uncle Tom's Cabin and The Jungle, in addition to several other works.

"I thought The Crucible was intense," junior Ashley Miley said.

The juniors in AP Classes became used to having collegiate expectations and expressed their minds a bit more than the other students.

"With taking an AP class, it is nice to have the things that come with it and the interesting discussions that happen," junior Megan Passey said.

Seniors in ACP English read sets of poems and a novel called The Kite

Runner. They wrote quite a bit, as well.

"I like ACP English. I feel like it has improved my writing skills, and I would recommend it to anyone, though it is a lot of work," senior Michael Carte said.

The teachers worked hard to keep their classes interested in the books they read this year. They do analysis work and essays and sometimes they quiz their students.

"I love my English classes, they are hardworking students," Mr. Jason Zollman said.

Sophomores work on Independent Reading Projects. They did quite a bit of reading. "I loved the IRPs because my book was awesome," sophomore Morgan Lawson said.

Junior Shelby Hartley works on her I.R.A assignment for Mr. Jason Zollman's class. I.R.A.s were Mr. Zollman's way to get them reading. "The I.R.A's are enjoyable, but very time-consuming," Hartley said.

These freshmen work on a book assignment. Literature was what they were focusing on that week in Ms Ashley Barnes' class. "Ms. Barnes makes our class interesting; there's not much about it I don't like," Shawn Carte says.

Junior Ashley Burwell presents her poem to her class. She was completely prepared to do her best. "I enjoyed my poetry presentation, because I like writing poetry," she said.

The foreign language department went through many changes. It was the final year for students to take French, and the first year for students to take Spanish III honors.

The classes offered at Mooresville included: Spanish I, Spanish II, Spanish III, Spanish III Honors, AP Spanish, and French III.

Mr. Michael Haisten taught many different classes. He was the French and Musical Theory teacher for years, this was his first year teaching Spanish I. Haisten was asked to teach Spanish I, so he took it upon himself to learn it over the summer to be ready to teach it during the 2011-2012 school year.

"Mr. Haisten is very good at teaching Spanish for it being his first year," freshman Charlee Dewbrew said.

Miss Kristin Robinson had Spanish III, Spanish II, and AP Spanish classes. Miss Robinson was one of the more experienced Spanish Teachers.

Robinson, she keeps the class very fun and does a great job at teaching," sophomore Morganne Belton said.

Mrs. Tamara Skaggs was in charge of all of the Spanish III and Spanish III Honors classes.

"She helps me learn a lot quicker in Spanish III Honors than I have before," junior Zac Newkirk said.

Mrs. Alicia Richhart taught Spanish I and II classes.

"Mrs. Richhart is definitely my favorite teacher. She makes sure we know how to do everything before she tests us on it," sophomore Haley Wyble said.

Ms. Jill Mirabelli also taught Spanish I and II classes.

"Ms. Mirabelli loves having us ask questions, she is always having us do activities to work on our Spanish," sophomore Logan Allen said.

"I feel very honored that I was one of the last students to ever take French classes at Mooresville High School," junior Nichole Crose said.

Senior Saysha McMannis presents her art work for Spanish 3 Honors class. "The students had to make a picture and give a presentation for the art unit," Mrs. Skaggs said.

Junior Rachel Hawkins talks about her drawing during her fourth period Spanish class. "It was kind of difficult, because I am not a good artist, but I liked being able to research and recreate a picture I really liked," Hawkins said.

Senior Kaitlyn Crafts takes notes as Señorita Robinson gives a lecture to one of her two AP Spanish classes.

Sophomore Nick Schmutte works hard on a drawing for his Spanish II class. "This was for sure my favorite assignment of Spanish II because I love to draw, but I love Mrs. Richhart more," Schmutte said.

Publication students gain hands-on skills

Broadcast was another student publication. The students would interview people; however, they also would take part in the school announcements.

Broadcast gained multiple new technology resources, and announcements were shown through My Big Campus. "Broadcast is something I want to do as my career, and I hope to find a great job that involves using my people skills," David Trusty said.

Some major changes occurred such as, The Pulse Newspaper was moved online rather than being printed on paper, and Andy Marine became the Adviser.

"After two years of hard work and trials, I will certainly miss the adrenaline deadlines and vibrant staff," senior Amber Viles said.

DVD yearbook staff member sophomore Jesse Cordray edits pieces of their footage. "I like the DVD yearbook, because it sounded like fun and it was a new thing to do," Cordray said.

DVD yearbook staff member, sophomore Matt Walker interviews a random student in the hallway. "I like it, because it is inventive and it is something new, I thought it would be cool for the yearbook."

Rachel Wathen cuts out a photo for her yearbook page. "The reason I got into yearbook is because I remember when my sister was in yearbook and I would go to the Wagon Trails and see the yearbook staff act," Wathen said.

Journalism I students sophomore Drew Seber, and freshmen Kristen Crawford and Jennifer Hastings peer edit feature stories.

Write It <sup>U</sup><sub>P</sub>

Journalism I, Yearbook

Journalism 1 was a class that usually consists of freshman and sophomores, but students from any grade could sign up for it.

The teacher of this class was Mrs. Ada Clark. In Journalism, they would learn how to become better writers. They would learn this in ways such as, beginning to write in inverted pyramid style.

Beyond that, they learned how to write captions, even started writing feature stories.

"Journalism I sets the foundation for students to be successful on the publication staffs," Mrs. Clark said.

Yearbook was a class where students could enhance their inventive skills. Anybody who took Journalism 1 was eligible to apply for the yearbook staff.

This class was where students would basically invent the yearbook. They would interview people, take pictures, etc.

Staff members also sold ads and produced the variety show "Wagon Trails Revue" in November.

It is a good class for students to take if they were planning on expanding their media skills.

Sophomore Paige Baker and junior Austen Duque work on the technology page. "I like yearbook, because you have to interact with people, and it lets you be creative," Paige Baker said.

Junior Blake Lee prepares a hood to cut out squares for a welding test. "I like Area 31, because it teaches me how to become a better worker, and you meet a lot of new people from other schools," Lee said.

Eric Frandsen works with his instructor to find map coordinates. He focused on getting the perfect coordinates.

David Carroll puts together a lab top. He made sure the screws were well tightened on the back.

Mariah Crews helps a fourth grade student work on divisions problems. "What I enjoy most is the kids. They always have something funny to tell me, and whenever I'm having a bad day they cheer me up," Crews said.

Logan Smalley checks the transmission fluid level. "I really enjoy getting out of class and actually working on cars. Our project car, 53 Studabaker, is actually going to make an article in a magazine listing a picture of our class and our names," Smalley said.

Meaghan Ridenour helps students by reading them a story. She read to the kids in the afternoons.

Cheyenne Sizemore practices giving a perm. She was a part of the Area 31 cosmetology program in the mornings.

Kaleb McCreary welds metal to combine the pieces together. He was very focused on the task at hand.

Jessica Sines inspects teeth on a model of the human mouth. She plans on being a dental assistant in the future.

Brittanie Swain makes an inspection of a car engine. "Area 31 is a great place to learn your hobby more in depth," Swain said.

Preparing For The Future

Mooreville did not only offer a variety of classes in the school itself, but it also allowed students a chance for hands on experience to further their education outside of school.

The Area 31 program was located at Ben Davis High School, a profited secondary school that students could either drive to or ride a bus provided by the school, to further their interest in their desired career choice.

"It's a change from having to go to Mooreville all day, it is a lot of fun," cosmetology student Jessica Darlington said.

The ICE program was a junior and senior class designed to allow students to come to school to complete their required courses and then leave to go to their job. The students were required to complete at least 15 hours of work during the week and provide their pay stubs to Mrs. Dana Dillman.

"I like that you get to earn money, learn about working in the real world, and about learning responsibility," junior Cody Lindsay said.

PCI, was an internship program provided by the school, that gave students the ability to go out and explore the career that interested them. Students were to sign up for the program and had to be accepted into it. Much like the ICE program the students were required to complete at least 15 hours of work during the week and had a list of guidelines to follow when on the job. Most students enjoyed the hands on work and received a lot of knowledge out of the experience.

"Cadet Teaching has given me so much experience, Mrs. Dillman has a good program and I think people should cadet teach," senior Ciara Casteel said.

Show Off Your Work

To get students more involved in classes, teachers gave them more hands on activities. Having students do presentations or projects instead of book work, gets them more interested in the class.

Presentations help students get better at speaking in front of their classmates and teachers. This also helped them get better with leadership skills.

Doing projects gave students an opportunity to learn more about a subject and let their fellow classmates know about what they had learned.

"Doing research projects helps me learn more about the subject," senior Louis Catellier said.

In order for students to do the presentations, they will actually have to research into their topic, which led to them learning more. By doing the projects and having to present them, it gives students more confident in their work and ability to talk in front of a group of people.

Whether doing small posters or power points, the hands on activities got students more involved.

In physics class, students had to make boats out of only cardboard and adhesives. Then, for a grade they had to participate in the boat races. The teams would line up in the pool and take off. The challenge was to see how strong of a boat they made and how long they can hold it up.

"I loved being in the boat races. It was a fun experience building the boat," junior Cole Long said.

Teachers want to prepare students for the future, and eventually they will have to be able to talk in front of groups of people. If they cannot do it in front of their friends, they will never be able to do it in front of strangers. Researching helps students gain more knowledge about different topics, events, and places throughout the world.

"Presentations give kids confidence and communication skills to help them later in life," Mrs. Melanie Kassen said.

What is Being Done Now about Bullying?

Schools around the world have regulations to prevent bullying. Disciplinary actions have been somewhat effective.

Web sites and hotlines are on the last slide to help you if you need them.

Princess Galla was very upset about one of her friends who had killed himself because of bullying. She has spoken with the president of the United States. Who knows what will happen.

In many classes, students present the projects they create. They were given a certain subject to research and have to teach their fellow classmates all about it. "I chose to research on bullying because it affects my past, present and a lot of my friends," sophomore Ashley Rector said.

Students of Earth Space Science class prepare to launch a weather balloon. They all helped get it ready for lift off. "It was pretty cool being picked, considering she only chose nine people to do it," sophomore Trevor Chew said.

Juniors Michael Passmore and Clayton Aldridge present their project about Egypt.

Sociology students present about different cultures around the world. They talked about common foods eaten through the world. "This class teaches us about society and that really interest me," senior Louis Catellier said.

Students struggle to keep their boat from sinking. Even though Junior Cole Long and his partner used their paddles and tried to weigh the boat evenly, they still ended up with much of their boat in the water.

Emily Reeves and Ashley Miley hold onto their boat after sinking. They tried to stay out of the way of fellow boat racers. "Once we sank, I tried really hard to keep my head above the water so I wouldn't have to go with wet chlorine hair all day," Reeves said.

Chris Thomas and Kyle Niehaus celebrate their win. After all their hard work, it paid off. "Winning was awesome because it gave us bragging rights," Thomas said.

Students that have physics have to participate in the boat races. They could only use cardboard and adhesives to construct their boat. "Making our boat was very, very, very hard!" sophomore Logan Mills said.

Sophomores Kelsey Hawkins and Jacob Delk use a yard stick for help on their homework. They measured out several objects in their Geometry class. "It's easy, until you have to measure out really small things," Delk said.

Divide and Conquer

Whether students were in Algebra 1 or AP Calculus, students at MHS had different viewpoints on their math classes. With the regular, honors, AP, and ACP math classes here at MHS, there were a total of 11 math classes offered.

"I love my math class (Geometry) with Mr. Clint Swalls. He makes it fun and we always have a good time learning," junior Hannah Tolbert said.

If there was a student who liked to stay ahead of the game, MHS offered online classes that could be taken over the summer.

Many students took advantage of this privilege so they could move into a higher math class in the next school year.

Pre-Calculus teacher Mrs. Jennifer Vaughan said, "All the students have been working very diligently this year, and I'm very proud of all of them."

One major focus in the Math department was the End of Course Assessment for Algebra I.

In order to graduate, each student was required to pass the ECA for Algebra I.

Once they took it their freshman year, if they didn't pass they could retry it twice every year until they pass it. Many students who didn't pass it by their senior year could apply for a waiver; however, they waivers will difficult to receive. Most students who passed the test felt much success and relief.

Smiles of success overcome Kyler Smith and Zach Overton as they ease their way through some math homework. They helped each other all year through their Pre-Calculus class. "Pre-Cal is mind blowing!" junior Zach Overton said.

Sophomore Kayla Harpold works anxiously to finish her Geometry homework. "Homework is seriously such a bummer on my day, and it was Friday, so I wanted to get it finished before the weekend," Harpold said.

Paying extra attention to their homework, Mrs. Jennifer Vaughan's Pre-Calculus class eagerly tries to get their work done. "My math class is a lot of fun, and I can always ask when I'm unsure of something," Gilbert said.

Junior Zach Minardo works hard in his Pre-Calculus class with Mrs. Jennifer Vaughan. Minardo studied hard for this test and passed it with a B. "Math isn't my favorite, but I always seem to get my work done," Minardo said.

Junior Kyle Lloyd studies the computer monitor trying to figure out his assignment. Lloyd's class and other Geometry classes studied with a Web site called "QUIA" in order to improve their knowledge on a specific chapter. "It's nice to actually do something other than looking at our books all period," Lloyd said.

Sophomore Alivia Duerlinger concentrates on taking her notes for Mrs. Owens Geometry class. "Our math class is good at having fun, and also working at the same time," Duerlinger said.

What do you use more?

"Twitter, parents are not on it, and I'm not pressured to get status likes. I do not like My Big Campus," David Masayioe said.

With extra time left over in class, some students liked to check their Twitter accounts.

"I like Facebook, because I have never used Twitter, but My Big Campus does help me out with school work," Casey Deal said.

At the risk of falling down the stairs some people will still check their Facebook pages.

"I do not use either, because I do not think I would have time to. I use My Big Campus for school work," David Lawson said.

Even in class it is useful to look for notes or assignments on My Big Campus.

Planking

What!?

The new trend planking use to be called "The Lying Down Game." It was invented by Gary Clarkson and Christian Langdon in 1977. A majority of Mooresville students became a part of planking in 2011, especially the sophomores. The class of 2014 made planking a new hobby. One of the craziest sophomore planks was done by Kayla Lockwood on a rail hanging over a cliff.

By Rachel Wathen and Mackenzie Masters

In the City of Holland a group of friends plank while at a church camp.

"I thought it was awesome planking in front of the Nuclear Fall Out Shelter. It was painful under certain circumstances, but I enjoyed it," sophomore Tanner Atkins said.

The students went around to different places planking to see how skilled they were. While at the church camp, Christ In Youth, the kids took part in a giant flash mob of planking. They improved their "planking skills" and had fun while doing it.

Mrs. Owens' Geometry Honors class planks to brighten her day.

"Our class gets real stoked to plan rad entrances for Mrs. Owens when she wasn't in the classroom before the bell. We are a cooperative class and always have fun. We just try to lighten her day, we genuinely love her!" sophomore Alivia Duerlinger said.

Also apart of this planking act was Brett Hoffman.

"Everyday we try to do something exciting, new, and different. We thought it'd be easy and fun. Just another good way to make geometry class a little more exciting," Hoffman said.

Sophomores Luke

Justus and Nick Schmutte decide to see how creative and strong they are while testing their trust to each other planking.

"I trust Luke with my whole entire life. Pools are great for holding water," Nick said.

Although the thought crossed their mind that Nick might come crashing down on Luke they both stayed calm.

"I was not scared to drop Nick. Nick would be cool with it if he fell," Luke said.

Several Sophomores decide to get together inside a stadium in Holland, Michigan at Hope College to plank.

"It's just something kind of crazy and different that most people don't do on a regular basis. It was a ton of fun, and I loved it," sophomore Raleigh Roberson said.

These sophomores went around to different places and planked in unique areas. Planking was something done for fun, and is a way to become creative in figuring out different places to plank where others hadn't, just like these sophomores did.

Bring It <sup>UP</sup>

Seniors' Favorite Memories

Memories had been made each day at Mooresville High School. Memories that would be cherished forever such as a big sporting even, prom and so on. These seniors have accumulated some interesting memories over their time at MHS.

Katie Cavin had been a part of the school's marching band all four of her years at Mooresville. Her favorite memory came on Band Day at the Indiana State Fair in the summer of 2011. All of the bands there waited anxiously to hear if they made it into the Sweet 16.

"It was like a slow motion film, we were all breathing slowly and holding hands. We wanted it very badly and were speechless when we found out that we made it," Cavin said.

Kaitlin Crafts had a much different memory, as she was involved with the National Honor Society. Kaitlin and fellow senior Stephanie Fulk brought human trafficking to the schools awareness as they helped lead and raise money for the non-profit organization Not for Sale. They got permission for Principal Chuck Muston and made a whole awareness week for it.

"We made bracelets to sell to the students and faculty. It's great seeing everyone take notice and get involved," Crafts said.

Mikey McLean will always cherish the moment he spent with his friends at his junior prom and Kings Island. The most prominent moment, however, came when there was a long line of people at Kings Island trying to win one of the carnival games but they all failed. Then Mikey stepped up and beat it, winning a stuffed panda bear for his girlfriend.

"Then we went to the biggest Bob Evans in the whole world there and later went to P F Chang's where I found that I love to eat duck," McLean said.

Rebecca Gillie found show choir to be her best experience in high school. Her choir, Finesse, grew to be like family to her.

"You spend a lot of time with them and build deep relationships. You share the great experience of performing with them," Gillie said.

These memories are but a few of the memorable and fun experiences spent at school. Many left with fantastic memories of their years spent at MHS.

Friends Standing <sup>U</sup><sub>P</sub>

What does friendship mean to you?

Friends stood up together throughout their high school careers at Mooresville. Students' social lives were very important to them and the people that they befriended along the way were even more important.

Some friendships took it to the next level. The "Wonder Squad" was a group of senior boys who had become best friends over the course of their high school careers. Adam Schmutte, Evan Downey, Ryan Gentry, and Michael Christian all became friends and stayed close by hanging out and being there for each other.

"We basically just sit around Evan's house until we think of something to do," Schmutte said.

While some of the Wonder Squad's adventures were not exciting, others were.

"We are kind of super heroes, but we kind of are not at the same time," Christian said.

Perhaps these students were super heroes because of their amazing friendship and tight bond.

Go Army

West Point Bound

In the Fall of 2011, Student Body President Hannah Jones sat on the bleachers at the soccer fields and took off her shin guards.

"I'll be late to practice tomorrow," Jones said, "I have to take the PFT for West Point."

She was informing them about her latest physical fitness test guaranteeing her acceptance to the United States Military Academy-West Point.

"I had to do 50 push ups, 90 sit ups and a lot of other difficult things," she said. "I was really nervous."

Later that school year, at the girls basketball game against Terre Haute South, Jones received a phone call from a representative at Senator Dan Coats' office saying that everything looked good on her application and he was nominating her to be accepted into West Point.

"Are you serious?" Jones asked, before realizing that he wouldn't be calling her if it wasn't true.

A few days later, Jones received a package of acceptance from West Point, ensuring her that she had officially been accepted.

"I felt so proud to finally know that I am going to the college I've dreamed of going to for two years," she said.

Jones planned to earn a bachelor's degree while studying political science from the United States Military Academy-West Point. After graduating, Jones would be required to serve five years in the Army where she would be able to input where she would want to be stationed.

"I told myself I was going to go to West Point at the beginning of my junior year," Jones said, "I'm so happy that I will be fulfilling my dreams."

Throughout high school, many students agree that they have learned some very important life lessons. Whether the lesson be small or big, high school taught them many things. The four years of high school are critical to a young adults life, because they have to learn to take things more seriously and prepare for their futures.

#hashtags

Twitter was a social media site where students could follow each other and post statuses about anything that's on their mind. Twitter was one of the top trends at Mooresville High School. A status posted on twitter usually contains the # symbol, called a hashtag, which is used to mark keywords or topics in a Tweet.

Twitter was filled with hashtags about all different ideas. Many seniors had a "favorite hashtag" that could be an inside joke with their friends or just something that the person put in most of their tweets; it could be anything!

Have You Heard This Beat Before?

Senior creates home music studio

Senior Gage White was challenged with getting musically improved. Gage wanted to prove to people that he could do it. Over several years Gage started to become more involved in music.

Gage made remixes of songs and produced some of his own songs and music videos. As Gage got more involved in the music industry, he saw the bigger picture and more as to why the famous artists do what they do. He found his passion in music, as do most artists.

It's waking up every morning doing what they love. At the age of thirteen Gage began playing the guitar. When he was 15, he got a ukulele.

On his eighteenth birthday he got music software and a beat pad. "A beat pad is similar to a drum machine; it's got clips of different sounds in a machine. You tap it with your fingers and it makes the sounds you want it to. This beat pad allows me to create a lot of fresh beats," Gage said.

Over the years Gage has created his own sound booth and monitor set up. The bottom picture is a 'before' a picture of the studio, and to the left is his newer, more professional studio.

The middle picture to the right is Gage in a YouTube video. One can find Gage on YouTube.com/gauge. Lastly, the picture on the top is Gage and his friends making music and hanging out.

"We love getting together and just doing what we all love," Gage said.

For many MHS students, the message was very clear; music was something they couldn't live without.

"It's more than just a song it's a way of living your life," sophomore Nick Schmutte said.

Sophomore Alex Langford said, "Music helps me relate to my problems and block the world out."

"Music allows kids to get away from things with doing anything harmful to them self or others," said Maddie Cummings.

Gage said he couldn't agree more with the things the others had said.

Staff Spirit

The Faculty and staff of 2011-2012 were ready and prepared to start the year with their own ideas for spirit year. In 2011, the staff showed spirit with College Day in September and ended the fall semester with Ugly Christmas Sweater Day in December.

By Mackenzie Masters and Olivia Scully

Mooreville faculty and staff members smile proudly showing off their pride for the colleges that they attended in September. The staff member in charge of picking this idea was Dr. Debra Page, director of the Guidance Department. "College day is a great way for every staff member to share information about their college or university with their students," Dr. Page said.

2011-2012 Faculty staff huddle around on the stage to take active in the Ugly Christmas Sweater. Mrs. Jennifer Perkins was the one who was mainly in charge of coming up with this spirit event in December. "Let's face it - everyone has a clothing item that they thought was a treasure and it's not; that's the definition of a Christmas Sweater," Mrs. Jennifer Perkins said.

Mr. Chuck Muston and Mr. Tim Vanwanzele smile for the 2011 Ugly Christmas Sweater day, which involved all of Mooreville Faculty staff in wearing the ugliest sweater in December. "I loved it. I won! And I got to wear my mom's sweater," Mr. Tim Vanwanzele said.

Even Principal Chuck Muston got into the school spirit. "I thought it was a fun activity. The highlight for me was seeing Mr. Van wearing his mother's sweater; it was an award winner that made my effort look like something out of Gentleman's Quarter magazine," Mr. Muston said.

Sophomore Hannah Outcalt and freshman Nora Stovall work their way around the corner on the cross country home course. "I had fun running a good cross country season," Stovall said.

Junior Brent McCreary pins his opponent at the state wrestling meet. McCreary had a good season by being the only individual to make it out onto state. "It felt really good to accomplish a life long goal I've had since I was four," McCreary said.

Sophomore Molly Tieman sets up the golf tee before preparing herself to take the swing. "For such a young team, we did the best we could. Next year we will be better, but we had a lot of fun this year," Tieman said.

The boys sing and dance at the Madrigals Dinner, a way for the choirs to earn money. "It's a lot of fun to perform. I had a blast, especially during the Mads dinner," senior Corey Slick said.

StandOUT

With a school population of more than 1,300 it was a challenge for students at MHS to stand out. Whether they chose to dress differently like senior Jacob Copp did, or got a new hair style like Sidney Bills, students were standing out.

"Having a different style than the other kids in my class helps me stand out from the other guys in my class," Jacob Copp said.

But it wasn't always about what students wore or how they did their hair. Some students stood out in the classroom. Some students chose to take harder classes or classes in which they could excel.

"I like taking ACP English, because I am able to challenge myself and I'm preparing my self for college at the same time," senior Amanda Wenz said.

Some students chose to stand out in sports. Freshman like Elizabeth Brock and Jacob Johnson worked hard in practice and were able to secure a spot on their Varsity teams that they tried out for.

"I stand out by not letting my age and grade hold me back when it comes to competing," Elizabeth Brock said.

Teachers also stood out by having hobbies that students didn't consider normal.

No matter what students did to get noticed, they stood out. Whether by accident or on purpose student and teachers were standing out every day during and after school hours.

by Allie McLaughlin

Junior Meghann Fitzpatrick follows through with a good forehand on the day of the 'can't funeral'. "I think it's great that our team can get together and be supportive as a group, and support each other as we hope for a successful season," Fitzpatrick said.

Sophomore Craig McKinney was dressed as an injured army veteran that lost his legs in an explosion. "He had read an autobiography called No Turning Back by Bryan Anderson. One student thought he had really lost his legs. A teacher thought he was a real guest speaker, and several classes where he presented weren't sure if he was the real person or not, because he did such a good job," Ms. Sharon Eickhoff said.

Seniors Shianne Holder, Karri Wise, and Mandy Wenz sit around a table during the spring play "Wild Dust," a mystery and a comedy. "The play went really well; we had a great cast, and I'll be sad to say goodbye to them this May," Wenz said.

The boys will not always succeed like they would like to. They still took it lightly and tried harder the next time. "Sometimes plans do not work out, but you just have to move on," senior Jordan Rozzi said.

Quarterback, Frank Brock loves the game with all of his heart. He never gave up even when it was hard to continue. "My favorite thing about playing football is getting to leave no doubt on the field and give everything I had on every play," Brock said.

Pitch It OUT

Heading for a Touchdown.

Even though the 2011 Varsity Football season was not the most successful year they have had, the boys never gave up.

In many games, the score bounced back and forth, such as, in the Plainfield game.

Many players said that playing against their rivals, Plainfield, was their favorite memory of the season. As the game progressed, the scores kept bouncing back and forth and the game went into overtime.

"Having double over-time, and the score bouncing back and forth, really made this game exhilarating," senior Jordan Rozzi said.

Games like these always made the boys pumped up and more eager to win. That's why, when they prevailed, they showed excitement. Even though they sometimes lost their confidence, they always tried their best.

The boys as a team learned many lessons throughout the season. One of the biggest lessons was to always play for the guys next to them and to do your part. They learned to never give up, because if they were down, the game could slip.

"My favorite thing about playing football is hitting hard and having my friends right there with me through thick and thin," defensive end Dwight Stapleton said.

As the season progressed, the team became closer as a whole. They had to learn to always be there for each other and to do their own part as a team in each and every play.

Many of the boys believed that with better defense and teamwork that the season would have gone a lot better. But the most important part of the season was that they all had fun and enjoyed the year with all of their teammates.

By being with their friends, competing, tackling, dominating or being dominated, they still had an enjoyable year.

"It was a year well played," Head Coach Kevin Hutchins said.

by Trisha Hamilton

Rushing out onto the field is always exhilarating. Not knowing whether it's going to be a win or lose was always a reason for them to try harder. "A main lesson we learned was to never quit because we sometimes let games slip," junior Chase Venable said.

There are some things that the players said they could change about the Decatur game. "One thing we could have improved was our overall attitude," junior Zane O'Dell said.

Coach Hutchins being motivational. The players take a knee as they listen to what Coach Hutchins has to say. "Coach Hutchins always says inspirational things to help us look toward the positive and away from the negative," Mac Norton said.

Heading out to start a game was a great feeling for many players. "I love being able to go out and play with all of my buddies that I grew up with," senior Cody Rawlings said.

Throughout the season, the boys learned that teamwork was a big priority. In football you have to focus on the team as a whole. "Play for the guys next to you and do your part," senior Dwight Stapleton said.

The JV Players are getting pumped up for the game. "I think the boys did a great job on offense and did better as the year went on," Coach Mark Rooker said.

READY FOR A TOUGH SEASON

Junior Varsity

The JV team had a great start to the season with a big win over Lebanon.

The rest of the JV season did not go as well as their first couple of games. By the end of their season, they finally realized they had to play as an entire team instead of playing as individuals.

"Once we all came together and played as a team, we had a lot more fun playing in the games," sophomore fullback Brandon Sellers said.

"Playing on JV this year was a very good learning experience for all of us and it has gotten us ready for playing varsity next year," Cody VanWinkle said.

Freshmen

The freshman players proved that they belong on the Mooresville High School football team. The freshman players surprised everyone, including coaches and upperclassmen.

The freshman team had a lot of exciting games. One of them include the game against Franklin.

The game started off slow and they were all tied up until tailback Tommy Waites got a fumble and ran it back for a 99 yard touchdown. This touchdown gave them the lead and they ended up winning by one touchdown.

"Overall I had a great time playing for Mooreseville High School for my first year," freshman Jon Crowe said.

by Emily Warfield

Running back Braxton Haas runs the ball down the field for a touchdown. "It's such an exciting feeling when you score a touchdown," Haas said.

Quarterback Cody Cannon keeps the ball and takes off running while trying to miss the other defenders. "It is such a privilege to be able to play quarterback," Cannon said.

Sophomore Braxton Haas runs the ball for a big play while dodging the defenders. "This was my favorite game of the season, it was a great way to start off the year," Haas said.

Going All

Kicking It Into Action

As the fall sports season started, the boys' soccer team kicked into action.

Hard work in practice paid off when they played.

"We improved a lot since last year. The main difference was we did not bicker and we played as a team," junior Kyler Smith said.

Soccer players put in a lot of hard work physically to be able to play their positions.

Goalie Jake Morning said that the goalie position is, "the toughest position on the field. It's hard to do and not a lot of people can do it."

Hard work results in improvement. Improvement is good for any team.

"We can work on capitalizing on our opportunities to win the games we lost," junior Brandon Polson said.

Their hard work paid off when they reached the sectional championship for the first time in many years. They battled in a hard fought game, but unfortunately were defeated in the end.

"It was one of the most emotional losses," senior Andrew Majeski said.

Like every other team, they had their game day rituals. Before the game was about to start, they went into a huddle and prayed. Another ritual occurred at the end of half time and again at the end of the game when they ran from one side of the field to the other side, where their fans are seated.

Hard work resulted in a varsity record of 10-3-1, and a junior varsity record of 5-5. The varsity team also won the mid-state conference and a trip to the sectional championship game.

Michelle Majeski

Junior Caleb Shaw charges at the ball while fighting off the opposing team. He used the skills he's learned over the years of playing soccer to prevent the ball from being stolen. "When you're trying to get to the ball, it's just a bunch of madness," Shaw said.

Varsity Boys huddle up to pray before playing each of their games.

Junior Mason Gonterman is in motion to kick the ball. He was a JV goalie who enjoyed defending the goal. "I like to kick balls away from the goal," Mason said.

Senior Kyle

Niehaus goes after the ball. Although he is a left-footed kicker, he went after it with his right foot. "I really just wanted to get the ball up to the forwards," Kyle Niehaus said.

Senior Jake Swigert charges at the ball. He was trying to take the ball as far up the field as possible. "Whenever I see the ball I charge at it with everything I've got," Jake Swigert said.

The Varsity Soccer team wins the Mid-State Conference and proudly poses for pictures holding their trophy. They played a great game against Plainfield. "It was a hard fought win, and we earned it," senior Evan Downey said.

Senior Andrew Majeski sets up to power kick the ball in. His goal was to kick it as far up the field as possible. "I saw my goal, I knew what I had to do, and I did it," Majeski said.

Senior Evan Downey prepares to throw the ball in to his teammates.

Junior Jake Morning dives to save the ball. He prevented a point being scored against his team. "As a goalie you always have to be on your feet and anticipate where the ball is going to be kicked," Morning said.

Battle It<sup>OUT</sup>

SEEKING FOR A GOAL!

The expectations were high for the Lady Pioneers Varsity and Junior Varsity Soccer teams. Coming back after a terrific season of 17-3-1 and winning Sectionals in 2010, the girls knew the pressure was on. Not knowing what to expect after being moved from District 5 to District 4, the girls stayed confident and didn't let the change in competition psych them out.

Injuries played a major role on the team, making the season quite a challenge. With several girls out in the beginning of the season, some returning, some not. Halfway through the season, the girls started preparing for the Mid-State Conference.

"We just went out to practice everyday and we stayed focused," freshman Kellie Cavanaugh said.

Their efforts paid off taking them to the Conference Championship game against Plainfield.

"It was our most anticipated game," Varsity Head Coach Jason Damron said.

After a long fought battle, the girls came out taking home the first place trophy for the second year in a row.

"Everyone was excited, it was a great feeling," senior Audrey Warren said. But the journey wasn't over yet.

Mooreville, ranked 17th, faced Avon, ranked 6th, in the Sectional Championship game. The girls knew before the game that this was not going to be an easy victory. After playing the first 40 minutes with a tied score of 0-0, the team took on a new strategy of switching up player formations. Not knowing what to expect with the change, they fought hard until the very last minute of the game. The girls came up short with a final score of 2-0. Although the varsity team didn't come out victorious in the end, they had a terrific season of 13-2-1 for Varsity and 6-3-1 for JV.

BRINGING THE POWER

The girls varsity volleyball team faced a tough 2011-2012 season. Despite losing four seniors, the five incoming seniors were ready to take over their leadership roles.

The Lady Pioneers had a very long season playing in 32 total games. The five seniors added on seven juniors and a freshmen setter to their roster. As a fairly young team, the girls hoped to play to their potential.

The Pioneers started off their season facing a tough loss against Northview, but got in their groove and beat Monrovia in three sets. They team also had a first place finish in the Earlybird Tournament.

"Before each game, we always did our 'UHHH' cheer with Callan (Swaim) starting it off. She always got everyone pumped up and ready to play," junior Taylor Porter said.

"We didn't play as well as we wanted to, but we all worked hard everyday and had fun," junior Taylorhitwood said.

After the games, there were an odd amount of Skittle wrappers and uneaten Skittles laying around the girls bench.

"During a game, a few of us were eating skittles on the bench. Coach Burnett told us that we had to throw them away, so we told her they gave us power. She let us eat them every game from then on," junior Heather Means said.

"I think this win (Terre Haute South) established an understanding of teamwork and presented a framework for the possibility of a successful season," Varsity Head Coach Mrs. Stephanie Burnett said.

The freshman team, coached by assistant varsity coach Kari Kenworthy, held a winning record with eight wins and only two losses. The Junior Varsity, coached by Jami Renner, finished out its season with eight wins and 11 losses, placing third in the Columbus East and Greenwood Tournaments. The varsity team, with help from the Skittle power, ended their season with eight wins and 11 losses, losing a hard fought battle against Northview during sectionals.

Freshman Jordan Childers sends a ball back over for a dig. Her teammates and Coach Kenworthy went on to win this game against Decatur 3-0. "I thought we played really hard, and did really well passing," freshman Lindsey Rode said.

Freshman Sarah Corbin sets up the ball to the open hitters. "I was about to begin my approach to spike the ball," sophomore Brittany Penn said.

The girls varsity volleyball team was all smiles after their "Dig Pink" game. Mooresville showed their concern for Breast Cancer Awareness month by wearing bright pink shirts, most of the girls added their own style too by wearing pink socks and pink headbands as well.

Sophomore Allison McQueen finishes up her swing. "I try to make nice and easy strokes," McQueen said.

Freshman Jourdan Blackburn lines up her putt. "It was good playing with freshman and sophomores; I think it made us closer," Blackburn said.

Walk It OUT New Season, New Start

The Girl's Golf Team was filled with freshman and sophomores, a very young team compared to the years past.

"I don't consider them underclassman, we treat everyone as equals. We don't even have a team captain," Coach Dana Dillman said.

The team grew closer throughout the season, and Coach Dillman learned a lot for it being her first year of coaching. Even though there were difficulties throughout the season, the girls toughed it out. They were all considered leaders, and every teammate received a varsity letter at the fall awards banquet.

Being athletes the girls set certain goals for themselves each year. All throughout the year, the girls work towards reaching that goal.

"My goal was to beat my lowest score, which by the end of the season I did," sophomore Allison McQueen said.

Overall the girl's golf team members grew closer as a team and looked forward to the next few years. They hope to improve their skills for the next golf season, and pull out with more wins.

"I think everyone from the beginning to the end improved, and I'm looking forward to next year," sophomore Danielle Warthen said.

Striving to reach new goals

The Boys Tennis Team was made up of mostly juniors, sophomores, and freshman. Even though there were only two senior boys, they still led the team to more victories than in the past.

The team captains were James Fields and Harrison Schafer.

"Our team goal for the year was to reach over 500," Fields said.

Although the boys had a tough season they still grew individually and as a team.

"I always try to get better with my foot work," freshman Chandler Gunnell said.

Head Coach Michael Teders had his own personal goals for the team.

"My coaching goal was to increase our total wins last year as well as increase our finish at the Mid-State tournament. We did both," Coach Teders said.

The boys improved throughout the season.

"We increasingly improve our playing skills by cooperating and having fun," sophomore Jacob Delk said.

They tied for third at the Mid- State Conference, and played the best they could at Sectionals. The team won three more matches, and went from sixth to third in the conference finish. That was the best that the tennis team had done in the past 10 years.

One of the main memories that stood out to the boys was the Edgewood Mustang Invitational where they took home second place.

The boys hoped to grow more every year, and to be able to work just as hard as they did in 2011.

Freshman Peyton Baker plays his first varsity match. "It was fun, but scary going and seeing what I have to live up to as a freshman," he said.

Junior Aaron Schaler practices serving before his varsity matches. "Varsity was fun because it was my first time playing it, which also made it more challenging," he said.

Junior Clay Huddleston plays number two singles.

The team always gets together before matches to know what their main focus is, and to play.

Gutting It Out

Enduring The Miles

Plenty went through a runner's head when they waited at the start of the race. It might have been phrases like "deep breath" or "I can do this."

But then that moment came: the official raised his arm, and the gun went in the air. Then, a puff of smoke released along with a loud "BANG!" that signaled the start.

Those races were what the runners spent early mornings of their summer preparing for.

"I tried to go to the conditioning, I didn't go every day. I mentally prepared myself," freshman Peyton Lindley said.

"I either rode my bike for five miles or ran two miles a day," sophomore Shane Hart said.

One thing most cross country runners agreed on was that running in the heat is the hardest. Some of the runners preferred it, but most would rather run in the cold.

"(In the heat) I get hot and tired faster," said freshman Quinn Cavin.

Although cross country is mainly an individual sport, the teammates came together the night before the races and had a traditional pasta dinner.

"We always have pasta dinners at a different team member's house the night before a meet. It's always fun and we really get to know each other," senior Kayla Halcomb said.

Running to most people, is hard, but the coach tried to make practices enjoyable. He even made the Friday morning breakfast after 5:45 a.m. practices.

"Fun practices could be a game day like ultimate Frisbee or a fun run such as a creek run," Coach Hook said.

Not all races were such an easy task to finish. Some of the runners might have had to say to themselves "It's just three miles, I'm half way there," or "Five more minutes is all that's left." Whatever the motivation was, it paid off.

The Mooresville cross country team skillfully came out on top in most races. Many runners beat their own personal records, but Passmore broke the school record.

Although the boys and girls teams did not advance past sectionals many of the runners broke their own personal bests.

Junior Michael Passmore made it past sectionals, regionals, and on to the state meet. His teammates were very proud of his achievements.

Coach Adam Hook said, "A lot of goals were accomplished this season, even though it may have appeared differently on paper."

BRINGING THE POWER

The crowd went silent after they heard the referee blow the whistle. Eight players surround the circle around half court. Two other players stand at the half court line, one at each side.

The referee stands close to them and throws the basketball in the air for the tip. The season has begun.

The boys' basketball team put in extra time and practice before the season even started. Extra practice helped sharpen their skills in order to play better on the day of the game.

Before every game the players prepare themselves. "I listen to music to get ready for a game," senior Aaron Montgomery said.

As the season went on the basketball teams kept improving. The teams improvement boosted their confidence when they played the next game.

The teams did not do it alone. With the support of parents, coaches and fans, the players pushed on.

Many memories were made along the way. "I will remember becoming the leading scorer the most," senior Justin Kenney said.

The Varsity team was made up of 10 players and went to a record of 18-4. The team went to sectionals and beat Martinsville and Terre Haute North.

The Junior Varsity team consisted of 13 players. They ended the year with a record of 11-9.

The freshman team also had ten players and went to a record of 18-3. One of their achievements was becoming Mid-State Champions.

The basketball season was an enjoyable season for everybody. "We had a great year," head coach Bob Carter said.

Senior Justin Kenney dribbles the ball around his opponent while he calls a play to his teammates. "I'm excited to play at a high level in college next year at Ancilla College," Kenney said.

Senior James Fields looks to pass the ball to his teammate sophomore Jacob Johnson. "This season was great, because we really came together and played as a team," Fields said.

READY FOR A TOUGH SEASON

"Go team, win team, fight, fight fight. Go blue!" is just what the Mooresville Lady Pioneers did.

The Lady Pioneers faced some struggles in the beginning before showing the community and their conference what they were made of.

After losing several key seniors throughout the past few years, the Lady Pioneers were brought small troubles that were eventually conquered.

Head Varsity Coach Mark Hurt said this when asked what his thoughts were on the 2011- 2012 season, "It was a successful season, it was a new team - the girls learned each other's strengths and weakness and also learned to accept others. That paramount us to win sectionals, and make it to the Regional Finals."

The varsity team won their fourth consecutive sectional title and had attended the elite eight three of the last four years.

"Every game we played, we knew it would take everyone to win, and I believe we proved that by winning sectionals," senior Amber Viles said.

The freshman and Junior Varsity came with the same struggles as the Varsity Lady Pioneers, but were eventually triumphant as they finished with a positive season.

"JV was really fun and we always had a good time. It was an overall good season," sophomore Kayla Harpold said.

Senior Amber Viles (left), also a three year varsity basketball player got accepted to Franklin College where she was asked to play basketball and track. Amber was accepted on academics. "I'm excited to get to go to Franklin soon. This has opened up a lot of opportunities for me and while it makes me a bit nervous, I'm eager to become a Grizzly," Viles said.

"I'm really happy for both Morgan and Amber to be able to continue playing the game they love after high school," Coach Mark Hurt said.

Zach Minardo takes down the Brownsburg Wrestler. The match ended with Minardo beating his opponent. "I was just mentally, and physically tougher then him... he couldn't handle it." Minardo, a junior, said.

Wrestle It Ready for a Take Down

For wrestlers, their sport was more than just a physical sport it was also all about the mental strategies. Moves like ankle picks, cradles, and cross wrist rolls were all used to pin their opponent. All the hard work and practicing paid off when these boys won their matches.

"When you win, knowing you are better than your opponent (is one of the most rewarding things about wrestling)," junior Jordan Frye said.

Every match there were new goals set to accomplish for their wrestling careers.

"(Wrestling) teaches me what hard work really is," senior Jake Swigert said.

Some people on the wrestling team had been doing this most of their lives and planned on wrestling in college; however, before college many of the guy's short term goals had been to place in state. Brent McCreary stood out by making it all the way to state as a junior.

"(Best match of the season) The ticket round at semi-state, losing 4-2, then pinning the kid to go to state," McCreary said

Staying in shape was part of all sports, but the varsity wrestlers had to cut weight several times in order for them to be able to wrestle in their weight class for the match.

Brent McCreary stays serious on his first state match. Even when he was injured he finished his match. "Ow, I think my MCL is gone!" junior McCreary said

"I've had to cut up to 12 pounds before," freshman Mitchel Anderson said.

Over all, varsity ended its season with a 16-4 record.

"I thought the season went well, the guys worked hard, and we accomplished a lot of goals. We improved a lot through out the year," Coach Zach Errett said.

Sophomore Nathan Snyder stands ready on the block. He started to get very pumped. "I feel my blood pressure rising and my adrenaline kicking in right before jumping off the block," Snyder said.

Junior Nick Ditch flips off of the diving board. He had a great season and was able to improve his dives.

Each meet was a serious event to each swimmer during the season. The team worked very hard to improve their times, strokes, and dives. While winning was important, the team focused more on improving.

"Looking around at my teammates, I saw them with their iPods playing, with serious faces, and I saw others stretching out. We tried to relax, and we tried to get pumped up for the meets because we all wanted to improve," junior Katy Hendrickson said.

The team had a great feeling of success during the season.

"I worked hard to get the time off of my 100 butterfly and I felt great. Improving is rare and I'm proud of myself for breaking the school record," sophomore Baileigh Hance said.

While improvement was stressed, the team still wanted to win.

"It feels good to win. When we won against Martinsville, which hasn't happened in six years, I felt so happy and proud," junior Jake Yegehlener said.

"I thought the kids did really well. They responded to instruction. We had four records broken this season," Coach Dennis Davis said.

"I broke the 400 free relay and I got my best times this season. I had some injuries so there were rough patches, but I still managed to improve with my team," senior Kylee Rhodes.

The team had a great overall season and improved from last year while having fun.

Junior Allie Phillips breathes in quickly, not losing her focus. She really enjoyed this season because she was able to improve and do her best. "It was one of the best seasons. Swimming is a challenging activity and it is really an accomplishment to do well," Phillips said.

Sophomore Levi Jennings flips off of the diving board. Throughout the season he worked hard to improve. "It was my best season so far. I was six points away from the diving record," Jennings said.

Sophomore Jack Elo prepares to jump off the block. He readied himself. "I am a little bit nervous, but it is such an adrenaline rush," Elo said.

Sophomore Jessie Lacer reaches to touch her toes. She became focused while competing. "I'm always in the zone. I don't lose concentration when I dive," Lacer said.

Senior Callan Swaim takes a quick breath during a meet. She enjoyed swimming despite its challenges. "I really enjoyed the 200 medley. It was difficult, but it was fun to swim," Swaim said.

Junior Alex Hicks leaps into the pool. She loved the feeling swimming gave her. "I felt excited and maybe a little nervous, but as soon as I hit the water I was ready to race," Hicks said.

Junior Bram Wood slides into second base. He enjoyed this game. "Playing against Whiteland is always really fun and intense, so it is always a good game," Wood said.

Take Me OUT To the Ball Game

The team had a bond that was unlike the other teams. Playing baseball was like a brotherhood. Most of the baseball team have played together since little league.

"My teammates are my best friends. I've known most of them since I was little. We eat dinner after our games together a lot. They're family," junior Cole Long said.

The players tried very hard, whether they were at practice or playing in a game. No matter what the boys wanted to win.

"We were out to win as many as possible," sophomore Brandon Sellers said.

"Even though we had some some tough losses we went back to practice to get better and focused to get the 'W' for the next game. We've learned a lot this season," Sellers said.

Despite their desire to win, the Coach Eric McGaha, wanted his team to do their best. He wanted to win just as badly as his team wanted to.

"I don't care about the labor pains. Just bring me the baby," McGaha said.

The varsity team won the Covenant Christian Westside Classic and placed third in the Roncalli Invitational. The JV team won the Mooresville JV/F Invitational. Overall It was a great season for all the teams.

New park, tough opponents

The myth of "diamonds are a ladies best friend" might be true for your 2011-2012 Mooresville High School Softball program.

The Lady Pioneers received a new home to where they could bring the school pride. For the 2012 season, the girls no longer played at Sunshine Park, but at new fields built specifically for MHS Girls Softball.

"It's very nice being able to have a brand new field that we can call home and be proud of," freshman Elizabeth Brock said, "we're finally able to practice for however long we like to without having to share the fields."

Both of the softball teams, varsity and junior varsity, had a rough season from the beginning as their first opponent was the rival Avon Orioles.

"The girls came out strong and ready to put up a fight against every opponent we faced," Ball said.

Junior Jeana Gregory, one of the Lady Pioneers, was ranked third in the state for her batting average.

The varsity Lady Pioneers finished out their season in a sectional game against Plainfield losing by four. That concluded their season with a 8-14-1 record and the junior varsity Lady Pioneers finished out their season with a 9-13 record.

Junior Sydney Haynes makes contact with the ball during a varsity softball game against Bloomington North. "Getting I get a hit is one of the best feelings in the world to a softball player," Haynes said.

The varsity infield players break out of a huddle to get each other pumped up for the next inning. "Some of my favorite moments during the game are when the infield comes to in huddle to get our pitcher fired up to get the win," senior Tori Wilson said.

Junior Eli Enstrom swings for a tee off. Golf meant a lot to him, and he wanted to get better. "I practice everyday and try my hardest to improve," Enstrom said.

Sophomore Ben Hammon follows through with a swing. He was trying to work his way up. "I worked the entire winter break to improve my swing and it has really paid off," Hammon said.

Sophomore Brady Sappenfield putts the winning point for the team. It was a big move for him to be able to follow through for the team. "I felt so accomplished that I could do something that big. I was really happy with the 34 that I scored that day," Sappenfield said.

Boy's Golf

The Mooresville High School Boys Golf Team represented MHS well in the Spring season. The boys spent a great deal of time in the off season to bring the school pride.

Coach Ernie Adams and Coach Kyle Miller had the golf team working hard in the gym before hitting the fairway with great gusto. The Mooresville coaching staff had the boys benching, power cleaning, doing extensive leg workouts and vigorous reps on the power sled for a great season.

Catching up with some of the athletes mid season with a 2:3 win ratio all had great attitudes for the rest of what the season would hold. The last two matches in that count were lost by only a few strokes.

"Practices are really fun, the team gets along well! We are good, but could be even better if we improved by a few strokes," sophomore Ben Hammon said.

The Golf Team did well this season and it was evident that the rigorous workouts and practicing from 3 pm - 6:30 pm everyday after school really worked.

The Mooresville Boys Golf was ranked 17th in the state of Indiana towards the end of May, and ended up placing sixth in Sectionals. They performed well over all and have high hopes for the seasons to come.

Sophomores Michelle Majeski and Jackie Farrand play doubles at Mid-State. Michelle prepared by eying an incoming ball. "I used to be afraid of playing the net, but now I love it. The best feeling is being able to slam the ball so the other team can't get it," Majeski said.

Junior Meghann Fitzpatrick is in mid-serve, setting up for an ace. Meghann really enjoyed the tennis season. "All the girls had a lot of fun and I think we all improved," Fitzpatrick said.

Calling It OUT Girls Tennis

"No one comes into our house and pushes us around," Coach Mike Teders said quoting Rudy. "In all seriousness ladies, go out and play your hardest. It will be a tough match, but we beat them last year and we can do it again."

The 2012 tennis season was unlike any other. With such a diverse, talented, and improved team, the girls were sure to be successful.

"I think it's great that our team can get together and be supportive as a group, and support each other as we hope for a successful season," junior Meghann Fitzpatrick said.

The girls tennis team mourned the word "can't". They had a different perspective and decided to make a change.

"The 'Can't Funeral' is one of the things that was introduced because the coaches and players have a new outlook. Everyone is pumped about the upcoming season," sophomore Justine Christian said.

For the first time in Coach Teders' career coaching the girls went into double digits with a varsity record of 11-3. They had beaten teams that had been tough competitors in years prior, such as Plainfield and Whiteland.

The Lady Pioneers Tennis Team received 3rd place out of 7 teams in the Mid-State tennis tournament. For the first time in Mooresville History, the Girl's Tennis team won sectionals. They did not make it as a team to semi-state, but junior Meghann Fitzpatrick, did, however, make it as an individual.

READY FOR A CHEERFUL SEASON

From standing on the sidelines to getting involved with the community, it was a crazy year for the Mooresville High School Cheerleaders!

After wearing the same uniform for six years the athletic department decided it was time for the cheerleaders get them new uniforms.

The year kicked off with cheering on all the runners at the Indy 500. The Pioneers theme was Speedy Gonzales. They yelled chants such as "Be speedy like Speedy" and "Andale andale" to the runners.

Up next was cheer camp at Indiana University for three hot days. The cheerleaders marched all around campus yelling cheer and chants to take home the spirit stick.

"Camp was such a great experience and I learned so much. I cannot wait to go back next year!" sophomore Shawna Marino said.

"This is our year, we will achieve our dream!"

These inspiring words were part of the competition squad's routine. They were a close team and pushed through a lot of conflicts to have a great season.

"We improved so much from the year before! I am very proud of this team and this something I can definitely look back on," junior Jaimee McQueen.

Cheerleaders practiced and conditioned twice a week all summer to get ready for football season.

The cheerleaders showed their school spirit during football and basketball games by dressing up to match the theme of the game. Some themes included nerd, costume, beach, and Jersey Shore.

"Over all it was a great year with so many memories. Levi and the girls made me so proud and I wish them the best of luck next year," Varsity Coach Savannah Tielking said.

MAKING A RUN FOR IT

The Boys and Girls Track and Field team wanted to make their mark on history in 2012. Several athletes contested for a spot on the varsity roster as well as a chance at defeating a school record.

The girls 4 by 800 meter relay team were a perfect example of this mentality. The relay team consisted of senior Gwen Snyder and sophomores Ashley Halbert, Amelia Phillips, and Paige Baker. This relay team worked all season to get their shot at a new school record.

"Our coach said she would be impressed if we beat it by even one second," Halbert said.

"I was very excited for the girls because they had been working towards this record all season long and I wanted them to accomplish it," Girls coach Erin Bechtold said.

The boys team was very young. With only two seniors, it largely consisted of underclassmen.

Freshman and sophomores had to bring their best efforts to every meet. Juniors and seniors provided the leadership needed to have a hardworking and diligent working system.

On the girls side, the team consisted of a majority of freshmen. Although just beginners in high school, they mixed in well with competition from other schools, many of them making the varsity team.

Many made it through sectionals and onto regionals. On the girls side, Mandy Fisher and Sarah Corbin advanced on. For the boys, Michael Passmore and Jordan Ooley both qualified. Passmore raced his way all the way through regionals and placed eleventh in the Boys 1600 meter run at the State Meet at Indiana University.

Runners take off to start the one mile run. Mooresville runners wanted to make sure they had a reasonable spot to start out with. "The first part of our race is critical to make sure we don't end up at the back of the pack," freshman Hannah Shelton said.

Freshman Nora Stovall edges her way towards the front during her 400 Meter race. Stovall kicked back the last 200 meters to complete her victory. "The last part of my race is always crucial, I have to put out everything I have," Stovall said.

Freshman Josh Darrenkamp jumps as far as he can during the long jump. Darrenkamp jumped right after he competed in the 100 Meter Dash. "I was a little winded, but I couldn't let that affect me," Darrenkamp said.

Freshman Dylan Scott competes in the 200 Meter race during the Avon meet. Scott was one of the few freshmen who competed as a varsity member. "It was cool competing with kids who were a lot older than I am," Scott said.

Junior Jon Stapert tries to remain in a good spot during his race. Stapert ran about two miles every day at practice. "I wanted to do my very best and contribute as much as I could to my team," Stapert said.

Junior Kyle Blackwell soars high over the bar during the High Jump. Blackwell finished 4th while jumping at the Avon and Cascade meet. "High jump wasn't my favorite event, just something I gave a try and found easy," Blackwell said.

for Wagon Trails Revue

Audience members quieted and turned their attention to the Wagon Trails Revue traditional opening slide show (photos by Dr. Phil Wright). Yearbook staff members followed up with their version of Hannah Montana's "Hoedown Throwdown."

The skit excited the audience with fun dancing and a lively tune for the upcoming performance by Pioneer Regiment. Junior Patrick Atkinson, who has been playing alto saxophone, discussed his view of the performance, "I was not very scared, because we have been practicing for weeks, but some of the freshman members looked really nervous," he said.

Many soloists performed at Wagon

Trail Revue such as Kaitlin Crafts' performance from Shrek the musical, and Olivia Meek's "There's a Place for Us" by Carrie Underwood. "I had a lot of fun being on stage, and I was pretty nervous before, but when I got up there it felt like an adrenaline rush," Meek said.

Many of the yearbook skits were written and performed by yearbook staff members, who also introduced the next performances. The theme for the show was western, where all the skits were based on western ideas including a skit about the popular video game Oregon Trail where "players" tried to make it to the show to see Spotlighters perform.

Senior Sammi Jo Acres performs as Mary Poppins singing "Practically Perfect" from the hit Musical in her solo act.

Sophomore Jacob Tooley plays for the Chamber Orchestra and also is a part of Spotlighters and Madrigals later in the show.

Senior Taylor Wright plays in all three of the bands performances in Wagon Trails, the Pioneer Regiment, Jazz Ensemble, and Concert Band.

Senior Loren Graham performs a solo in "The Boy from New York City" as a part of Finesse.

Junior Michelle Alsop sings a solo in the song "The House That Built Me" during Sensations performance.

Senior Evan Downey performs in his last Wagon Trails Revue performance as a part of Madrigals and Spotlighters. "It's what I love doing so every moment was cherished," Downey said.

Sophomore Rachel Head plays bass in the Symphony Orchestra and the Full Orchestra.

Freshman Carson Mulvehill dances her way through Millennium's performance.

Freshman Ayla Mason performs a solo "Someone Like You" by Adele. "As a freshman, I was pretty excited. My mom had performed in Wagon Trails back in high school and I felt very honored," Mason said.

Going to Cincinnati

The orchestra took a trip to Cincinnati to King's Island and visited the Cincinnati zoo. Students involved in this class go on an annual trip to celebrate their accomplishments throughout the year. Not only did these young men and women go down to Ohio to have fun, they also had the opportunity to perform at contest.

"We always stop at a close by zoo no matter where we go on the trip," sophomore Allison Quest.

The students left early on the last Friday of school and arrived home early Sunday morning.

Although the weather was hot and sticky, the students still managed to have a good time riding rides.

"It is a lot of fun being able to go and hang out with your friends, but waiting in lines for the rides stinks," junior Jon Stapert said.

To Disney and Back

Band members took off the Friday before Spring Break to go down to Orlando, Florida. They spent four days going to Walt Disney World and Universal Studios.

"When we saw the sign saying we were there, our bus driver honked the horn, which made us all super excited," senior Jordan Duke said.

Not only did they go on the rides, saw the characters, and had fun with their friends, but they also marched in a parade at Epcot and received a once in a life time opportunity to go behind the scenes of Walt Disney World.

"We saw a lot when we were behind the scenes. It was so different from the park. It was really quiet, but the workers were very friendly and wished us the best of luck," senior Hannah Vaughn said.

In addition to their time spent at the Disney Parks, they had a fun-filled day at Universal Studios.

"Universal Studios was a lot of fun. We went to Harry Potter World. The only bad part was that it was very crowded," senior Paige Jeffers said.

After spending four days in the parks and hanging out with friends, they headed back home.

"It was a good way to end my senior year," Hannah Vaughn said.

Band members march through Epcot in one of Disney's parades. They marched through the whole park.

Hannah Vaughn leads the marching band as they go through Epcot. Hannah has conducted the Band for the past two years. "Conducting and marching down in Disney World was a very memorable experience. Hearing complete strangers clap for me and take my picture will definitely be something I will never forget. I enjoyed every minute of the trip and only wish that I could do it again," Vaughn said.

Where Dreams Come True

Choir members from Spads and Finesse went to Walt Disney World and Medieval Times. They stayed in the All-Star Music hotel on Disney grounds. The members received an opportunity to work with the Disney Performing Arts Center, behind the scenes of Epcot.

"They taught us a High School Musical dance and then we sang songs from the Lion King," sophomore Kayla Harpold said.

Medieval Times was, in a way, like a renaissance fair. The outside was a castle and on the inside there was an arena with horses and knights.

"It looked like something you would see in a movie; there was sword fighting and jousting," said senior Tyler Partloe.

The choir members went to all the parks, enjoying the rides and characters.

"My friends and I stayed in lines to get pictures and autographs with a bunch of different characters," Harpold said.

Each member of the choir took home special memories of their own.

"The best memory of the trip was when Evan Downey, Robbie Brown, and I rode Splash Mountain three times in a row," sophomore Cory Sims said.

by Michelle Majeski

Cinderella's castle is the symbol for Disney that everyone knows today. It can be seen as visitors look down Main Street as they walk through the gates of the Magic Kingdom.

David Trusty, Josh Lambert, and Ryan Coleman take a picture while wearing their unique hats. They bought the hats when they traveled around the world in Epcot. "I was making new friends all around the world from Asians to warriors on the Alamo," David Trusty said.

Jackie Harris and Rachel Wathen take a picture with a person dressed in character at Medieval Times. Once they entered into the park every single person there besides tourists were dressed for the ages. "Medieval Times was so much fun! The people were always in character," sophomore Jackie Harris said.

Raleigh Roberson, Ryan Coleman, Paige Ellenberger, and Josh Lambert pose for a picture on a bridge with a nice view of the castle. They picked the spot because of the scene behind them. "It was cool going to Disney with my boyfriend and friends," Raleigh Roberson said.

As Zach Hall and Matt Walker await their turn to ride the Toy Story ride. They took a picture with Zurg while he was in jail. "We were imprisoned with Zurg," Zach Hall said.

Mrs. Sheryl Fyffe successfully lead the full Mooresville orchestra at the annual Octoboo concert. This concert was different because, the orchestra hosted special guest Sammy Terry. This was also the first year of having three orchestras come together as one.

Tune <sup>U</sup><sub>P</sub> For orchestra

Anxiously waiting back stage at the big Wagon Trails Revue concert, performers had been working so hard for this important performance. They were all tuned and ready to go. Finally onstage with music out and bows ready, they play on Mrs. Sheryl Fyffe's cue. All of the Mooresville's High School orchestras played a great performance. The audience loved them.

Mooresville High School now had three different orchestra classes. The chamber orchestra, which were the class for students who were more performance oriented and who were motivated to reach to higher level of music. The advanced orchestra consisted of mostly juniors and seniors.

This class was for the students to stretch their abilities. Finally, the concert orchestra consisted of mostly freshmen and sophomores. In this class they strove to learn more advanced techniques and to prepare for upper level music.

"Although we have three separate classes, I still consider all the students as member of ONE orchestra as we combine our efforts for contests," Orchestra teacher and conductor Mrs. Sheryl Fyffe said.

Mr. Jason Freeman, band director and Mrs. Fyffe worked together to create a full orchestra, which included of both band and orchestra students.

"I love playing for special events.

I always enjoy being part of a group effort, but I like the opportunity to play for something/someone. It gives the other musicians and me a chance to show what we are made of," senior double bass player Jason Hackett said.

"I love that we play a challenging, diverse, and intriguing array of music," first chair violinist Claire Ronan said.

The main goal for the orchestra was to achieve the highest level of playing a more sophisticated, mature sound.

The Mooresville High School combined orchestras competed in the Indiana State School Music Association competition at Ben Davis High School and received a gold rating.

"I want them to play and perform the pieces of Group 1 (highest level) music by the end of this school year. we have such strong players in the chamber orchestra. I feel very capable of reaching this goal," Mrs Fyffe said.

Peter Thiede, seven-year orchestra veteran had played to cello for Mooresville High School. Pete became interested in playing in an orchestra after watching his sister play.

Caitlyn Hymer had played the violin for five years. "I love getting new music and playing at concerts," she said.

Kaitlyn Lowe started playing cello when she was in sixth grade. "I love to all my friends that play in orchestra and I love to play for them," she said. Kaitlyn Played a great solo at the yearly Italian Feast concert.

Show Choir success

The Mooresville High School Show Choirs had a very active season in 2011-2012. All of the choirs traveled around to various competitions and practiced for many hours each week to finish with one of their best years on record.

"My favorite part about Show Choir is the dancing, the performing aspect of Show Choir always excites me!" junior James Hardin said.

If any member of Show Choir was asked they were almost guaranteed to describe their choir as a family. The groups spent much of their time throughout the week practicing their vocals and getting down the choreography for each number they performed. The choirs then traveled to competitions on the weekends to put together everything they had spent hours perfecting.

However, Show Choir was not all competitions and seriousness. The choirs would get together just to have fun and bond as a group. The Finesse girls participated in an overnight throughout the school year and the combined Spads group got together for a camp in which they got to know each other better and all work together.

"One of my favorite memories from choir this year was the Finesse overnight and getting to spend time with all of the girls," sophomore Samantha Haney said.

With the choirs being a blended age group, it really helped them become closer. The older students were there to mentor and give advice to the younger performers.

"There are several good leaders and role models in the senior class, and they provide a strong foundation for our choral groups," Choir Director Jason Damron said.

This was one of the most successful years in quite some time for all of the Show Choirs and the best competition year since Damron was made director of Spotlighters. Each of the groups made several improvements throughout the season and worked their hardest to finish strong having had an outstanding year.

Spotlighters prepare for their opening number at Wagon Trails Revue. They performed "Singing in the Rain" and "Umbrella" in their powerhouse song. "The best feeling during the show choir season was when we made finals at Homestead for the second year in a row," junior James Harden said.

Freshman Abby Crump leads Millennium in her solo on the night of the Wagon Trails Revue. This was their first performance of the season. "Going to the Lafayette competition was my best choir memory even though we didn't make finals, we had a lot of fun hanging out and being together," freshman Abby Crump said.

Spotlighters perform "Lioness Hunt" at Homestead High School. Spots placed fourth out of fifteen show choirs coming out of the finals. "Homestead was our best competition, it was the best Moorsville has done in a very long time. It was the best feeling in the world," senior Sammi Jo Acres said.

Singing as a quartet, sophomore Rileigh Roberson, senior Loren Graham, senior Michaela Baskerville, and junior Gracie Pardieck sing "Boy from New York City." The four sang this as the rest of the choir prepared for their next number. "It is fun to perform the song because we get to really act it up!" sophomore Rileigh Roberson said.

The freshman choir Millennium performs its upbeat song to open its show. Solos by Abby Crump, Ayla Mason, Tristin O'Riley, and Madison McGuire grabbed the crowds attention. "Throughout the performances, Millennium really improved their show," Choir Director Jason Damron said.

Sophomore Morganne Belton is all smiles during Finesse's show. Their dances really got everyone into their performance. "The hardest part of being in show choir was remembering three hours of choreography after you just learned it," Belton said.

During Half-time, the girl's guard and marching band perform their half-time show at Moore'sville's Varsity Football Team against Decatur. This helps the crowd pump up their Pioneers for the second half of the game. "Guard, at first was just something to occupy myself, but later it turned into something more, now the girls are practically my family, I love them all," sophomore Jessica Rickett said.

Guarding success

The Pioneer Winter Guard had another great year, as MHS hosted IHSCGA State Prelims in 2011. With most of the girls only being in guard for at least two years, the pressure was on for the more experienced girls to step it up.

"We had so much fun using stuff that made us look more into it," freshman Lynzee Smith said.

Most of the time, guard and marching band were always at the same competition. Their most competitive competition was at the Indiana State Fair, when Moore'sville's marching band placed in the top Sweet Sixteen.

"It was a different year for winter guard, with the new girls coming in," sophomore Kaitlyn Johnson said.

In the Spring of 2012, the girls came back and were ready after their completed season in the winter.

"We had a successful year, lots of training for the new girls, I can't wait until next year," sophomore Cheyenne Lowe said.

January through March until the last competition, these girls work harder than ever. Even though the girls didn't place as high as they expected, they pushed through the seasons and worked hard to end the season with many improvements from the younger girls and leaving a ton of memories with the seniors of 2012.

The Moore'sville Guard left this year with tons of memories and plan on coming back winter and bring more to the new season.

Color Guard marches in to the Indiana State Fair. They also were there with Moore'sville's marching band. "It was a fun year, especially with new personalities and learning how to spin the new equipment," sophomore Alison Short said.

Moore'sville Color Guard brings out the State and American flag. While the marching band is playing the National Anthem during the Varsity football game against Decatur. "This past year has been really hard with us having such a young guard involved. Most of us have only been in guard for two years, but I'm really excited and looking forward to my next two years in high school," sophomore Mackenzie Letourneau said.

Marching is extremely difficult when it is 90 degrees or higher in the summer. Heat made it really difficult to concentrate for some members of the band. "There were many holes in the school's parking lot that I had to dodge. During the middle of the season."

Taking it Step by Step

Marching Band was all about pride. The newly named Pioneer Regiment was always going out and putting their hearts in every competition.

"The Pioneer Regiment finished tenth at the State Fair finals," Mr. Jason Freeman said.

This year was very interesting. They placed in the Sweet Sixteen at the State Fair, which was a huge accomplishment for the Pioneer Regiment.

"We had a great season this year, we worked hard all summer to get where we are," sophomore Brandon Wagoner said.

They were always good at getting a crowd going for our home team with the music they played. At halftime they would play a song or two on the field to get the fans excited for the game to begin again.

Every year, the Pioneer Regiment marched on a field, a court, or even in the band room, and every year they tried harder and harder to get better.

"This season was probably the best I've ever had. It was also very emotional; a lot of tears along with smiles," senior Marion Ruch said.

From outside or inside of school, these band members have always left a bit of pride in the spirit of the Pioneers.

"I love band! It's my favorite period of the day. It's always so happy and upbeat in band," freshman Sierra Lowe said.

Marching Band is something every one of its members will remember. It was a big part of their lives and will always be a part of them.

The Pioneer Regiment gets ready to play at the State Fair. They were not very happy with the weather that occurred while they were there. "It started pouring and it's hard to march on mud," junior Ashley Miley said.

Mooreville's Marching band members stand up and show pep during the varsity football game against Decatur. They were getting the crowd going for the sake of the team. "I had an amazing section leader and a wonderful section. I can't wait for the many years to come with my friends in band," freshman Ricky Yutmeyer said.

Junior Michelle Alsop sings a solo during the song "The House That Built Me" by Miranda Lambert. "My favorite part about singing the solo was to show everyone the one thing I love doing. It was amazing, and I loved the fact that everyone was focused on me," Alsop said.

Sing OUT

Using Talent to Blend the Voice

Mooresville Concert choirs consisted of most students who enjoyed singing over dancing. Concert choir was a way for students to still do what they loved without being a part of show choir. Concert choir was purely just singing, no dancing. The music for concert choir was more difficult to sing than show choir music, because concert choir is made specifically for voice.

"In concert choir there are more intense singing parts, it shows your singing ability a lot, like what section you are in. Concert choir has some of the best singing moments that you will ever be a part of," junior Ryan Coleman said.

The concert choirs at Mooresville consisted of Madrigals,

Sensations, and Genesis. Madrigals was composed of one freshman and other students from the sophomore, junior, and senior classes. They sang all a cappella music that took many practices to complete each song.

"It strengthens your over all ability to sing. You learn techniques that you can use in any style, whether it's breathing or placement of the sound. Concert choir competitions are more intense too because it's strictly based on vocal scores, there is no dancing or over production to cover up a weak sound," senior Hannah Britton said.

"There is nothing like a cappella concert music. Nothing. It takes an incredible amount of work and ability necessary to be truly successful. After finishing a good concert performance, your mind is usually exhausted. The experience and result, though, are really rewarding. It's hard to duplicate the aesthetic value of that," Mr. Damron said.

Madrigals competed at four different choir competitions where they finished second at two of them. Around Christmas time Madrigals had a dinner where they sang, ate, and played games with a few selected audience members.

Sensations was made up of all girls ranging from freshman to seniors. They sang at school performances where Genesis performed as well. Genesis was made up of boys and girls from all grades.

All the concert choirs competed at the ISSMA competition in different levels of difficulty. The concert choirs worked hard every day in class to complete their music on time.

Sophomore Julie Callahan plays the flute during Wagon Trails Revue in the fall. Julie Callahan has been in band for nearly two years in high school and have played the flute since seventh grade. "This year band has been and sometimes challenging for having such a quiet instrument and playing with such a big group of members all in once class at the same time," Callahan said.

Feeling the beat

Mooresville concert band was combined with Symphonic and Percussion Ensemble in the school year. Because they played more difficult songs, the members had to practice outside of school to have a complete finish performance when played.

"In 2011, Mooresville competed in Group I literature for the first time in years," band director Mr. Jason Freeman said.

During the school year, the band members would all meet in class during seventh period and practice for their upcoming events. Wherever students would be, if they heard music in the hallways they knew that it was the band practicing to root on Pioneer teams. Whether it was for concerts, pep rallies or for sporting events, the Mooresville band pumped students up.

"It sounds so beautiful playing all together in the finished product," freshman Olivia Jo Ferrill said.

All of the band members work just as hard as any other club or sports teams to get Mooresville noticed in competitions or at home football games.

"Band is practically my second family in school," freshman Sierra Lowe said.

Most band members were in band for all four years of their high school and really enjoyed the memories that they had created and kept with them. Some freshman enjoyed band, because it was a great experience for them from moving from middle school to high school.

It doesn't matter what grade they were in, as long as they had fun and cheered on our school, it got our students pumped and ready for the upcoming events

Sophomore Cheyenne Lowe stands tall while playing the trombone during rehearsals. Cheyenne used to play the trumpet in middle school, but then switched in her freshman year. "Band has had an overall successful year, we played many challenging pieces and enjoyed our time together. I'm looking forward to seeing us grow," sophomore Cheyenne said.

The Reason Why...

"I wanted to be a coach and the only way to be a coach at the time was to become a teacher," Art teacher Brinton Farrand said.

"I really enjoyed art and I had a mentor that talked me into becoming a teacher," Evans said.

Sketch It OUT

Then Cover the Canvas

"Art is not a talent; it is a learned skill," Art teacher Mr. Brinton Farrand said.

Not everyone who took an art class started out as a Picasso. It took time, dedication, and a will to learn. For students, art was not just a sketch on a piece of paper or a painting on a canvas. It was an escape from the hard things in life.

Art came in many different forms: drawing, painting, intro to 2D, advanced placement, jewelry, and ceramics. These courses were taught by two different teachers: Farrand and Mrs. Diane Evans. Evans taught jewelry making and ceramics, and Farrand taught everything else.

There were people out there who thought that taking an art class was a waste of time.

"The people that just take academic classes, jobs are being outsourced and their companies are being downsized. It is the creative person that gets to keep his job. Creativity cannot be outsourced," Farrand said.

Indiana students were required to have a fine arts credit to get a diploma.

"I needed to get my fine arts credit and I wanted to get better at art," sophomore Ben Hammon said.

For the more gifted students they had the opportunity to take Advanced Placement Art Class. In this class, the students took a college level art class for a full year. For the first semester students were a guide line that they had to follow. Second semester was different.

"Second semester we are on our own and we have to pick a theme to stick to," senior Loren Graham said.

Students got to pick any theme that they thought would be unique enough to make twelve pictures out of.

"I am telling the story of creation through my twelve paintings," junior Meghann Fitzpatrick said.

With so many different choices of art classes to choose from there was an art class for everyone.

Seniors Shianne Holder, Karri Wise, and Mandy Wenz perform their last Spring Play together. "Acting is a way of holding a mirror to the world. You can inspire someone to do something by showing them what is possible," Wenz said.

Laugh OUT The Wild West Showdown

"Open up! Open the... door..." junior Nic Winnen said while playing the character Cooper. That's how the Spring play 'Wild Dust' began. To the people who played in the play it wasn't their first time acting. For example, Nikki Wampler did four spring plays in her high school career. 'Wild Dust' takes place in the wild west in the year of 1880.

This play is a great way to end the year and show off the acting department. Mrs. Kassen has been directing the Spring play for several years and kept finding new ways to improve the Drama department.

People like Quinn Cavin, who played Harold, played in the Christmas play as well.

"My favorite part about the play was probably just having fun at rehearsals and hanging out with the awesome people that were in the play," freshman Cavin said.

Acting was a way for kids to portray how they feel as the characters in the play.

"I liked seeing how everything came together and doing the play a different way each night," said freshman Austin Webster.

The main characters of the play practice for the opening night. Nic Winnen read his lines to keep up the scene. "I feel like the stage directions and dialogue told me exactly what to do," Winnen said.

The senior girls rehearse their lines in practice before performing in the play. "I loved being a part of the play because it's a way for me to interact with everyone," senior Emily Judson, said.

Senior Taylor Smith puts on her mascara as she prepares for the musical on Saturday night. "It was really fun performing in front of the little kids including my cousins and niece," Smith said.

Senior Hannah Britton plays the Sour Kangaroo as she tries to get Horton banned from the jungle of Nool.

The Seussical The Musical

Actors came back for a second time to be part of the masterpiece called The Seussical, a mix of several Dr. Seuss classics.

You would think that the actors of the musical get nervous when getting on stage to perform in front of large crowds, but there are ways of coping.

"Yes I get nervous. The way I get over it is I just remember that the audience doesn't know what I'm supposed to say so I just do it," sophomore Zach Hall said.

Many people in the musical were returning actors.

"(I chose to be in the musical) because the class is a lot of fun and I was in the class last year," said senior Robbie Brown.

For those who were unable to attend the show was about Dr. Seuss' countless children's stories combined. MHS students took the stage as characters such as Cat in the Hat played by Mandy Wenz and Horton the elephant, who was played by senior Evan Downey.

Nearly every line in the show was delivered through song, and the show was a success to both children and adults.

by Jackie Farrand

Seniors Tori Wilson and Cyli Hart play the rolls of bird girls in the Seussical. "I love singing and acting. It brings you and all of your friends closer together. It's so much fun," Hart said.

The Whos of Whoville all sing together while Horton listens to them through the clover. "I enjoyed being a Who, because I got to be in a lot of the extra scenes," sophomore Kyle Hurt said.

Senior Sammi Jo Acres Plays the role of Gertrude McFuzz whiles she pouts as Mayzie makes fun of her one feathered tail. "I loved playing the role of Gertrude, we're sort of alike in many ways," Acres said.

The cast of the Seussical all come together to finish the act with the song "Oh the Things You Can Think." "I really enjoyed doing this musical, because I like to act goofy and have fun with everyone," senior Josh Lambert said.

Helping OUT

Leading Student to Help Others

Students at Mooresville High School were able to become leaders in many different ways. The three groups that dealt with the school's most involved leaders were: Key Club, National Honor Society and Student Council.

Students helped not only people at this school, but also people in the community. Whether it was helping families with Riley Hospital patients or just less fortunate families around Mooresville, members of these three groups helped a lot of people.

"I love being in Key Club because I know that I am helping someone somewhere who is struggling with everyday life," senior Amber Viles said.

Before March of 2012 microwaves weren't readily available to students, unless, of course, they had a teacher who kept one in his or her room and let students use it. Students were surprised one day when they walked into the cafeteria and realized students were given two brand new microwaves to heat up their lunches, all thanks to the Student Council.

Another heavily involved group was NHS.

"The overall participation on Nation Honor Society this year was incredible. We helped a lot of people and raised a lot of money," Vice President Evan Downey said.

These three clubs did more than meet once a week or once a month, they made a difference in Mooresville High School and the community itself.

"I did the Polar Bear Plunge, because it was for a good cause and I have done it for the past two years!" senior Kyle Neihaus said.

"I loved going to the Ronald McDonald house and feeding the families there because you could see how much they really appreciated it," junior Adele Hunter-Shields said.

"Being inducted into Nation Honor Society was a big accomplishment for me and it made my parents proud!" junior Jamie McQueen said.

"I was really glad that the Student Council joined Key Club at the Race For The Cure this year, because it made our group way bigger and it was a ton of fun." junior Marris Sims Mooreville students competed in several ways academically. These teams consisted of; Math, English, History, Science Academics, Spanish Club and the Spell Bowl team.

The groups gave students the opportunity to stand out in their own ways. It gave them the ability to show off their intelligence to their families, the school staff and fellow classmates. With the varieties of teams, it gave the students a chance to get involved in what interests them the most. They could join on to further their education and learn more outside of the school curriculum.

"Spanish club is just a really fun club that helps us become more familiar with the culture. Plus Spanish food is amazing," sophomore Bailey Pryor said.

The people on these teams went beyond their everyday school schedule and go that extra mile to enhance their knowledge in the subject that most interest them.

Being a member of a team gave the students the opportunity to be with friends, but also learn while they are doing it.

Junior Eli Brizendine collects donations for a Best Buddies event. "Best Buddies is a good way to get involved in the community, and that is why I joined," Eli Brizendine said.

FCA, SADD, Won by One, and Best Buddies

Fellowship was a good way to get involved in the school and in the community. Many clubs at Mooresville take part in fellowship.

The first club was Fellowship of Christian Athletes. This club would meet before school at 7 on Friday mornings at the school for a Bible study, led by Mr. Oggy Brewer.

"I am in FCA because I love Jesus, and I love hanging out with people who have the same beliefs as I do and are also involved in sports," sophomore Jacob Johnson said.

The next club is Best Buddies; it was a club for students with and without special needs to "buddy-up" and hang out with each other.

"I got into Best Buddies, because my mom wanted me to. And I like to just hang out," Grant Clair-Ficko said.

SADD, would teach the younger kids about the dangers of drugs and alcohol and how to avoid them and "just say no".

Won by One was a Christian group that would meet on Wednesday mornings before school. The leader of this group was Mr. Jesse Burgess.

All of these clubs did a lot to become a part of the Mooresville community, and engaged in fellowship.

by Breanna Lair

Best Buddies members participate in the annual match party and parent meeting. "It's our big kick-off party," sponsor Mrs. Amy Selby said.

Sophomores Keith Kassen and Jake Johnson attend the final FCA meeting of the school year. "I like that my teammates go, and we talk about religious activities."

GSA Fights Bullying

The Mooresville Gay Straight Alliance worked to battle bullying in its second year of existence at MHS. Since most local high schools didn't have GSAs, the club was described as being unique and diverse.

"I truly believe all people deserve to be treated with respect and dignity," GSA sponsor Ms. Sharon Eickhoff said.

The GSA met on Fridays to discuss current events happening in the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender community.

"I like going to GSA because I love being around everyone and it's nice to have a place where I'm accepted and everyone loves me," junior Clay Huddleston said.

When asked what GSA meant to different members they said it meant a great deal to them to be active participants in the club.

"GSA means a lot to me; it gives me hope to see there is so much youth working towards acceptance and equality. I look forward to see all the youth in GSA as adults, because I know we can collectively work together to change the world," junior and vice president Taylor Childs said.

"GSA is a place where I can feel accepted. I can go there without being bullied or treated rudely by others. I have good friends who make me feel needed," sophomore and junior officer Neal Jeffers said.

"It's an overwhelming sense of belonging that I don't think I could find anywhere else in the world than in a room, on a Friday, with my GSA," senior and president Kyle Casteel said.

Senior Kyle Casteel holds an original drawing for the upcoming art show. The GSA had a first 'Equality Art Show' to exhibit any type of art medium portraying the themes of equality, acceptance, and understanding. "We've grown really close together over the year working as a whole. I don't think I'll have a harder day for a long time than the day I'll have to leave, because this is the most astounding group of people I've ever been in the same room as," senior and president Kyle Casteel said.

GSA members take turns asking each other questions to get to know one another better.

Freshmen Sidney Bills and Bethany Frink held the GSA banner while marching in the Old Settlers Parade. The GSA participated in many community events, but it was their first time marching in the Old Settlers Parade.

The Mooresville Drama club assisted Mrs. Melanie Kassen in the Christmas play and the spring play by building the props needed. They would meet after school and help paint and build the sets.

At drama club they would run through acting exercises like improvisation. They did exercises like this to help better them as actors.

"It was really fun, I like doing improv with my friends at drama club," freshman Quinn Cavin said.

The Drama Club also marched in the Homecoming parade. They dressed in different costumes and walked through Mooresville.

"The Drama Club designed and ordered the t-shirts this year," Kassen said.

The Drama Club had pitch-in days so they could celebrate Halloween, Thanksgiving, and Christmas by having parties.

"My favorite part of drama club was finding out who I am as an actor," sophomore Eric Johnson said.

The Mooresville Q-crew was a seismology club that would meet to study earthquakes. They would also study the safety and hazards of earthquakes.

They attended a conference called HASTI, which stands for Hoosier Association of Science Teachers Incorporated. They also went to a symposium at Indiana University to educate themselves about earthquakes.

The middle school was also invited to attend the meetings. "It was a good way for our club to get involved with the middle school and teach them about earthquakes," Mrs. Lauren Foster said.

Expressing Your Emotions Through Art

Many students at MHS were involved in art classes inside and outside of school. Instead of Art Club, starting in the fall of 2011 Mr. Brinton Farrand offered open art rooms in his classroom from 7-9 on special weekdays.

Students came to work on artwork, hang out with friends, and listen to music. It was a time where students could catch up on work if they were behind.

"(My favorite part was) the time to work and hang out with friends," junior Jordan Belcher said.

Open art rooms weren't restricted for just students, siblings of students, parents, and teachers from other schools came also.

"It's good to show people in the community why we shouldn't cut the art program, and it shows how much the students care and hopefully the administration notices," sophomore Justine Christian said.

Along with working on art students enjoyed the freedom it brought them. At open art room you were allowed to work on whatever type of medium you wanted.

"One of the last free things you have in this world is art," Farrand said.

Getting Out There

During the 2011-2012 school year at Mooresville High School there were multiple clubs that did work for not only the school but for the community as well. BPA, JSA, and the IHSSA Ambassadors were all young professionals.

BPA was a club to prepare it's members for the business world. They went to quite a few places over the school year, and many of it's members advanced to the State Leadership Conference. They went to the Indianapolis Star to learn about organization in 2011. BPA also traveled to Chicago to see a business debate in 2012.

"I really liked BPA, because it was professional and it taught me a lot about how the business world is," sophomore Allison McQueen said.

JSA, also known as Junior State of America, was Mooresville High School's political activism group. They debated topics from religion to politics. The JSA fulfilled many achievements this year such as winning the Mid-West Chapter of the Years on their trip to Chicago. Also over mid-winter break they went to Washington D.C. and met with the senator Dan Coats.

"I like the opportunity to voice my opinions and hear what other people thought too," junior Taylor Childs said.

The IHSSA Ambassadors was a club designed to pick one athlete from each sport as a representative of the school.

"It was really cool being picked to be apart of this club, it was a real honor," junior Mandy Fisher said.

Mooresville High School's BPA had several students who advanced to the state leadership conference. "Being that it was my first year in the BPA, it was pretty cool winning such a big award," junior Bridgette Neighbors said.

Senior Louie Catellier member of BPA holds a box filled with socks for the homeless.

MHS Students observed the congressman Todd Young during a convention about issues throughout Indiana hosted by JSA. "It was very interesting to see what everyone was concerned about," junior Kyndal Pennington said.

JSA's president Molly Whitley introduces Congressman Todd Young. She was very honored to do this. "It was very nerve wracking because I had to speak, not only in front of my peers, but also several members of the community. Plus, I was really scared I would mess something up in my introduction," Whitley said.

FOOTPRINTS IN THE SAND

One night I dreamed I was walking along the beach with the Lord
 Many scenes from my life flashed across the sky
 In each scene I noticed footprints in the sand
 Sometimes there were two sets of footprints
 Other times there was one set of footprints
 This bothered me because I noticed that During the low periods of my life
 when I was suffering from anguish, sorrow, or defeat,
 I could see only one set of footprints,
 So I said to the Lord,
 "You promised me, Lord, that if I followed You,
 You would walk with me always.
 But I noticed that during the most trying periods of my life there have only been
 One set of prints in the sand.
 Why, when I have needed You most,
 You have not been there for me?"
 The Lord replied,

"The times when you have seen only one set of footprints
 Is when I carried you."
Poem by Mary Jane Stevenson

On September 15, 2011, Kaitlyn Fulkerson passed away as the result of a pulmonary embolism. Kaitlyn suffered from Lupus. According to the Lupus Foundation of America, Lupus is a chronic, autoimmune disease that can damage any part of the body. Lupus is a disease of flares and remissions, and it is believed that 5 million people throughout the world have a form of lupus. Kaitlyn dealt with her lupus privately, so students were devastated to learn that their friend, who had been so full of life, had actually been dealing with a very serious illness. Fly forever, Kaitlyn. We love and miss you deeply.

As the end of the year neared there was a lot on everyone's mind. The seniors had their eyes on graduation while the underclassmen were just ready to get their finals over with.

"I'm ready to graduate because I'm ready to start my life and see what the future holds for me," senior Paige Starling said.

The students weren't the only ones who wanted summer to hurry up. The teachers couldn't wait for summer either to have two months to spend with their families and study-up for the next school year.

"I looking forward to this summer because I'll be able to walk my dog almost every day," Mrs. Vaughn said.

Many students planned on working over the summer to gain spending money and to start or continue saving.

"I plan on working a lot this summer so that I can have money to spend when I want to go out," sophomore Bailey Pryor said.

The last few days were filled with goodbyes and see you soon. Many people were skeptical of the summer ahead but kept an eye on the prize: Next Fall.

A few seniors gather near the sign that brought the senior prank together on the last day of school. "We thought it was a good idea to put the school up for sale, because it was harmless and it was a fun way for us to say goodbye," senior Kimmy Addair said.

The 2012 Wagon Trails Yearbook, Volume 67, was created by a student staff and was printed by Herff Jones Publishing Company at its facility at 2424 Midpoint Drive in Edwardsville, Kansas. This was our fourth All-Color Wagon Trails Yearbook. The publishing consultant was Cathy Wines, and the customer service representative was Debbie Thomas.

Lifetouch Photos took all the underclassmen and faculty pictures. The senior photos were taken by Prestige Portraits by Lifetouch.

The book created using the Adobe Master Collection and Herff Jones Internet software eDesign. Students were able to work online from home to get their pages completed. For the first time ever, the Wagon Trails Yearbook comes with a DVD yearbook supplement. This year's supplement contained video interviews for 16 of the printed book pages. In future years, the staff hopes to expand video coverage into additional stories. Special thanks to Mr. Andrew Marine, who without his expertise, the DVD Yearbook would not have been possible.

The 2012 Wagon Trails Yearbook Staff was made up of these 26 members: Sammi Jo Acres, Paige Baker, Chelsie Bingham, Nik Brunk, Maddy Cooper, Jesse Cordray, Tara Davis, Austen Duque, Alyssa Ekenseair, Jackie Farrand, Abby Felder, Catherine Hagee, Trisha Hamilton, Samantha Hare, Breanna Lair, Michelle Majeski, Mackenzie Masters, Allie McLaughlin, Abbey Prilliman, Olivia Scully, Jessica Stinger, Matt Walker, Emily Warfield, Rachel Wathen, Lindsey Wittell, and Jess Yeoman. The editors were Jessica Stinger and Allie McLaughlin.

A deserving thanks to: Cathy Wines, Debbie Thomas, Susan Haynes, The Mooresville-Decatur Times, Rick Briar, Peggie Gormon, Kathy Jonhson, Becky Bischoff, Marsha Green, Karen Cochran, Dawn Blake, Lisa Gobel, Chuck Muston, Jennifer Perkins, and Tim VanWanzelee. This yearbook staff would like to thank the following people for contributing photos to the pages of this book: Dr Phil Wright, Lindy Scott, Kelly Patel and Beth Lybarger. We would also like to thank Mrs. Sheryl Fyffe, Mr. Jason Damron, Mr. Jerry Weber, and Mr. Jason Freeman for their assistance with our annual variety show, Wagon Trails Revue.

Jesse Lacer and Cayla Clinger playing games at the Fall Homecoming. "It was disappointing losing, but I had a great time playing the game with one of my good friends Cayla," Jesse said.
