DID YOU HEAR...

The student section stands waving the American flag. Each game, had a different theme. "Merica night was so fun because everyone got into the theme and it made it so much better," Chelsie Bingham said.

Shhh, Don't Tell...

Did you hear that girl whispering in your third period? Did you hear about the English teacher who had her students color during class? Did you hear about the guy who went on a mission trip? Did you hear about the former student who admitted to setting PHMS on fire?

Here in Moorsville, as you've heard, the school is small. You hear everything. In this small town, there aren't secrets. There are eyes and ears all over this high school, so did you hear...?

by Jessica Stinger

Senior girls stand together proud of their jeans. At Moorsville making senior jeans had always been a tradition. "Making them was hard work, but it was all worth it," Tori Gilbert said.

Students gather at the bonfire, 2012 was the first year in several that the bonfire was successful due to rain in previous years. "It was very warm and exhilarating," Reggie Stubbs said.

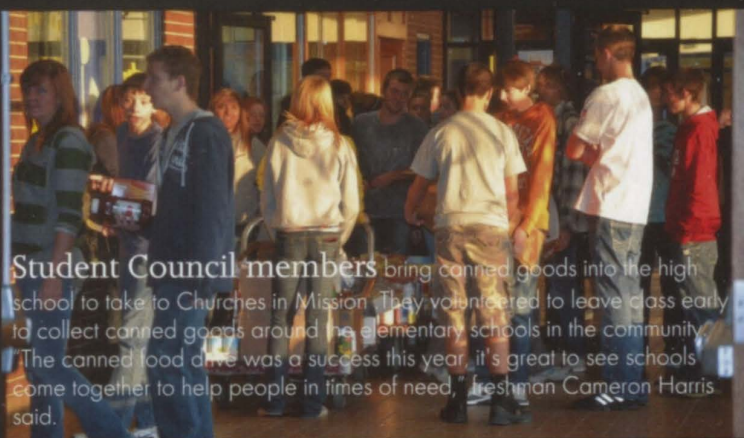

Senior Meghann Fitzpatrick and junior Jackie Farrand push senior Breanna Lair in the ball basket. The boys tennis managers tried to make every practice fun. "I actually practiced with the guys. They hit a lot harder and that prepares me for girls season," Lair said.

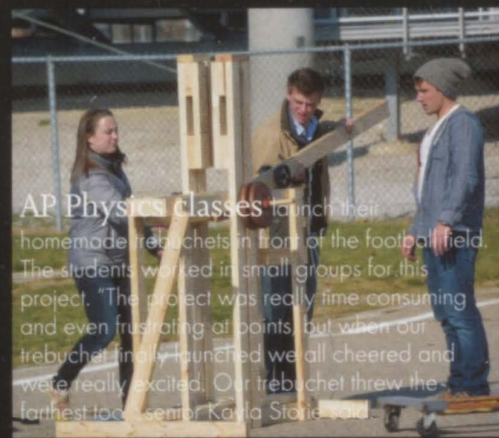

Students are standing for the National Anthem at the winter homecoming game. The American flag became a member of the student section for most varsity football and basketball games. "It was sad that the last homecoming of my senior year is already over, but it was a great one to end on," senior Sydney Haynes said.

Did You Hear Them....

The junior powderpuff girls and coaches celebrate their victory against the seniors. Their determination to win paid off. "It felt good to beat the seniors after they kept talking about how they were going to beat us," Rachael Crawford said. "It made winning feel even better," Shayla Harper said.

Student Council members bring canned goods into the high school to take to Churches in Mission. They volunteered to leave class early to collect canned goods around the elementary schools in the community. "The canned food drive was a success this year, it's great to see schools come together to help people in times of need," freshman Cameron Harris said.

AP Physics classes launch their homemade trebuchets in front of the football field. The students worked in small groups for this project. "The project was really time consuming and even frustrating at points, but when our trebuchet finally launched we all cheered and were really excited. Our trebuchet threw the farthest too," senior Kayla Storie said.

Making senior jeans for fall homecoming is an annual tradition at Mooresville High School for senior girls. Mandy Fisher and Mariah Lundy worked on theirs together. "It was a fun way to make memories with your friends and look back at the good times," Fisher said.

Did you hear about members of Key Club participating in the Polar Plunge? Did you hear the fans cheering at the homecoming games? Did you hear how Mrs. Skaggs Spanish classes adopted a family for Christmas?

Students at Mooresville High School worked hard in their classes, were involved in clubs, and looked forward to the highlights of the year such as prom and Fall and Winter Homecoming. The teachers also got involved in helping the students in every way they could by changing their teaching methods, being club sponsors, and supporting students by bettering their future. So, did you hear them...?

Did You Know...?

by Maddy Cooper and Danielle Warthen

...Junior Blake Davis's goal was to one day race in a division of NASCAR? He started out racing go karts, then moved to a modified. A modified is a car with an 8 cylinder racing engine. Davis ran a 383 small block Chevy on a dirt track.

Blake finished a heat race and believed that he made the feature race.

"I did some quick adjustments and was waiting for the call to go out," Davis said. "Before the race began I thought to myself how I had all of the tools I needed to win the race and it was up to me, to focus and use all of my energy to be successful in the race.

"Some of the biggest names in NASCAR come from dirt track racing," Davis said.

...Senior Alex Dalton went with Rachel Justus to get her first of four tattoos. Still being in high school it was rather big deal to get "tatted-up". Alex was very nervous about getting her first tattoo. "I was so nervous that I was eating a ton of Skittles just so I didn't pass out," she said.

"I contemplated walking out at least five times before he even started my tattoo," Alex said. She got her first tattoo on the top of her right foot. The top of the foot is supposed to be one of the most painful areas of the body to tattoo. "The second he touched my foot with the tattoo gun, I knew I made a mistake. It was the worst pain I had ever felt," she said.

Too scared to ask if they could take a break, the artist tattooed for an hour at a time. "It was awful, I seriously held on to Rachel's hand so tight, I'm surprised I didn't end up hurting her," she said. "In the end, I got an awesome first tattoo and it was worth every bit of pain," Alex said.

...Senior Olivia Oswalt participated in gymnastics at a competitive level from the age of two. Her senior year she was a level 10 gymnast, which was only one level below the Elite Olympic Level. She had been a regional and state champion multiple times.

She practiced everyday for four-five hours, year round, even though a gymnast's competitive season was only from January to May.

"It takes a lot of talent and dedication to succeed," Oswalt said. She is continuing her gymnastics career at Lindenwood University as a member of the team.

...Sophomore Sean Martin worked on his creation everyday of his sophomore year. He had completely transformed a blank wall to a work of art, utilizing only "Sharpie" permanent markers.

He got tired of just drawing little doodles on his homework, so he decided to take it to the next level. Sean did not use rulers or stencils, he simply drew the design as he went.

"I listen to the advice people give me, but I don't take it because I think that if I do, then it won't really be my work," Martin said.

So far, there is not an exact meaning behind the art, but he said that he may add a "hidden message" later. After all of the time and effort he has put into it, he will be moving and leaving the mural behind.

"I'm disappointed that I have to leave it, but I can always start it again," Martin said.

...Senior Tori Hoffman woke up every morning at 5:30 a.m. to get herself and her son, Chance, ready to begin the day. After Tori got ready herself, she would then pick Chance out a cute outfit to wear, occasionally it matched Tori. She would gather all of their things and leave the house by 7 a.m. Tori dropped Chance off at her mom's house before arriving to school. "I hate to leave Chance in the morning but I know he is in good hands with my mom," she said.

Tori took four classes at Mooresville her senior year. "My mom sends me pictures of Chance through out the day so that makes it a little easier on me," she said. After work Tori picked up Chance and would head home for the evening.

This was just a tiny glimpse into Tori's busy life. She made it a priority to keep her grades up and graduate high school on time with her class.

Tori was 26th in her class, a member of National Honor Society, and graduated with academic honors. Tori was accepted and planned to attend Indiana University.

...Senior Tori Gilbert had been showing Club Lambs for over half of her life by the end of her senior year. She had been Grand Champion multiple times, as well as Senior Sheep Showman. Her family raised them from birth, and they only showed the ones they have raised.

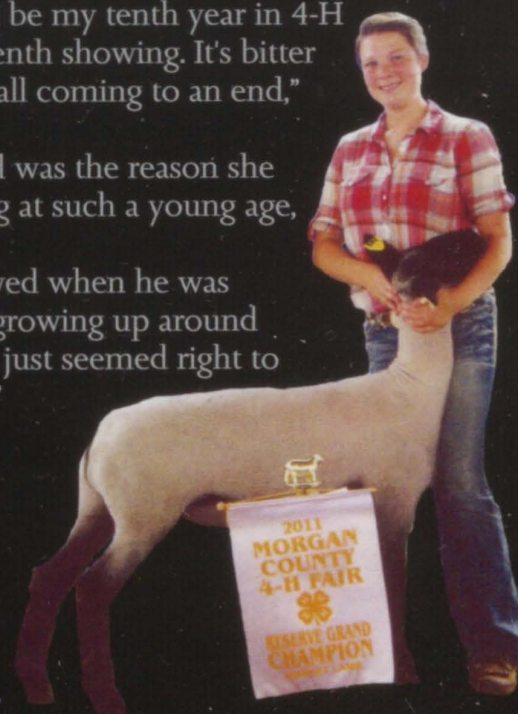

"It makes winning that much more special because it shows that all of the hours in the barn exercising and working them have paid off," Gilbert said.

She compared showing to an individual sport because of the time and commitment it takes when you are in the ring, by yourself. When showing there is no one in the ring to assist you, it is all self driven.

"This will be my tenth year in 4-H and my thirteenth showing. It's bitter sweet that it's all coming to an end," Gilbert said.

Tori's dad was the reason she began showing at such a young age, or even at all.

"He showed when he was younger, and growing up around the animals, it just seemed right to start showing," Gilbert said.

Cage the Cubs

As homecoming week approached, the halls began to fill with school spirit. Mrs. Amy Selby led the school by creating the first annual Spirit Contest that brought out the students competitive side.

"I've always had a lot of school spirit and I wanted to encourage the students to as well," Mrs. Selby said.

The spirit contest ranged everywhere from best dressed for each spirit day to the most retweets on Twitter. The competition was divided by grade levels.

"The spirit contest got the whole school pumped to support us on game day, which pushed us to play even harder for our fans," senior football player Nathan Gilbert said.

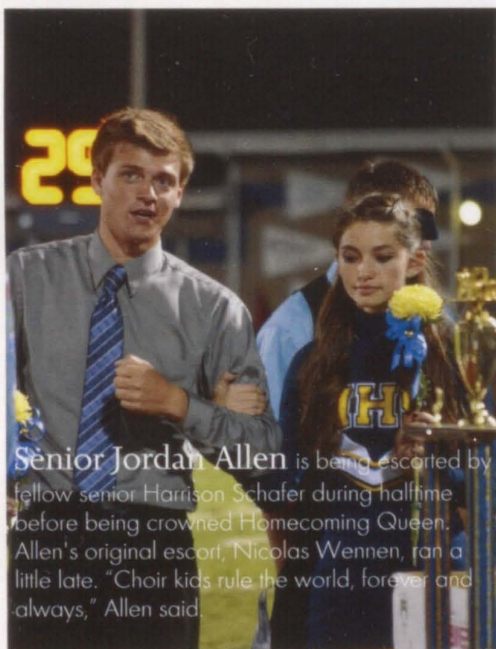

The senior class came out with the victory on the final day at the pep rally with the juniors trailing close behind.

As game time approached, the weather did not look too promising, but this did not hold back the community from cheering on the home team.

"It was good to see everyone support the team, even if it wasn't in the best conditions and the outcome everyone was hoping for," junior cheerleader Morgan Smalling said.

by Rachel Wathen and Emily Warfield

The defensive line gets set for a play. The defense was very successful under the supervision of Coach Zach Errett. "Defense is where it's at," junior Brandon Sellers said.

Senior Zach Minardo gives his senior football speech at the pep rally. Every year all the senior football players gave a speech to the student body. "What we say sets the tone and the atmosphere for game night. I told the cubs I didn't know what was comin' but IT was comin'," Minardo said.

The junior class yells along with the cheerleaders to the "Do It" cheer. This was a crowd favorite. "I like to get crazy and get the crowd pumped," Brent Walker said.

The grass behind the football field fills with students. The bonfire was back after two unsuccessful years. "It was fun, I got to hang out with my friends after tying the sophomores in powder puff," freshman Teylor Ellis said.

Kirsten Fleenor keeps a smile on her face while playing in her final powder puff game. Kirsten was the quarterback for the senior team. "Powder puff was something I looked forward to because I'm so competitive," Fleenor said.

Spirit days:

Students participating in the dress up spirit contest met in front of the library before first period each day to be judged. Even the teachers challenged the students for earning the title of best dressed. "Spirit week is always so much fun. I love how the school comes together to cheer on the football team," sophomore Murray Meredith said.

Shooting for a Win

During Winter Homecoming, students became antsy. The excitement for the winter homecoming activities overcame them.

Between the pep rally and the game, students and players got pumped as they hoped for a win that night.

"I always go to the game with my friends because that makes it so much more fun. We were pumped for the game that night," sophomore Tyler Snyder said.

Students geared up in their white outfits to "white-out" Whiteland.

The basketball teams had relatively good seasons. Students, players, and teachers had high hopes for the games that evening.

"The game was important and the girls felt the pressure. Our rank would have dropped in the conference," Coach Joe Johnson said.

Despite the loss, spectators enjoyed themselves and brought spirit to the game.

by Jessica Stinger and Bailey Hawkins

The students participating in the knockout game get ready to dominate the teachers. Senior Andrew Moore planned to win with his friend Zach Minardo. "I was betrayed and ended up getting out. I was disappointed," Moore said.

Junior Levi Jennings pies Mr. Brent Olivier in the face. Students voted for him to be pied. "It was awesome to pie him in the face," Jennings said.

Seniors Taylor Chitwood and Mac Norton stand together after winning homecoming king and queen. Chitwood had been nominated four years in a row. "It was great to finally win and I loved it," Chitwood said.

Homecoming

The student section participated in the roller coaster. Senior Dakota Bain had a great time. "The Pioneer roller coaster was the best roller coaster I've ever ridden," Bain said.

Junior Jonathan Hurt

shoots against Whiteland. The homecoming crowd cheered the players on the entire game. "I was so pumped because of the crowd. It was great," Hurt said.

The National Guard prays for the children that were injured at the Sandy Hook shooting. The pain of the event was felt throughout the country. "It's amazing to see the support that the country has for the children," sophomore Hannah Lindsay said.

Smoke rolls through the streets as spectators scramble to safety. Some of the people watching the marathon were extremely brave, and ran into the explosion to help the injured. On June 28, 2012 Indiana sizzles at a striking temperature of 104 degrees. That was the highest temperature in Indiana since 1954. The dry conditions prompted a Red Flag until later that evening, along with Excessive Heat Warnings. "Mowing season was horrible because the grass didn't grow very well," junior Brandon Dove said.

A Year of Despair

Unpredictable weather, heated elections, and heartbreaking tragedies filled the pages of news in 2012 and 2013.

On June 28, 2012 Indiana reached the temperature of an outrageous 104 degrees.

"The drought killed all of the crops," sophomore Randy Scott said. The historically hot temperatures kept most students indoors.

Spring Frenzy

After a fire, a snow storm, and a Spring Break to remember, students had an interesting beginning to Spring.

On March 12, students sat in their third period classes when the fire alarm sounded. Students slowly walked outside thinking it was just a drill. After waiting in the cold, students were surprised to find that it was actually a real fire that started in an upstairs boys bathroom.

"I wanted to go back inside by the fire because it was so cold waiting outside," junior Brittany Penn said.

On March 25, a snow storm occurred throughout many places in the United States. Students in Mooresville had a two hour delay. The roads were slick due to ice and snow.

"I drove slow to school that morning so I didn't wreck," sophomore Coleson Sharp said.

For many students, Spring Break offered relief from the stress of school, as well as from the crazy events that had occurred earlier in the month. Many students left for places such as Florida, Alabama, and Mexico, while others stayed in Mooresville.

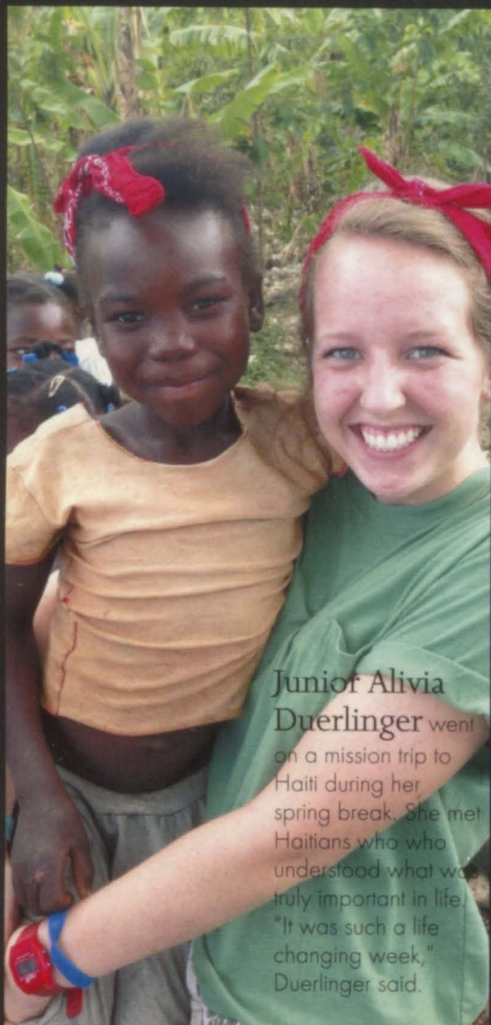

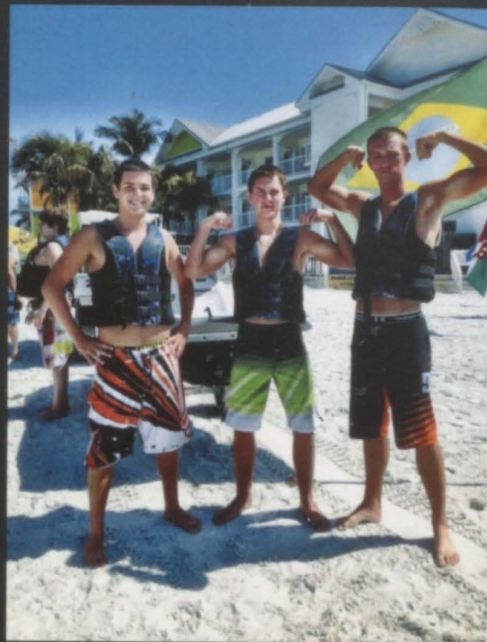

"I made some memories with some of my best friends," senior Broden Chapman said.

Despite the busy school year that many students had, the events of Spring added pressure to students. Needless to say there was much to be heard throughout the Spring.

Senior Logan Bowling sits on the beach. She decided to take a photo of her view. "I loved being on the beach and it was a memory I didn't want to forget," Bowling said.

Junior Alivia Duerlinger went on a mission trip to Haiti during her spring break. She met Haitians who who understood what was truly important in life. "It was such a life changing week," Duerlinger said.

Snow covers a bird feeder. The storm changed students' outlook of the first day of spring.

Backpacks sit in an upstairs classroom. Many students had to leave their belongings in the classes during the fire. "I left my bag and my phone in my class," sophomore Kaley Huddleston said.

Dancing the Night Away

For many students prom was their last memorable event before summer. Students were excited to spend the night dancing with their dates.

Students prepared for prom months in advance. Many went tanning, bought their dresses, ordered tuxedos, got their nails done, and made dinner reservations for the night.

"I was short on time because we had ISSMA state qualifications for choir so I tried to get ready early," senior David Trusty said.

Students entered prom excited and ready for a night of dancing and fun.

"Prom was awesome and it was really fun to dance with my friends for hours all night," senior Hunter Fenwick said.

Teachers prepared for prom as well. Many of them helped with decorating and chaperoning the dance.

"I think prom went great and I've heard nothing but good comments," Mr. Brent Olivier said.

Prom was a good time for everyone involved. Students made memories that would last them a lifetime.

Hats Off

As the high school gym began to fill with people, the soon-to-be graduates became increasingly excited and nervous. Everything they had worked for over the past twelve years all paid off when the diploma was in their possession.

"I became close to a lot of this class. They are a fun class and for the most part knew where the line was when it came to having fun and maintaining their education," Mr. Jason Zollman said.

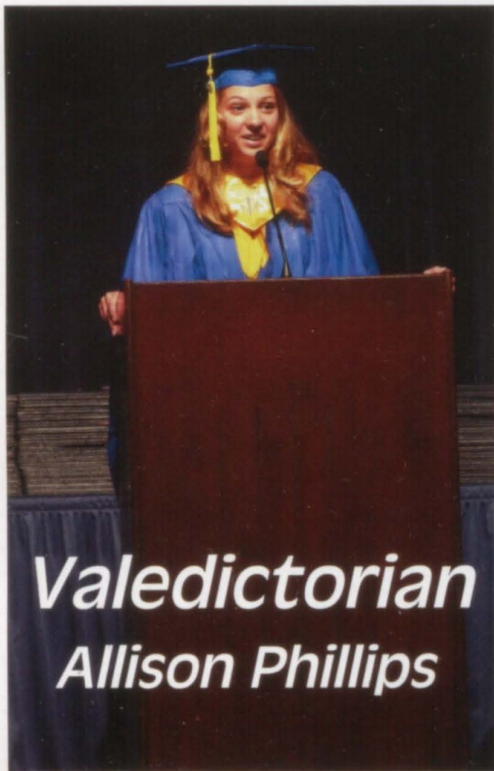

While the Class of 2013 moves on with their lives, they will be remembered by many for a variety of things some class members did throughout their time spent in high school, from changing the theme of a football game their junior year to placing a car inside the school for a senior prank.

The Class of 2013 all celebrated together for the last time on May 25, 2013 to recognize their accomplishments.

"It is a bittersweet moment in which you realize every memory you've had throughout the years is now over. New memories will now be made with different friends, in different places, but you will never forget your past and where you came from," graduate Macalister Norton said.

The first day of school can be a challenge. Everyone has a unique set of challenges, but they can be similar.

Challenges were inevitable. They were a common sight on the first day of school.

Finding the quickest route to classes that are on two different sides of the school before the bell rang proved to be quite a test when first entering a school for the very first time.

One of the more common challenges was trying to find classes for the first time. Coming into a new school with little knowledge of the building can cause confusion while trying to find classes.

Getting around the school was common in the beginning of the year. As the school year went along, there was less confusion, and less questions asked about locations.

...About Flipped Classes?

The 2012-2013 school year just screamed "adventure." Some teachers at Mooresville High School decided to go on an adventure with their teaching methods. Sophomore world history teacher, Jesse Burgess, took the new idea of teaching and ran with it! This foreign teaching style is known as flipped teaching. Students did the work at home that they would normally do at school (i.e. notes, learning about the topic being studied), and at school students worked on homework where they had other students and the teacher as resources.

by Hannah Shelton

"I have mixed feelings about 'flipped' classes."

-Alex Taulia

"I think for the sake of audio learners, like me, having some discussion over the material in class is how I remember it best. I can't say I'm a fan."

-Sarah Novicki

"I chose to add the 'flipped classroom' for the possibilities it provides for students. I do firmly believe it can greatly enhance student learning if used effectively."

-Mr. Burgess

"I really like the idea of it because I feel that we have more time to learn in class since we do notes at home."

-Justin Speedy

"My greatest challenge is having motivation to learn from the notes by myself on top of having homework from other classes."

Did You Hear About Orange Leaf?

"I usually go to Orange Leaf with my friends. There is a reason I keep coming back to Orange Leaf. It's because I prefer frozen yogurt over ice cream. I love the brownie batter with tons of chocolate toppings. I'm such a chocoholic."

-Whitney Smither

"My favorite flavor is cookies 'n cream and my favorite topping is oreo. It's really good, but I prefer ice cream over frozen yogurt."

-Caitlin Barkhimer

There has been an uproar for frozen yogurt! Orange Leaf was a business new to Indiana. The closest stores to the Mooresville area were located in Avon and Greenwood. This frozen yogurt shop sold an assortment of flavors and toppings. Orange Leaf is unique because you pay by what your purchase weighs. Mooresville students have been going crazy for the fabulous "froyo." The minute you try this frozen yogurt your taste buds will never go back!

By Olivia Ferrill

"I prefer frozen yogurt because I think it tastes better than ice cream. Plus, the experience at Orange Leaf is great. They have cool spoons to! I went with my youth group in Brownsburg to support their rugby coach who had passed away. My favorite flavor from Orange Leaf is peanut butter."

-Kellie Schlangen

"I went with my mom to Orange Leaf. We had a great experience. It's clean, and has a super friendly staff. My favorite topping is hot fudge and my favorite flavor is birthday cake."

'MERICA

"I'm proud to be
'Merican."
- Kayla Harpold

"I pledge allegiance, to the flag, of the U-nited States of 'Merica."
- Nick Schmutte

"There is no reason behind
'Merica. You're either
'Merican or un-'Merican."
- Jacob Johnson

"Terrorist attacks can shake the foundations of our biggest buildings, but they cannot touch the foundation of 'Merica. These acts shatter steel, but they cannot dent the steel of 'Merican [American] resolve."
- George W. Bush

'Merica was a reoccurring theme throughout the year. It first made its name at the football game against Greenwood. The student section flaunted their spirit by wearing red, white, and blue. Some students brought giant flags to wave among the crowd. Although there wasn't a real reason for the students sudden burst of patriotism, they all showed school spirit and really brought about a new era of themes with 'Merica.

Say Cheese!

Senior pictures are an exciting and fun thing almost every senior chooses to do.

It became easier than ever to get great photos taken right in town. Mrs. Lindy Scott, the photography teacher, took many senior's photos in the class of 2013 through her photography business Photos By Lou.

"I absolutely love being behind the camera," Scott said, "You get to stop time in a sense. This is one service that you can provide for people that will last forever! What I love best about taking senior photos is to find out their true interest and incorporate those in their images. I always find a way to bring that out in pictures with them."

"Mrs. Scott came out to my grandparent's house to take my senior pictures. I told her kind of what I wanted the pictures to look like and she did so much better than I ever thought she could have done," senior Taylor Woodward said.

Scott's schedule is extremely hectic due to the fact that she has three kids and a full time teaching job.

On top of senior pictures, Scott also took pictures at the majority of sporting events and other major events throughout the school year. She gave all the pictures she took at the events to the students for free.

"We appreciate and look forward to seeing what kind of cool pictures she takes of us! She does such a great job," senior Brett Green said.

Senior Jeans

A group of Spotlighter and Madrigal girls pile together in their jeans. Choir students always looked forward to the few minutes Mr. Jason Damron gave them at the end of class to take pictures. "I loved taking pictures with all the choir girls because they're like my family," Nichol Crose said.

Senior girls spent hours planning and making their senior jeans to be ready in time for fall homecoming. Some students got a head start in the summer while others, like Laurel Gregory, took their time starting on their pants the week of homecoming and rushed to have them dry by Friday morning.

"I worked on my senior jeans every night the week of homecoming to have them done in time. Grace White and I stayed at our grandparents' house till four in the morning to have them done by the time school started," Gregory said.

This was a tradition that was a big deal to girls their last year of high school.

by Rachel Wathen

Bailey McNalley decorates a jean dress instead of jeans. She wanted to do something different that fit her personality. "I have always looked forward to making senior jeans and I really wanted mine to be unique. They were a lot of fun to make and I will always remember the funny looks I got because I was wearing a decked out overall dress," McNalley said.

Katie Hannah's senior jeans represent her favorite memories. She worked hard to make the jeans exactly how she wanted them. "Senior jeans take a lot of work and time. But after all of the hot glue and puffy paint, I think it was totally worth it. I like being part of the senior tradition," Hannah said.

School Spirit

Mooresville High School provided its students with the opportunity to get dressed up in different attire for each football and basketball game. Whether it was superhero, 'Merica or whitening out Whiteland the Pioneers never failed to show their enthusiasm to support their school teams. The activity that always reoccurred was the roller coaster simulation. "The roller coaster was my favorite part of half time. Even though we were all squished together, it is always a fun way to get the students fired up," senior Audrey Baysinger said.

Some of the Mooresville seniors at the football game against Plainfield high school. The superhero theme had been a popular all year. "It was a SUPER good time," senior Bailey McNally said.

Mooresville's student section go crazy on the 'Merica theme when Mooresville played against Greenwood. Theo Gentry held the flag during the entire game. "I waited for this theme all year, and when it was time for the Greenwood game I went in the red, white, and blue for 'Merical" Gentry said.

Juniors Damien Mills and Levi Jennings dress up as elderly men for the girls basketball game against Plainfield. They were the only two people dressed up because the earlier theme had been canceled. "Time sure does fly when you're having a great time," Mills said.

The students show excitement as they show off their sparkle at the Southport game. Everyone participated in the theme and threw sparkles everywhere. "Even though the season didn't turn out like we wanted, it was fun to dress up with all my friends and cheer the team on no matter what," senior Chelsie Bingham said.

Seniors and their Battle Scars

The Class of 2013, like most classes, has quite a few sports stars. All of them being wonderful at whatever sport they are in. Even the best have their battle scars. Whether it be a broken wrist, torn ACL, or something that can be life threatening, they all keep pushing on to do what they love.

Kyle Blackwell

During the last football game, Blackwell made a tackle, as he fell to the ground another player landed on his leg and broke it. It was a long healing process, about 4-5 months. Kyle didn't let it affect him and still tried to participate in all the fun that he could.

"When it initially happened, my adrenaline was going, so I had no idea it was broken and didn't realize it until the next morning," Blackwell said.

This is an X-Ray of the fracture in Kyle's leg.

Megan Small

Megan was a senior soccer player. She tore her ACL and miniscus in the State Cup Tournament playing for her travel soccer team. When she first got back into the sport again, she was a little rusty, but she is playing normal now.

"Despite all the hardship of healing enough and training enough to get back into the game, it was worth it and I don't regret it," Small said.

College Commitments

Multiple student athletes have committed to go to a certain college or university to play their sport of choice.

"The exciting part about signings is to see hard work and perseverance pay off. We desire all student athletes to move on to the next level in life, whether it be college, armed forces, the work force, etc.," Athletic Director Chad Briscoe said.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Student Council members worked to volunteer their time to benefit the high school and the community alike.

"I enjoy Student Council, because it gives me the chance to stand up for those who can't," sophomore Molly Fitzpatrick said.

She and the other members of the council were given the opportunity to do so through the various projects they participated in. Student Council helped to set up a dance marathon, food drive, numerous blood drives, along with other various projects. The Dance Marathon was one of the most successful projects Student Council has supported.

"The Dance Marathon was important to the children at Riley Hospital. It was nice knowing that I got to help kids who were sick," junior Austin Wagner said.

"I am proud of the students that were apart of Student Council this year due to all their hard work especially in regards to the Dance Marathon," Mrs. Barbara Goddard said.

by Bailey Hawkins

Student Council's food drive helps to feed families. Sophomore Holly Littell helped pack the donated food that was sent to the Churches in Mission. "It makes me feel good knowing I helped someone who needs it," Littell said.

Mrs. Diane Evans feels the need to give back. She gave blood at a Student Council blood drive. "I would want someone to help me if I were in need," Evans said.

Sophomore Emma Burget had attended the Dance Marathon both years. The Dance Marathon raised more than $2,000 for Riley Hospital. "The Dance Marathon was a fun way to help the children at Riley Hospital," Burget said.

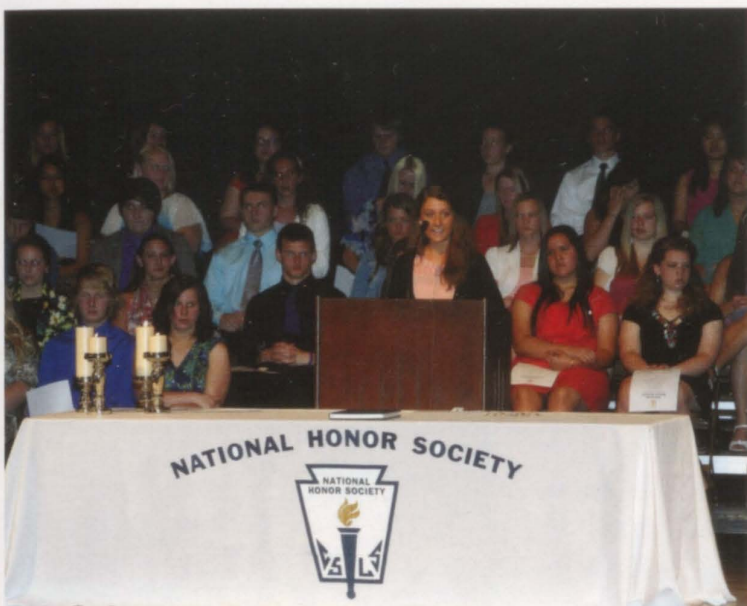

The Student Council sponsored food drive helps to feed underprivileged families in the community by stocking the local food pantry. Senior Jordan Belcher along with his classmates won the contest for bringing in the most goods. "The contest was a fun way to help struggling families," Belcher said.

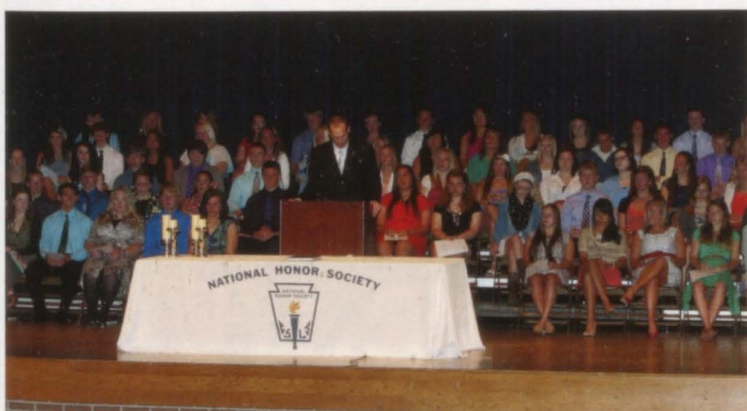

Student Council frequently partners with Riley Hospital to raise money for the Riley Foundation. Council members visited Riley Hospital to prepare for the Dance Marathon fund-raiser. "Going to the hospital was helpful. We were taught how to plan and organize the dance," freshman Alyssa Carrol said.

Key Club members collected pop tabs from their families to donate to the Ronald McDonald House. Key Club members set a goal to collect one million pop tabs. "Collecting pop tabs was an easy way to not only get hours, but help others too," junior Haley Chitwood said.

Senior Nichol Crose introduces the new class of NHS. She lead the new class in the National Honor Society Pledge. "It was bittersweet giving up our places in NHS to the new members," Crose said.

Mr. Jesse Burgess gives a speech to the new inductees. The new members of National Honor Society were inducted by previous members. "Being inducted into National Honor Society is an honor," junior Jack Elo said.

Key Club

Key Club members put in 60 hours of community service each year to help give back. The members were dedicated to taking the time to help someone in need.

"I have over 200 hours, because of the volunteer work I do with my church," junior Abbey Prilliman said.

Many members got their hours fulfilled through the projects Key Club had offered. Some of those projects included collecting pop tabs and adopting a family over the holiday season.

"Trick-or-treating for canned goods was a positive and fun way to help the community," junior Brittany Penn said.

Many students completed their sixty hour requirement over the course of the year.

"We have a great group of kids that were willing to sacrifice their time to serve others and this year's group went above and beyond," Mrs. Lindy Scott said.

by Bailey Hawkins

NHS

National Honor Society gave students a chance to set an example in their school and community. Students had to carry themselves as role models throughout the school.

"I was able to set an example for underclassmen by using my time to help others," senior Shelby Hartley said.

National Honor Society also required students to dedicate their time to community service. Each member had to serve three hours each month.

"NHS has taught me a lot about volunteering, and how crucial it is to the community," senior Rachel Justus said.

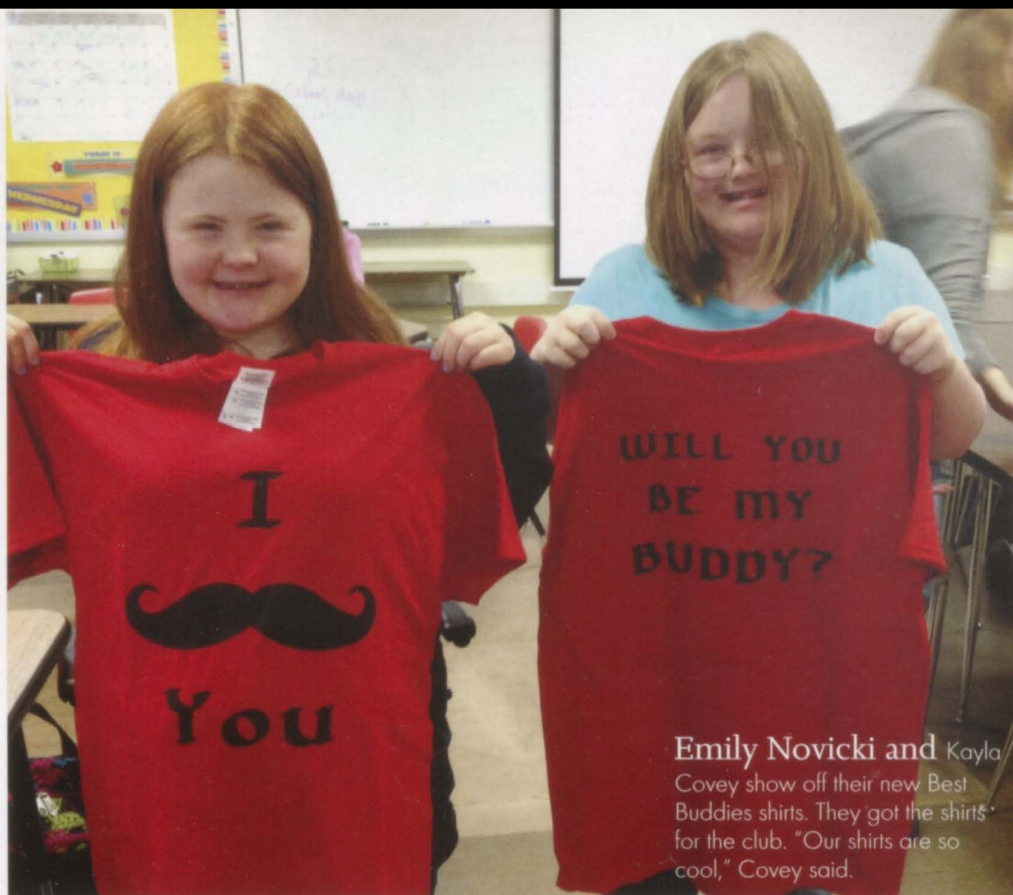

The members of National Honor Society were held to a high standard, a standard of which they have upheld.

"The positive impact the members of NHS have left on Mooresville High School will forever be appreciated," Mr. Jesse Burgess said.

Bethany Archer poses for a picture before she goes to grab her bowling ball. The group went bowling so they could hang out with their buddies. "It was a lot of fun and I loved seeing my buddy all night," Archer said.

Emily Novicki and Kayla Covey show off their new Best Buddies shirts. They got the shirts for the club. "Our shirts are so cool," Covey said.

Being a Buddy

Best Buddies gave students the opportunity to be paired up with a boy or a girl with special needs. They met once a month and talked about the parties they were going to have for the holidays or what event they were going to do together to support all children with special needs.

Mrs. Amy Selby has taught for five years and had been the sponsor of Best Buddies every year. Best Buddies was a student led club and the experience was different each year.

"I enjoy seeing the friendships that are created and getting to know the students and seeing the outstanding character and qualities that the students of MHS possess," Selby said.

The students ended up loving their buddies and enjoyed the time they get to spend with them. Some of the even planned a trip to Christmas at the Zoo.

"I love being looked up to by the buddies. I have to be on my best behavior all the time, but it's still worth it. I also love my buddy, Emily Novicki, she's the greatest. Being in Best Buddies to me is showing other students that they are the same as us and that no one should be treated differently. I feel like no matter what the circumstance is, everybody should have friends and never left out," junior Brittany Summers said.

BEST BUDDIES

FCA

Doing God's Work

The purpose of the club was to grow the love of Christ in our student athletes through fellowship, prayer, and learning of God's word. The members, along with Mr. Oggy Brewer, led a small group of Bible lessons and prayers every Monday morning. All students were welcomed into to FCA. Members tried hard to get as many people involved in FCA as possible so they could hopefully spread positive influence and meet new people with the same religious beliefs.

"One goal for FCA is for students to grown in their relationship with Jesus Christ. I want the students to learn Proverbs 3:6, which says "I think about Christ in all your ways, and He will guide you on the right paths,"" Mr. Oggy Brewer said.

Three sophomore girls enjoy the conversation they're having during an FCA meeting. FCA welcomed all grades of students and created a positive atmosphere where students could express their beliefs. "Being together with all the Christian athletes is really awesome because I know were are making disciples on our teams," sophomore Amanda Gifford said.

SADD

It's Okay To Be S.A.D.D

Students Against Destructive Decisions (SADD) members had the goal of promoting good decision making and creating awareness of teen dangers within the school and the community.

"It is important for students to be associated with SADD because through the course of the year, they will learn a lot about a variety of decisions that teenagers make that have destructive consequences. These SADD members then become the voice inside the school to encourage others to make good decisions," Mr. Brent Olivier said.

SADD hosted its annual talent show in March. Several students participated in the show and said it was one of their favorite moments of the year. The talent show gave them the opportunity to show off their talents that they normally would not show anyone.

"The talent show gave me the opportunity to do something I normally wouldn't do," senior Derek Willis said.

Senior Daniel Skora speaks out about the effects of tobacco, marijuana, and alcohol use. Several students made posters displaying the different types of destructive decisions and how they can severely affect a person's life both mentally and physically.

JSA

Debating the Future

Junior State of America was a club where students could come and express their opinion and debate topics of the future.

Although Ms. Joyce Gilly and Mrs. Karen Cochran were the club advisers, the students were the driving force behind the club. There were thought-talks, formal debates and debate games played, but all were led by the students.

"JSA was the single most influential part of my high school career. If I had not found out about the club I wouldn't be the same man that I am today. As I look forward to my future I know that it has prepared me for life and I have made great friends and times as a result. I would suggest to anyone interested in politics, or even just arguing, to go out and try it," President Austin Brinkley said.

GSA

Making a Difference

Scattered around the room with their feet propped on their desks the members talked and relaxed while they waited for the meeting to begin.

Members of the Gay-Straight Alliance worked to fight for anti-bullying causes and equality. The GSA paired up with Best Buddies for an Anti-Bullying campaign along with the National Day of Silence.

"I'm proud to be a part of a club that tackles current issues in today's society and makes a difference in people's lives," junior Morgan Sussman said.

Members of JSA jump off a ledge near the Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial. In February several members traveled to Washington D.C. to sightsee and attend the JSA Winter Convention. At the winter convention, the members were split into different houses and senates to debate and pass bills into JSA law. "The debating was so much fun. I met so many new people and got to debate topics that are really important to me," junior Michelle Majeski said.

JSA members stop to spell "Gilly" at the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial. After walking several miles around Washington D.C. they stopped to take a break and enjoy themselves. "The trip was so much fun. I think as a group we all got closer to Ms. Gilly, but this made us see that she isn't a scary lady; she can have fun with kids," junior Jackie Farrand said.

GSA members watch a short, fictional film about a heterophobic world. Afterwards, there was a discussion on self-harm and prevention. "It really intrigued me to see how the two sexualities were flipped. It made me realize if society was that way it would be really hard for me to live in it. It really made me understand what gay people go through," junior Justine Christian said.

BPA

Bringing Business Back

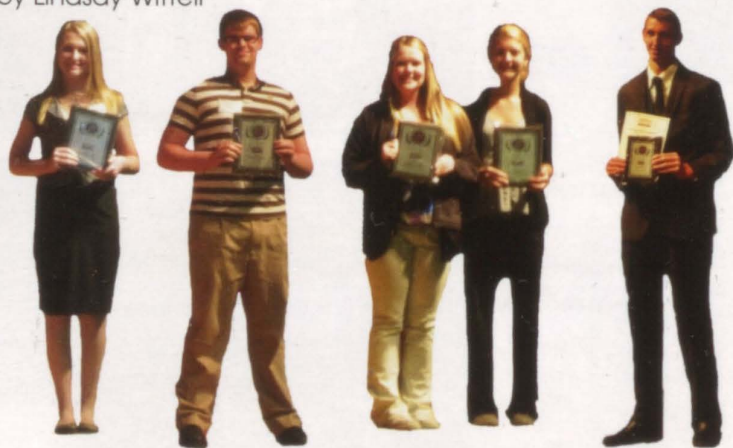

BPA is the leading organization for students wanting to pursue a career in business management, office information, information technology, and other related career fields.

BPA was administered by Ms. Traci Ball and Mrs. Dana Dillman. Senior Breanna Lair was nominated as the chapter president. All together, 21 students advanced from the district competition to state, which was held at the Indianapolis Marriott Downtown.

The group went on many fun and exciting field trips. In the fall they went to IUPUI for a tour around the campus. They went to a Pacer's game in October. In March they took a charter bus to Chicago where they visited the Chicago Museum of Broadcast Communication and Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago. BPA also toured the Indianapolis Star.

"The state competition is always a fun time for the students because it gives them a break from school, but also they are required to act and dress business professional. It's good for them to be in an environment where everyone is in professional attire and attitudes," Ms. Traci Ball said.

by Lindsay Wittell

Several BPA students pose with their plaques and certificates after receiving awards during the District Competition at Danville High School. All together, 21 students advanced on to the State Competition which was held the Marriot in downtown Indianapolis.

The BPA chapter gathers at IUPUI for a visit around the campus. IUPUI was considered one of the most occupationally diverse schools in the state, because it offers just about every degree in some way. "As my first year in BPA, it was a lot of fun to see the college kids in some of there business classes so I could see if the business field is a good career choice for me," junior Audra Pieper said.

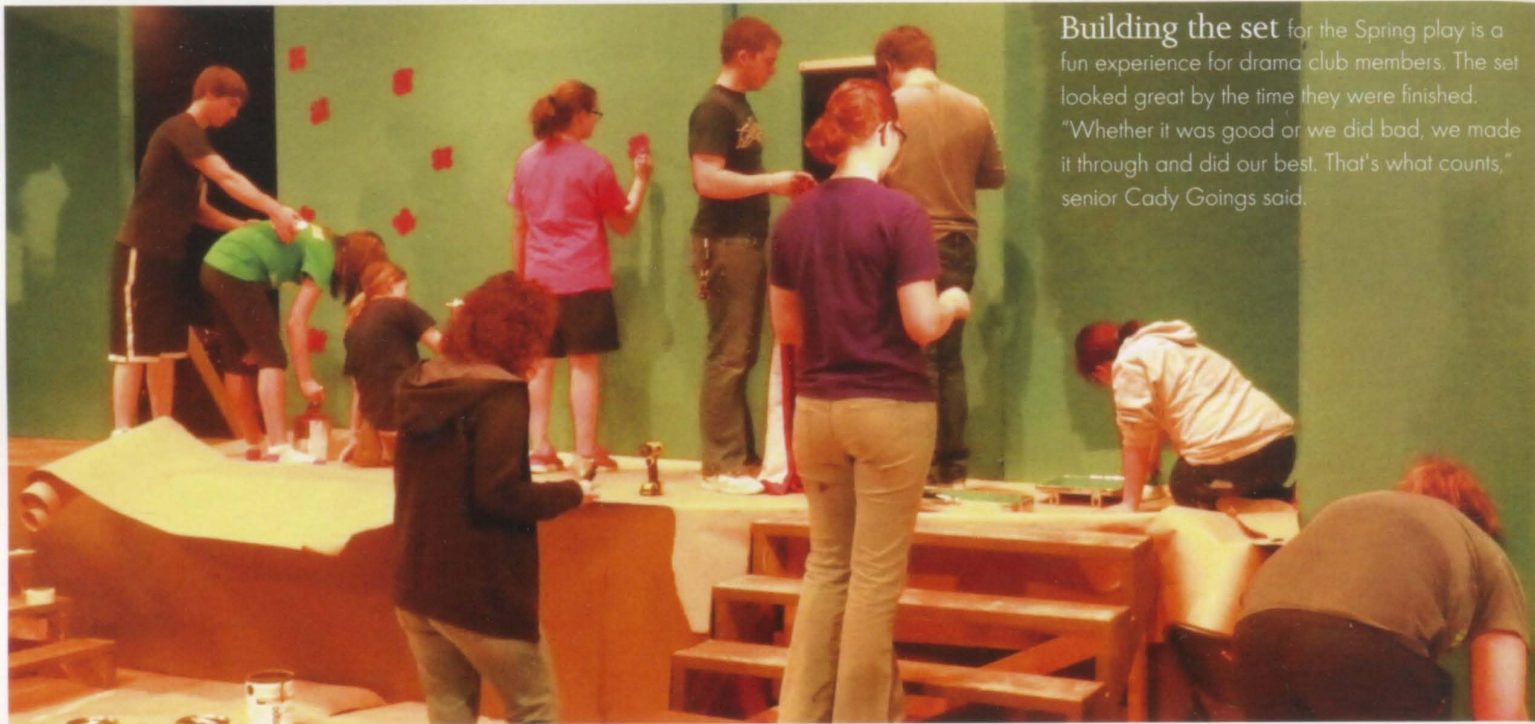

Senior Marisa Sims poses with a representative from the "Socks For the Homeless" drive that BPA contributed to. BPA raised over 100 pairs of socks that were donated to a homeless shelter. "We collected the socks for people who needed them and it will help them to stay healthy with clean socks. Plus, it will keep their piggies warm!" Sims said.

All the winners from the District Competition smile proudly as they display their plaques and certificates. The winners were featured on the front page of the Mooresville-Decatur Times. "I was really surprised when they called my name as a Top 10 winner. This was my first year in BPA so I didn't really expect to do as well as I did," sophomore Kellie Cavanaugh said.

DRAMA CLUB

Building the set for the Spring play is a fun experience for drama club members. The set looked great by the time they were finished. "Whether it was good or we did bad, we made it through and did our best. That's what counts," senior Cady Goings said.

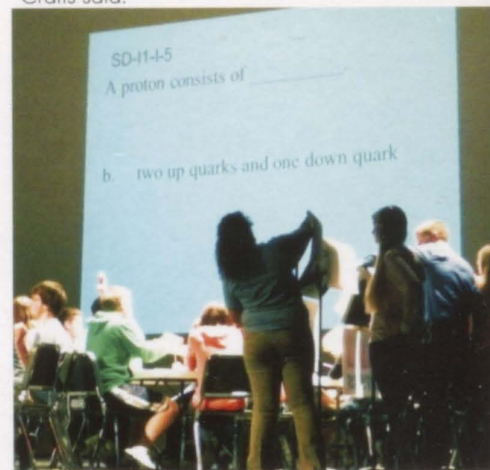

SPANISH CLUB

El Moho Piñata is a new member of Spanish Club. He became part of the class as a project. "The many activities that we did in class helped me to absorb more about the Spanish culture," senior Jennifer Ulrey said.

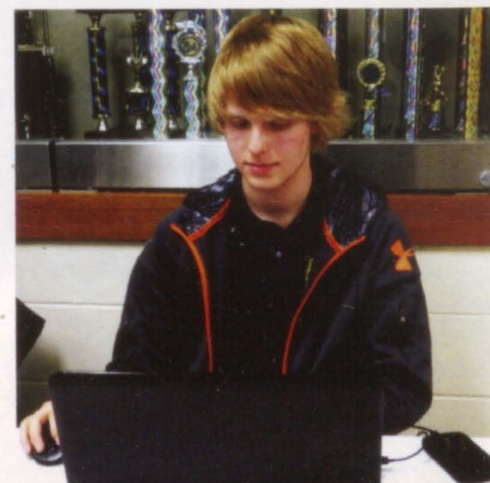

English Team Trophy

Members of the Science Academic Team take their time to answer the question on the projector. The room was filled with anticipation, waiting to see who won. "I like knowing things that many people don't know, that way I am a little different than everyone else," junior Ryan Crafts said.

Junior Tanner Atkins works on his laptop before the meet. He looked over the material before going up against the other teams. "I always review while eating before my big competitions. I really enjoy the food and of course the challenge of the competitions," Atkins said.

ROBOTICS

Students in Robotics club work on their robot together. They built this using metal scraps of old electronics. "We always listen to "Eye of the Tiger" before our competitions" freshman Tom Smith said.

Freshman Colton Clark assembles a piece for the robot. The boys gathered old electronics, took them apart and used them for their invention. "I love putting together a machine out of old parts and watching how it turns out," Clark said.

Mooresville High School offered many different clubs for the students to participate in. A wide variety of the kids joined and became a part of a club or team that most interested them. This included the Academic Teams, Drama, Spanish and Robotics clubs.

"Drama club gives me a place to be my crazy self. I love it!" junior Brittany Seals said.

These teams gave students the chance to show their academic abilities. They could compete to win, based on their knowledge. Being able to go out and show off their skills displayed how dedicated they were to their education.

"English club allowed me to learn about other cultures, such as Greece, which was my favorite," junior Justine Christian said.

Students on these teams and clubs went above the average student. Rather than just being on sports, they went to further their education. By being apart of academic teams, they got to show off their talents and to also learn new things to make them improve.

"Students who apply learning beyond the classroom are better prepared for adulthood and lifelong learning!" Mr. Andy Marine said.

by Trisha Hamilton

The academic teams study together to prepare for the competition. They took advantage of this time to help each other before it was their turn to compete. "Study tables help us combine our strengths and our knowledge together. We came in third at our final meet this year!" sophomore Peyton Lindley said.

ACADEMIC TEAMS

Did you hear about the girls basketball team winning its fifth straight sectional title? Did you hear Madrigals made it all the way to state finals?

Mooreville High School students had an eventful year. Between sporting events on a daily basis and constantly working in the classroom kept the majority of students very busy.

The facility had its fair share of hard work as well - rooms were cleaned after the fire and classrooms were packed before the end of school in preparation for the renovation project.

"Right before half time I was flat jacked right after the fumble kick-off recovery. My heart was pumping like crazy," senior Bram Wood said.

The words that came from senior, quarterback Mac Norton kept the team inspired to score at the beginning of half time.

"We knew we had to score," Norton said.

"I was really nervous and had butterflies in my stomach with this being my first year playing, but I still encouraged my teammates to come out strong at the half," senior Cam Battenfield said.

As the second half began the only thing senior Dennis Thomas had on his mind was to "get to the line."

"We were running close on time and had to complete the plays as quickly as possible," Thomas said.

This was a close game for us. Losing within the last few plays was disappointing.

"We should have won that game, we are well disciplined and we all work very hard. We just need to execute and finish it out," junior Damien Mills said.

A Fresh Start...

The rain dripped off the rims of the helmets as the crowd cheered from under their umbrellas. Mud flew up from the shoes of the players as they made their way down the slippery field.

In October, the JV football team played against the Whiteland Warriors. The new coaches called out plays while the boys scrambled to gain yards to even up the score.

"It was difficult to adjust to new coaches and new plays, but we handled it pretty well," Brody Boles said.

The boys gave it their all, but were unable to conquer the Warriors. Even though it went down as a loss in the books, they remembered what's more important, teamwork.

"No matter what happens to us, we're always still a team," Riley Swatts said.

Nothing stopped the JV team from playing their hardest. They always went out onto the field confident and ready to play.

"The whole Decatur game we actually played with heart, as well as had fun on the muddy field," Sam Westfall said.

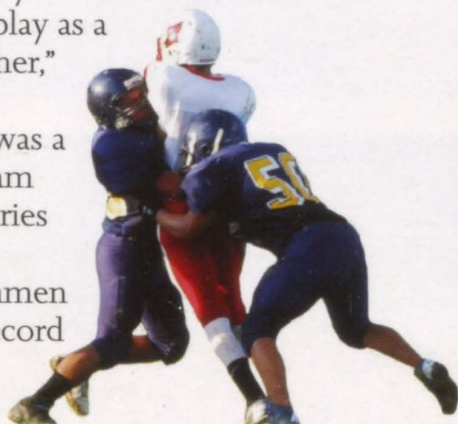

The football teams experienced a rough season, but never gave up throughout their tough journey. The JV team finished with a record of 0-6.

The Freshman team also had a rough first season as a new team, but as the season progressed they realized what they had to do to win.

"We learned to play as a team and work together," Kaleb Owens said.

Even though it was a tough season, the team still had some memories that they will always remember. The Freshmen team ended with a record of 1-6.

The JV offensive line snaps the ball and blocks the Whiteland defense. They ran a play that they hoped would change the game. "Playing in the rain, and not caring what happened was the best part of the game," sophomore Bryce Love said.

Freshman Brady Bain runs down the field after receiving a pass from quarterback, Alex Fabert. He worked to gain yards for Mooresville. "It takes all eleven players to win one game," Bain said.

Junior Cody Cannon throws a pass to a receiver as he gets swarmed by the Warrior defense. His goal was to complete the pass and get a first down. "The rain made it difficult, but I think we played really well during that game," Cannon said.

The Freshmen offensive line prepares to snap the ball. They worked to get the ball down the field. "Playing the games as a band of brothers was fun, and we worked really well together as a team," Grant West said.

Freshman Tyler Early tackles a Southport offensive player. Early played offense and defense in the game. "It was fun to play on both sides of the ball," Early said.

Freshman quarterback Alex Fabert looks for a receiver during the game against Southport. The receivers were all covered, so unfortunately, the pass was not completed. "The best part about football is proving you are capable of doing something great," Fabert said.

Varsity team

members start off their season with a pre-game huddle to get prepared for their first game. The girls won the game 10-0 giving them a head start on a great season to come. As a team, we wanted to improve our record from last year, sophomore Ashley Kimble said.

Senior Marisa Sims controls the ball while trying to pass it to her teammate. Sims played a major role in the middle of the field. "I love getting to be a part of all the action on the field and helping my teammates," Sims said.

The girls line up before the leukemia awareness game for the National Anthem. This was the first leukemia awareness game the soccer team has ever hosted. "I loved that my team supported my family by creating the event," sophomore Alley Guffey said. "It shows how close our team really is."

The varsity team members celebrate after their win against Plainfield for the Mid State Conference Championship title. The girls worked very hard throughout the game. "I was overwhelmed with emotion. I was relieved and excited at the same time," sophomore Liz Allen said. "I just can't put it into words how I felt."

Sophomore Kellie Cavanaugh dribbles through two players on the Franklin team. Cavanaugh controlled the middle of the field. "I don't like scoring, so I enjoy setting up opportunities for my teammates," Cavanaugh said.

Part of the varsity team waits anxiously on the sideline while watching penalty kicks during the Mid State Conference Championship game. The game ended with a score of 3-2 after the penalty kicks ended. "The anticipation of each shot was draining," senior Rachel Justus said.

"Here We Go Girls"

"Let's go play our game, ladies," Small said. "We know what we have to do."

Those are the words said by senior captain Megan Small in the huddle before each game. As the girls went on with their season, they continued to use this as their motivation.

It was a cold night in Plainfield on Wednesday September 19, 2012. The Mooresville fans crowded the Plainfield bleachers. They were going crazy.

Play after play, the girls were fighting hard to get the win. After time ran out, the score was tied 3-3, which then ran into overtime. The overtime then went into penalty kicks which caused major tension in the bleachers.

During the second round of penalty kicks, senior Rachel Justus scored the final shot, leading the Pioneers to a win. The girls rushed onto the field with excitement.

"I felt like we were on top of the world," senior Adele Hunter-Shields said. "I was proud of my team for not giving up."

The girls went on finishing their season with an overall record of 12-4.

"It was a great season with a very talented group of girls," Coach Jason Damron said. "There were a lot of fun memories this year that I will never forget."

From Midfield to Goal

"That's a goal for your Mooresville Pioneers!" Every athlete wanted to hear these words over the loud speaker when their cleats hit the pitch. For the Varsity Boys' Soccer Team, these words were heard frequently; with 12 wins, 3 ties, and only 1 loss, the boys had a great season.

During the 2012 season the boys accomplished the position of runner up in the fall sectional. They were defeated in the championship game by a very strong team, Avon.

"It was a disappointing loss but a good end to a really great season," senior Brandon Polson said.

Senior Kyler Smith scored 26 goals, breaking the record for scoring the most goals in one season. The 2005 record was currently held by Richie Sheckler, with 25 goals.

"I had the goal to beat the record last year, but I only tied it. Going in this year I was hoping to break it," Smith said.

Coach Jack Polson was very proud of the season. Their hard work and great amount of teamwork showed throughout the whole season.

"We had a great season just like the year before. One thing this year had that last year didn't as much was the camaraderie among the players," Coach Polson said.

The Junior Varsity team members stand in their pre-game huddle. This helped to get them pumped up as a team. "My favorite part of playing soccer is working hard to improve myself and my team," sophomore Austin Webster said.

Senior Brandon Polson runs to retrieve the out of bounds ball. The boys worked hard during the fast-paced game. "After a win, I feel proud because of all the hard work that the team put in this summer to get ready for the season," Polson said.

Varsity boys stand at attention during the National Anthem. Following the playing of the anthem they began the game. "I like the challenges that playing soccer makes me face," senior Jake Morning said.

Austin Morrow goes in to steal the ball away from a shocked Whiteland player. He showed aggressive play during the game. "I have been playing soccer my whole life," Morrow said.

Sophomore David Lawson leaps to take a header to get the ball away from Franklin opponents. He showed aggressive play. "My favorite thing about soccer is the intensity of a close game," Lawson said.

Senior Chris

Thomas shuffles with teammate Austin Wagner toward the goal. They hurried in order to beat the other team to retrieve the ball. "I like playing defense and preventing the other team from scoring," Thomas said.

Junior Zach Bengé controls the ball. He had concentration in his eyes. "My favorite thing is the feeling when I make a big impact on the game," Bengé said.

Putting in the Hours

As Coach Burnett told the girls, "Alright, 3 up top!" practice had begun. The girls put in over 65 hours of practice this season with a combination of 22 games and tournaments. Coach Burnett had her hands full with a very senior-based roster. With seven seniors, one junior, three sophomores, and a freshman, there was a lot of potential out on the court.

Monday Sept, 24

Senior night was last game the girls played on their home turf. The senior girls wanted to make a memory out of it, and so they did. The girls defeated Cascade in 4 sets. Tears of happiness and sadness filled the gym as each of the 7 families were escorted to mid-court.

"I was ecstatic that we won, but I was sad that it was our last home game ever," senior Bethany Neese said.

The teams had a lot of bonding experiences throughout the season. "I really liked the swimming practice. It was fun to take a break from a regular practice and do something different," manager Tiffany Lawrence said.

Junior Haley Chitwood drops low to get under a hard swing by a Greenwood hitter. Chitwood helped the Lady Pioneers to a well fought battle against the Woodmen. "Being the libero is really nerve racking. I always have to be on my toes for hard kills and deep corner hits," Chitwood said.

Defining Sportsmanship

Sportsmanship was something the team had striven for. It was a goal for every member on the tennis team.

"Sportsmanship means making fair calls throughout the match and complimenting everyone on either team for well played points and shots," senior Zach Pygman said.

The Pioneers Boys Tennis did excellent in the Fall. Most of them started playing when they were young and fell in love with it. The Boys Tennis Team was huge on teamwork and with having a positive outlook on the games.

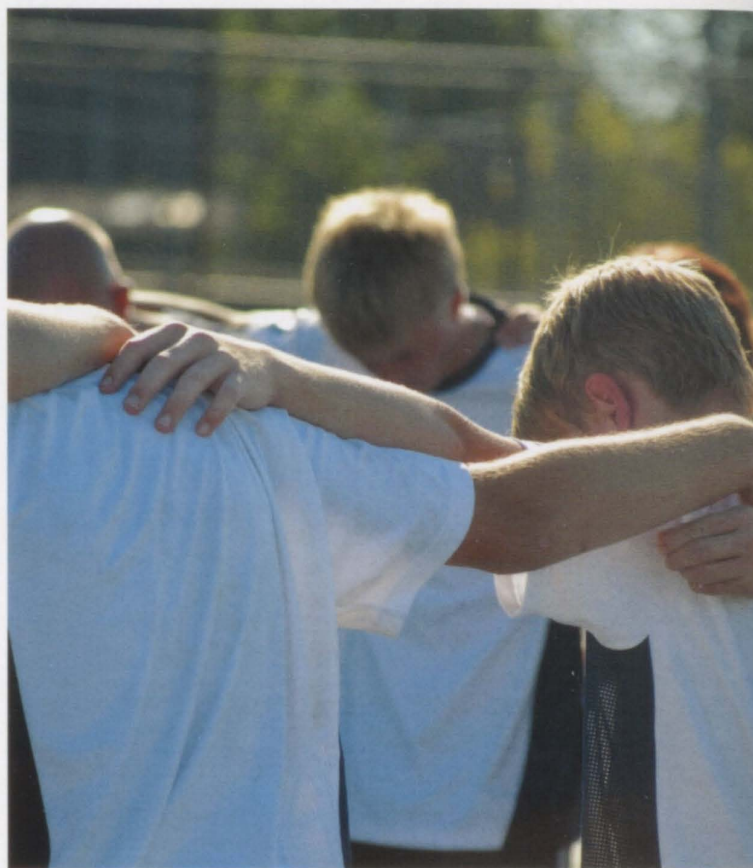

"We had individuals on the team who believe that sportsmanship is important," Coach Teders said.

The captains were Seniors Aaron Schaler and Harrison Schafer, who were intent on winning their matches.

"Winning both of our invitationals was a big achievement," said Schafer.

by Olivia Scully

The team huddles together with heads bowed. It was senior night and everyone was wishing all the seniors good luck in their future. "One of my favorite things about tennis is having a good time with my buddies," Chandler Gunnell said.

Senior Aaron Schaler is waiting for the offense to serve the ball. He was one of the captains on the team. "I did pretty well this season. I had a winning season in doubles. I feel sad, like most seniors, with this being my last year, but hopefully I will play in college," Schaler said.

Sophomore Peyton Baker returns a volley against one of Martinsville's players. He played every match at the varsity level in the season of Fall 2012. "I used to live across the street from some tennis courts back in middle school. I took my mom out there one day to hit and I've loved it ever since," Baker said.

Senior Clay Huddleston completes an overhead serve to his opponent. He was determined to make his senior year count by improving his skills. "My main concentration during this game was to stay focused and win the match," Huddleston said.

Sophomore Amanda Gifford competes at an away match. "I have improved my whole golf game this season. Yes, I did struggle, but every match I improved some part of my game, I like playing so I can get better everyday," Gifford said.

Sophomore Jourdan Blackburn is chipping at a home match on hole seven. Her overall goal was to get on the green. "My favorite part of golf is getting in front of everyone and hitting my first shot," Blackburn said.

Driving Force

The girl's golf team have worked unquestionably hard. They had put in the hours practicing day after day working towards improvement.

"I've really improved my drive, it goes straight and far which is awesome!" junior Molly Tieman said. Danielle Warthen made it to regionals which was very exciting for the team. This was the first time in four years someone from the girl's golf team has made it to regionals.

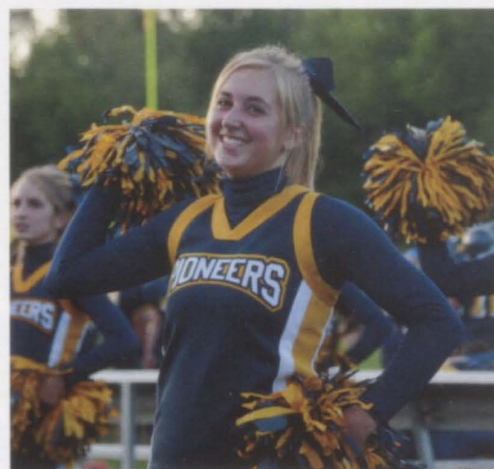

"I feel like I've gotten a lot closer to the girls on the team. They are like a second family, and I love them like sisters," junior Allison McQueen said. The team switched from Coach Dana Dillman to Coach Jeffery Franklin this year.

"It has been a transition at home. I've enjoyed the experience of coaching again, but this has been much tougher than my first shot at coaching," Franklin said.

The cheerleaders cheer on the track on as the sun sets behind them. There were many games where it was not nice and sunny. "Being named captain and cheering was one of the most memorable parts of my senior year," senior Jaimee McQueen said.

Freshman Chloe Murphy smiles for the camera as she does a cheer. Chloe is on the freshman football and basketball squads. "Football season is my favorite," Murphy said.

Flying High

The Mooresville High School Cheerleaders kept their spirit throughout each and every game, no matter what the outcome was. They consistently brought energy not only to the fans, but to the players as well!

The cheerleaders kicked off their season in the summer, attending camp at Ball State University.

"My favorite memory of the season was cheer camp because it was a time for us to grow closer to each other, and be more than just teammates," freshman Kristin Worth said.

The competition squad competed throughout the summer and continuously improved tremendously.

"The competition squad always grows super close because we spend all summer together," junior Morgan Smalling said.

by Gracie Norton and Emily Warfield

Each and every squad created many great memories, and continued to bond with one another throughout the year. One of the highlights of football season was being able to display even more spirit by being able to dress up for the themes.

"I enjoyed the energy within the student section, and being able to dress up with the student section made cheering a lot of fun," junior Shawna Marino said.

Once basketball season rolled around, the atmosphere completely changes within the Mooresville High School cheerleading program. The squad members, the game, and the schedule are all new things to get adjusted to.

"Basketball season is my favorite because the pep band is there and they make it a lot of fun," junior Brooke Nichols said.

The varsity cheerleaders throw junior Haley Wyble in a basket toss. Basket tosses are only allowed on the track and grass, not on a basketball court. "I like flying because it has taught me to have trust in everyone underneath me and everyone has their eyes on you in the air," Wyble said.

The cheerleaders did everything they could to participate in the themes every Friday night while still being safe. "This season was a lot of fun. All us girls grew together so much, I'm so glad I came back to cheer my senior year," senior Jordan Allen said.

The cheerleaders hold a motion while one of the girls shoot a free throw. They all hit the same motion to look uniform. "Basketball season is a complete different atmosphere than football season. We have so much fun as a squad no matter what, and we get super close throughout the seasons," senior co-captain Paige Martin said.

The entire Mooresville High School cheerleading organization gets together for a "silly picture" at camp over the summer. The cheerleaders traveled to Ball State University for four days. "Camp brought all of us together and we bonded so much in one short week. It was my favorite part of cheerleading this year," freshman Cassie Cannon said.

Running To Success

An individual will succeed far beyond his or her expectations with the support of the team. This is what the Mooresville Cross Country Team learned and experienced throughout their season.

The Mooresville Girls Cross Country team had a very successful season. The team got a very early start to training from June until the end of the season. The girls only had one captain, Paige Baker, each girl played a very important part on the team. Even though they only had one senior, Brooke Burns, they were still a strong team.

The whole girl's team made it to semi-state for the first time in more than 20 years. Megan Phillips was a big help to the team coming in as a freshman. She ended up breaking the girls record at a time of 19 minutes and 46 seconds. The previous record was 20:08 and was recently held by Kailyn Baker.

"When you run cross country, you do not have anyone else to blame for a good or bad race. Even though it's a team sport, no one can make you run faster or slower. I've learned to take responsibility for my own actions," senior Brooke Burns said.

The boy's team also lacked upperclassmen by only having two seniors, Jon Stapert and Michael Passmore. Even though each race was a challenge, the boys still showed improvement throughout the season.

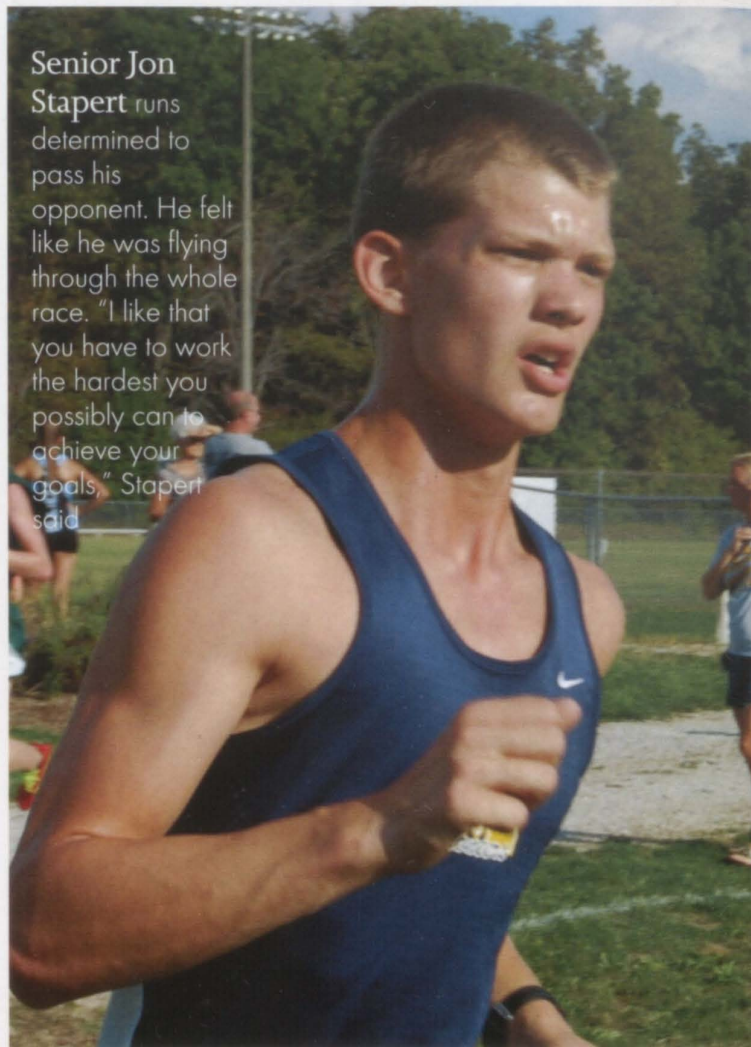

"I think the boys are pretty good, we have a lot of good freshman, which is good for the future," junior Brett Hoffman said.

Senior Michael Passmore went all the way to the state finals and placed 17th in state. Passmore also competed in the all-star meet in Dayton, Ohio, which was a race that included the top twelve senior runners from the states Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and Ohio. Passmore placed 16th at the meet.

"Michael qualified for the all star cross country race serving as another milestone in a remarkable season. He finished his final high school race with an exclamation mark; earning sixth place for team Indiana when he was seeded eleventh," Coach Adam Hook said.

by Jess Yeoman and Michael Passmore

Senior Jon Stapert runs determined to pass his opponent. He felt like he was flying through the whole race. "I like that you have to work the hardest you possibly can to achieve your goals," Stapert said.

The boys team circles up before the John Mitchel invitation. They do this before each race. "We always circle up before a meet to pray and get pumped up, it is more like a tradition," Quinn Cavin said.

Junior Eric Johnson pushes through the race to attempt to beat his best time. Eric finished the race in 20:20 at the home meet. "Auto-bots roll out," Johnson said.

Junior Paige Baker pushed to pass her opponent. Baker ended up finishing the race in 9th place.

Junior Hannah Outcalt dashes in front of her opponent. Hannah came in 22nd place. "The girls team stuck together as a family even through the rough times," Hannah said.

Freshman Megan Phillips rounds the curve at the home course. This race was more of a test for Phillips, since this was only her second 5k race, and she wanted to see how she would perform on a flat course. "Another one bites the dust..." Phillips said.

Junior Morgan Sussman focuses on the task at hand at the home meet. Sussman felt that the cross country team was almost like a family. "I was really surprised when I improved my time," Sussman said.

Mooresville Cross Country team sits down for a pasta dinner at fellow junior Paige Baker's home. The team had made it a tradition to have a dinner the night before a meet. "I think the dinners are a fun way for the runners to bond and come together," Baker said.

Lady Pioneers Take the Court

"SWISHHHHH!" Our Lady Pioneers had another great season, with a record of 19-5. Their great amount of hard work definitely paid off.

Making it to the sectional game was a huge achievement for the team. Beating Terre Haute North and South put them at a five year streak of being sectional champions

"We're like one big family and we all get along pretty well, which helps us have more fun and makes for a better season," Taylor Porter said.

Freshman varsity player, Lauren McBryar broke the freshman three-point record. The original record was 54, held by Jama Sharp. Lauren broke the record with 58.

Although the girls did not make it through regionals, they did beat Connersville in the first game. When it came to finals against Roncalli, the girls lost by ten. They wish they could have won regionals, but were still happy with how far they made it in their season.

The breast cancer game was a game that related for many of the girls close to the heart. Playing for friends or family, supporting breast cancer made them go out and play their hardest. This game was dedicated to Pam McFarland, senior Jessica McFarland's mom.

"We found out the day before the game that my mom had breast cancer, so seeing everyone come out wearing pink to support it was really great," McFarland said.

All in all, the girls had a great season, and both coaches were honored. Joe Johnson was inducted into the Indiana Basketball Hall of Fame, and Coach Mark Hurt coached the Indiana All-Star team.

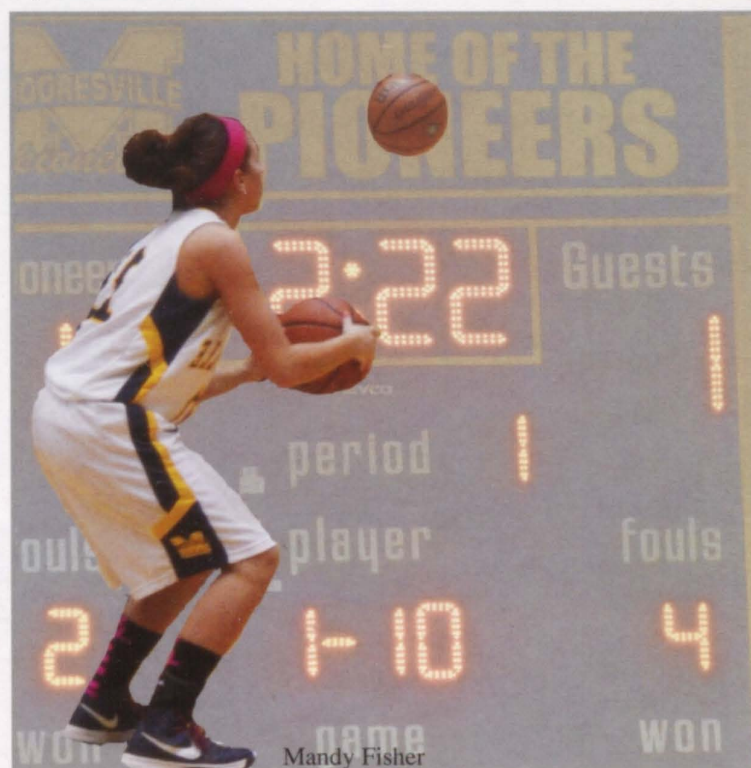

"The girls had an outstanding season. A record of 19-5 is awesome!" Coach Hurt said.

by Trisha Hamilton

Junior Kayla Harpold guards Warren Central opponent to block the pass from being made during their breast cancer game. This game struck a lot of the girls close to home. "A lot of my family members and parents of my friends have cancer, and seeing them at the game made me want to play that much harder," Harpold said.

Freshman Mackenzie Johnson cheers for her teammates as they're announced. She loved playing varsity. "It was a great experience to be apart of the 5th consecutive sectional championship," Johnson said.

jumps for the tip off in the Breast Cancer game against Warren Central. They ended up defeating the Warriors. "We played before every game and I think it really helped us get mentally ready for the game," Corbin said.

As a team, the girls are closer this year, more than ever. The seniors stepped up a lot to help their younger fellow teammates. "I'm really going to miss all of the seniors next year," sophomore Kellie Cavanaugh said.

The JV girls line up for a play. They focused on the play to make sure the other team didn't get to score. "We had a good season and ended 18 and 2. We really worked hard as a team to reach our goals," sophomore Megan Acres said.

Junior Mikayla Rusie blocks her opponent to help teammate Lindsey Wittell keep hand on the ball. The teamwork that the girls showed helped them to achieve through the year. "This basketball season was very special because our five seniors worked so hard and showed their love for the game," Rusie said.

Like Our Veterans We DEFEND Our Home

On February 15th, the boys charged the court wearing National Guard digital camouflage jerseys.

This game represented the team's theme for the entire season.

"Without the National Guard, our country would be nothing," junior Jonathan Hurt said.

The team was down at halftime, but came out stronger than ever after Coach Carter's encouraging words.

"Perseverance and persistence are two words that really sum up our season. The boys continued to stay at it everyday and had faith even at difficult times," Coach Carter said.

Defeating Greenwood was a major turning point in the season. The boys continued to grow closer throughout the season, despite losing two players.

"I really look up to the varsity players. They're so much fun to watch and they play together as a team," freshman player Austin Long said.

"Losing two key players early in the season made us come together as a team and realize that we could do anything we put our minds to," junior Keith Kassen said.

by Maddy Cooper and Gracie Norton

Junior Jacob Johnson drives to the basket with a solid dunk. He had 15 dunks throughout the entire season. "As Giovanni Ruffin said best, 'take no days off', that's my motto," Johnson said.

Freshmen KC Earls calls the play at the beginning of the second half. Mooresville played Northview for their first round of sectionals. "Being in charge of calling the offensive plays is a key role in the game because you have to know the capabilities of each of your," Earls said.

Junior Keith Kassen finishes off a solid pass to Jonathan Hurt. He completed the pass with five seconds on the clock. "Towards the end of the game, it was easy to break the press," Kassen said.

Brian Strong shoots for two against Scecina. It was a very defensive game, especially with it being the last home game before sectionals. "You have to do what has to be done, no matter how hard it may be," Strong said.

Junior Jonathan Hurt swishes a three-point shot at the National Guard game. He was full of energy after he made the shot. "I got past the first defender, and got the shot up before the next defender picked me up," Hurt said.

Sophomore Lane Weaver charges to the basket. He made the shot with 20 seconds left in the first half of the game. "My thoughts were forget about the contacts go through it and finish. All I did was concentrate on finishing the lay up." Weaver said.

The cheerleaders stretch the flag across the floor to begin the National Anthem. Everyone paused for a moment of silence. "The rather large stars and strips really pumped up the players and the crowd," freshman player Clint Moore said.

Showing Dedication

"Each of the wrestlers showed huge amounts of success, dedication, and pride this season," coach Zach Errett said, describing the 2012-2013 wrestling team.

The team started conditioning the summer before the school year began.

"Our seniors were great leaders and motivators at each practice. If you haven't been to a practice, you don't know what it's like. Wrestlers are the toughest kids in high school," said Errett of the difficult practices the team endured throughout the season.

Four wrestlers were Conference Champions and four advanced to Semi-State. Brent McCreary, Brody Boles, Jordan Frye, and Mitch Anderson won Conference in their weight classes, while McCreary, Frye, Boles, and Randy Scott advanced to Semi-State. McCreary placed fifth at Semi-State.

The team members definitely had their favorite moments throughout their wrestling careers.

"My favorite moment from high school was qualifying for state my junior year," senior Brent McCreary said.

"Sharing the high and low points with my teammates was the highlight of the season. We are like brothers and we push each other to fight through adversity to achieve greatness," junior Blake Davis said.

"Their success was a direct reflection of their hard work, and it showed from the start of the year to the end," Errett said.

Sophomore Brody Boles takes down his opponent at Semi-State. Making it as far as he did was a great accomplishment for the Mooresville wrestler. "Walking out onto the mat, I was very energetic and ready to show what I could do for our team," Boles said.

To the wrestlers and the coaches, it didn't matter how far they went as a team, they only worried about working to better themselves and supporting everyone on the team.

Swimming is a team effort, but it also takes a lot of self motivation. When you get in the water it is all on you: you don't have your teammates beside you giving you a pep talk in the water.

"Our bodies are not designed to swim. A swimmer is a true athlete," Coach Amanda Miller said.

Levi Jennings set out with a goal at the beginning of the season: to go to regionals and break the diving record.

"I did set all of my goals this year and I am pretty satisfied with how my season went! The night I set my record I was hitting all my dives really well and I was just having a great night," junior Levi Jennings said.

Levi already had a goal to re-break the record next year and make it to state. Along with Levi, many members of the swimming and diving team had a successful season. A number of records were broken on relay teams and by individuals.

"We could not have accomplished these goals without the help of our coaches (Amanda Miller, Stephanie Dockery, and Patti Shanklin). The coaches pushed us to be the best we could," senior Katy Hendrickson said.

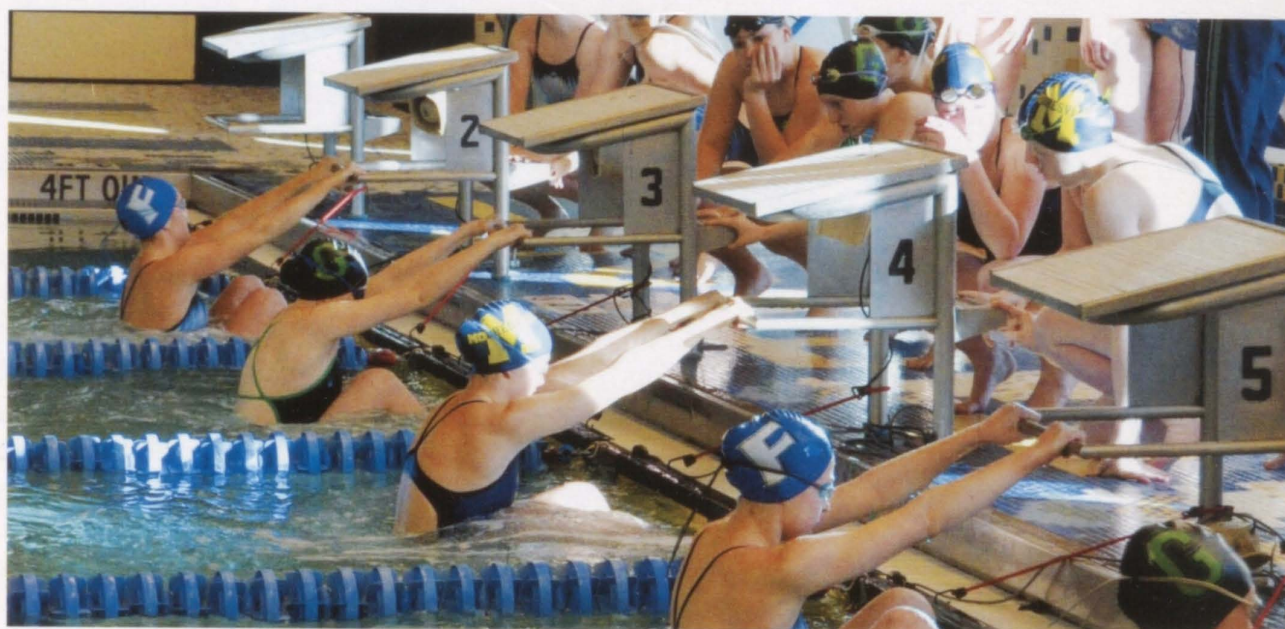

This was the first year that the team had mandatory morning practices.

"As one of the team captains I hope they (swimmers and divers) continue teamwork and their dedication," Hendrickson said.

The swimming and diving team displayed excellent camaraderie, sportsmanship, and character. Saying the season was successful is an understatement.

Waiting anxiously to be able to play the first game of the season, the 12 seniors, that made up the varsity team, along with freshman catcher, Brady Bain, prepared for an unforgettable season.

"This team is more than just a team, we're a family," senior Hunter Fenwick said.

The majority of the varsity team had been playing together since little league, so this year, they wanted to go out with a "Bang!"

Standards were set high for the team to make their hometown proud before the season even started. On the off season, the boys prepared as much as possible.

Weather delays pushed the beginning of the season back and the team began to get anxious and ready to get the season started to show what they could do.

Once they finally kicked off the season, the team had its ups and downs on and off the field. Coach Eric McGaha took a week long leave of absence in the middle of the season which shook the boys up.

"Having Coach McGaha as a teacher in elementary, I saw first hand his teaching capabilities! I am blessed to have been coached by such a great man! It was extremely heartbreaking when coach took his leave of absence. It was through our will as a team, and more importantly as a family that we were able to get him back in position. I am truly thankful for my baseball experience," senior Mac Norton said.

Sophomore Max Parsons jumps to catch the ball at first base. Parsons came back from having neck surgery the previous year. "Baseball is more than a team, it's a family. Slow down gurrll!" Parsons said.

Senior Nathan Gilbert slides back to first base after leading off. Gilbert made it back to base in time to be safe. "I love getting into the pitcher's head and making him pick over. Lets you know he's worried about you," Gilbert said.

Freshman Austin Long

Roberts pitches while sophomore Jacob Archer prepares for the hit. Roberts served as a captain on Junior Varsity for his junior year. "We had a rough start, but then we turned the page and started playing the type of baseball that we know how to play," Roberts said.

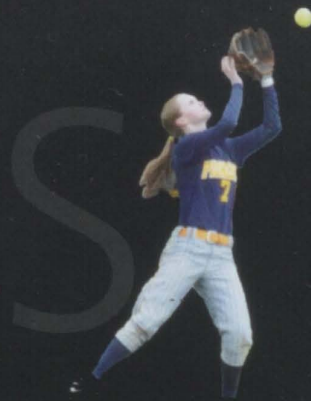

Head varsity coach Eric McGaha huddles the team between innings at his first game back after his week long leave of absence. The team was happy to have him return after his break. "Bar none, Coach McGaha is the greatest coach I've ever had. Losing him sent shock waves through our team, but getting him back made on the pirate ship made us realize how lucky we were. That swashbuckling character has all my respect," senior Austin Brinkley said.

The starters face the flag while the National Anthem plays. This is a tradition before every varsity game. "There's no better feeling than the jitters you get before a game," senior Bram Wood said.

Who Said Girls Can't Play Ball?

These girls could definitely play ball. The girls softball team put in numerous hours of dedication before and during season. They started conditioning in January, and finally got on the fields in April.

Their strenuous schedule proved to be no competition to their eagerness to play. The girls sometimes played several games during the week, including weekend games as well.

Since their inaugural season in 2012, the girls softball teams had made its new fields into a home. Their fields were located behind North Madison Elementary School.

"I was hesitant at first, but the seniors welcomed me on to the team and led me in the right direction.

They set the example that I needed," freshman Anee Frechette-Houchens said.

With senior leadership from Jeana Gregory, Shelby Cash, Taylor Chitwood, and Celeste Roloff, the team was in pretty good hands.

"We have a completely different squad from last year. A majority of the players are new varsity players," head varsity coach Ms. Traci Ball said. "It has been a season of ups and downs, but the girls are eager to learn and I think it will be better next season. We grew closer as a team. It has been a huge learning curve and I think the girls are going to be better because of it."

The Softball team joins hands while saying its pre-game prayer. "Before every game, our teams goes behind our dugout and we have Coach Dad pray. Its been hard without him because of his accident, but we still pray," junior Bailey Pryor said.

Freshman Morgan Wilson delivers her pitch to the pioneers Monrovia opponents. "I make myself aware of where the runners are on base. Then, I concentrate on throwing hard to each batter, and knowing where to go with the ball if its hit to me," Wilson said.

Junior Sarah Shorter starts her dash to first base after slamming the ball into left field. "I try to clear my mind when I go to bat, but I think to myself "just make contact." I know I need to do whatever needs to be done to help my team," Shorter said.

Making the Turn

The Mooresville Boys' Golf Team walked on to the course with a goal. They wanted to improve and show how hard they had worked during the off season.

As a team, there were several victories, including a win at the Bishop Chatard Invitational. Senior Broden Chapman and junior Brady Sappenfield had low scores for Mooresville; both carded a 75. Chapman won Midstate, and Sappenfield finished second.

"Having two golfers finish first and second is a big deal. We were really competitive this year, the worst we lost by was four strokes," Coach Ernie Adams said.

"Our biggest success was winning an invitational. I also lowered my individual average by six strokes," junior Ben Hammon said.

"Even though there are a lot of us, we are all really competitive because we are all that good," junior Kyle Hurt said.

The team placed third in Sectionals, and advanced to Regionals, a first in Mooresville history. Broden Chapman won medalist.

At Regionals, Brady Sappenfield shot 72 to advance as an individual to the State tournament.

At the State Tournament, Sappenfield shot an 81-77-158 to finish tied for 70th.

"The team had a very competitive season, together and individually," Coach Adams said.

A Cold Start

The girls tennis team stood huddled together before the Whiteland match. It was only thirty nine degrees, and the girls couldn't feel their hands.

"Are you crazy?" coach Greg McGuffey asked the Whiteland coach because it was so cold.

Coach Michael Teders stayed focused. He was standing in the middle of the huddle to give the team a pep talk and pray a short prayer.

When Teders was done, junior captain Michelle Majeski led the team in a cheer.

"I always look forward to playing Whiteland because coach Teders wants to beat them so bad," senior Sarah Brown said. "But I was still nervous because I couldn't even feel the racket in my hand."

Coach Teders had high expectations for the girls to win.

"I really wanted to win, but win or lose I wanted it to happen fast so I could be warm," freshman Margaux Zook said.

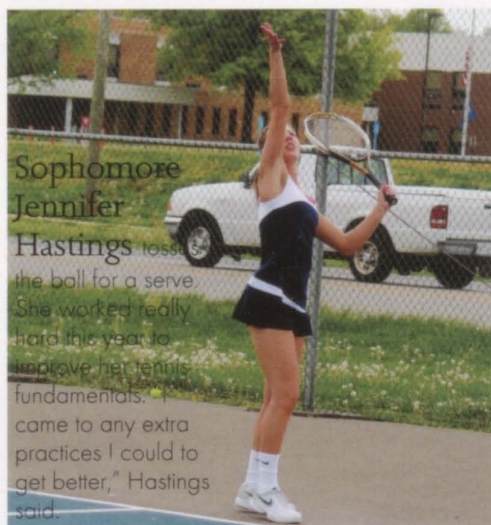

The girls ended up beating Whiteland after their bodies were so numb they couldn't feel anything.

The girls team played a lot of their matches in extreme weather conditions, but that didn't stop them from excelling and improving from previous years.

Both girls and boys track competitors made a strong showing in 2013.

Throughout the season, school records were broken by both individuals and teams.

MHS was represented well at the state track meet, where with senior Mandy Fisher, sophomore Sarah Corbin, and senior Michael Passmore all advanced.

For the two seniors competing at state, this was their final chance to prove themselves.

"It was such an honor to be able to compete at state again and I knew this year had to be different than previous years. I wasn't satisfied with just making it to state, I wanted to accomplish more and placing 9th was my goal," Fisher said.

At the state meet both Fisher and Passmore placed ninth and both set new school records.

"I couldn't be more happy and proud with how my high school career has gone," Passmore, who signed to run at Indiana State, said. "This was the best place to finish it out, and a great way to finish it."

Junior Cameron Meador works with his friends to finish their project. The boys had been working the whole week and also decorated their finished product. "Learning is more fun when I can interact with my friends and get a break from just doing worksheets," Meador said.

Adding It Up

On March 29, 2013, Mrs. Nicki Manion's Pre-Calculus class was rewarded for getting great test scores on their previous test. Mrs. Manion promised her classes rewards for every test if they got a certain percentage. It may have been challenging, but students took the challenge in order to earn their reward.

"Mrs. Manion rewards us with food days if our class gets a certain percentage average on a test. It helps because as a class, we work harder to earn that food day" junior Michelle Majeski said.

Earning the rewards made the students enjoy what they were doing. The students strove to work harder and maintain the rewards. Although the rewards made the class more enjoyable, another side to math is how it is used in the real world.

"I reward my students because if there is no goal, and there is no reward, then what are they really working towards?" Manion said. "Just like how companies give bonuses for employees, food works with teenagers as their 'bonus'."

Math is a subject that is used in an average person's life. Being an adult and paying for bills or taxes is something that everybody has to do.

"Math is useful to me because I know that I am going to have to use it some day when I become older and have to pay for more things," junior Ryan Crafts said.

Senior Antonio Gioe works on the start up for his Pre-Calculus class. Gioe does the start ups every day for his class, instead of doing it on his own sheet of paper. "I like doing it on the board because I like to be in front of everyone and help them," Gioe said.

The projects in Mr. Burgess' class made Alex Taulia want to rip his hair out.

Grace Pardieck went on an American Studies field trip to Brown County to read poems her junior year.

Megan Passey made cookies for Constitution Day.

Coleson Sharp was Leonardo Da Vinci for a day.

Course Spotlight: American Studies

The History side of American Studies class consisted of ACP United States History.

"Students receive Indiana University credits, so they must understand it truly is a college course," Ms. Joyce Gilly said.

This class had many projects, and students in the history course also took an advanced English 11 course taught by Mrs. Lisa Gobel.

"Everybody made it sound difficult and intimidating, but after you get into it and pay attention it's not so bad. It's fun to get more into depth about our past," junior Grant Langley our past," junior

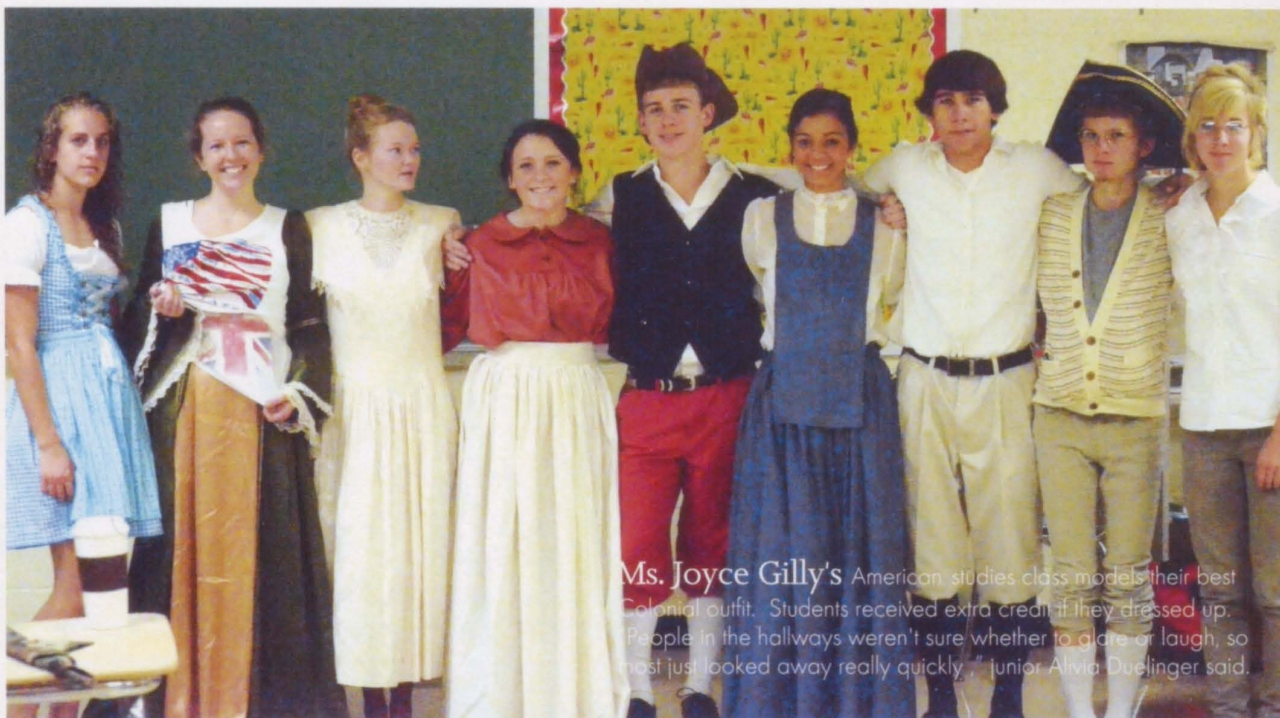

Grant Langley said.

Although, a challenging class is not always a bad thing.

"A lot of people might think there are hard tests and a lot of work, but it's really not that bad if you try. Ms. Gilly and Mrs. Gobel help a lot," said junior Haley Wyble.

American Studies, though a challenging class, was a fun class as well. In addition to American Studies Ms. Joyce Gilly also taught government. All seniors were required to take government and economics classes.

by Hannah Shelton

Ms. Joyce Gilly's American studies class models their best Colonial outfit. Students received extra credit if they dressed up. People in the hallways weren't sure whether to adore or laugh, so most just looked away really quickly," junior Alivia Duelinger said.

Senior Students participate in Constitution Day. The United States' government class went all out to present to their fellow classmates. "We figured it was a great way to display the amendments while showing that the constitution is truly about the people," Jonathan Fulkerson said.

Students display their work to a captive audience during the fair. Sophomore world history students had the task of designing their own government within their own country. "It was fun and entertaining," sophomore Peyton Baker said.

History Fair

Mr. Jesse Burgess' freshman U.S. History and sophomore World History classes put on a history fair in the North gym during first semester. The fair started first period and continued through third period.

According to Mr. Burgess, the history fair was all about governments. Each group of three to five people had to look at what worked and what didn't, learn from the past, and attempt to create a government they thought was effective. The fair was open to all members of the Mooresville community, along with individuals that worked in government at a state level.

The atmosphere was very active.

"People were talking about their topic and walking around to see other projects," said sophomore Dylan Scott.

Many people had a positive experience. "It was an all around good time," said sophomore Austin McKinney.

by Hannah Shelton

Freshman U.S. History group presents their project on the United States government. They had to be prepared for an audience to ask questions. "My favorite part of presenting was being able to teach other students," freshman Ashlynn Mason said.

Juniors Kelly Kubischta and Molly Tieman paddle their way across the pool in the Boat Races. They put up a good fight against the other boats but placed 2nd in their heat. "It took us about two weekends to make our boat and it was so much fun racing against our friends," Kubischta said.

and junior Jackie Farrand exchange fluids during a Biology II lab. Each student in the class got assigned a role to play and they had to exchange fluid six times. "It was a really interesting lab to do, and it was conveniently planned by Ms. Howard to do it right before Spring Break," Farrand said.

Juniors Logan Mills and Morgan Smalling shoot their trebuchets. They worked purely on the force of gravity. "It was pretty awesome building this and seeing it actually work," Mills said.

Juniors Nathan Snyder and Jasmine Pygman measure the distance a marble falls when they drop it on different ramps. It was for a Physics lab and they had to figure out the math behind two dimensional projectiles. "It was a fun lab report and we learned a lot from it," Snyder said.

Partners Damien Mills and Shawna Marino get ready to start in the boat races. They were surprised their boat didn't sink. "The entire time we were racing I thought we would sink," Marino said.

Let's Get Scientific

The physics classes got busy doing multiple projects this year. They did everything from building trebuchets to building boats out of cardboard. Everything was difficult, but in the end everyone learned a lot and were impressed with what they had accomplished.

Most students' favorite project to see completed is the yearly physics boat races. The students are only allowed to use cardboard and adhesives to build them.

"Boat races were my favorite part about being in physics because we were allowed to be partners with our friends and we had to actually compete for the best grade," junior Jasmine Pygman said.

The projects that the students did normally required a lot of work and cost 20 percent of their grade. It might not seem like a lot, but because they did so many it really affected their grades in the end.

"I've done the boat races for six years and it's always my favorite project to look forward to at the end of the year" Brent Olivier said.

In biology the students did things from dissecting pigs, rats, and did an HIV simulation lab. The dissections for the biology students were part of their last final grade in the class because it wrapped the whole year up into one lab.

"Seeing the structures in the rat was really cool because I want to go into nursing when I'm older, so it gave me an inside on what I would see," junior Kayla Karr said.

Junior Jacob Delk tests out his Goldberg project. Everyone had to build a Goldberg project to turn a light switch on. "I was really just hoping that it would work and turn the switch on," Delk said.

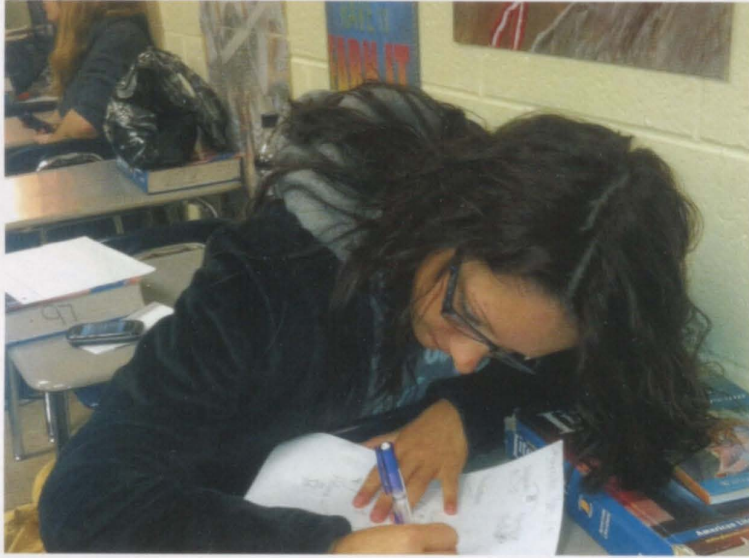

Senior Dakota Bain puts his hands on the ball of electricity. They did this to show how static electricity traveled from his hands to his head. "That was one of the best and most fun labs we did all year," Bain said.

Partners Grant Langley and Logan Allen race across the pool. They placed first in their heat. "The eagle helped pull us upward and out of the water. It was really an unfair advantage, but this is America and we have the freedom to mount eagles on boats if we want to," Langley said.

Sophomores

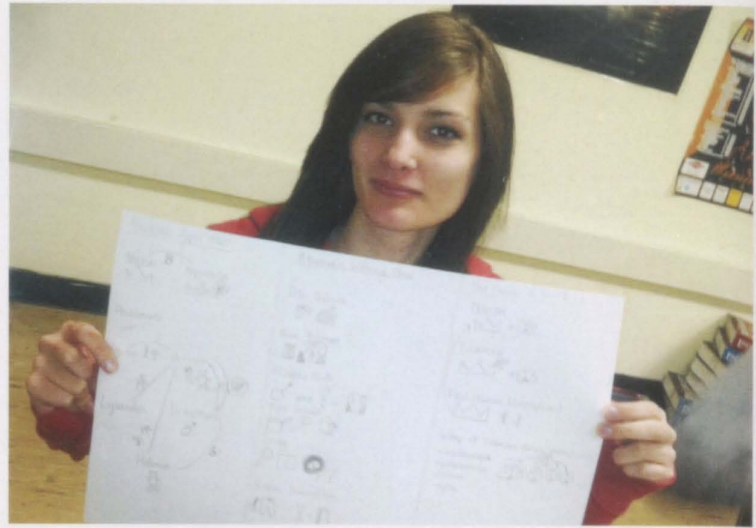

Liz Brock, Bryan Roskowski and Michael Anderson roll the dice to declare war on an enemy company. This determined who gained lost troops. "Easy win for blue! Boom!" Anderson said.

To better understand the characters of "A Midsummer Nights Dream", Mr. Zollman's students make their own illustrations. They mapped out symbols to describe each person and used their own technique to connect everyone in the story. "Gotta love Zollman's Fun House," senior Ashley Taylor said.

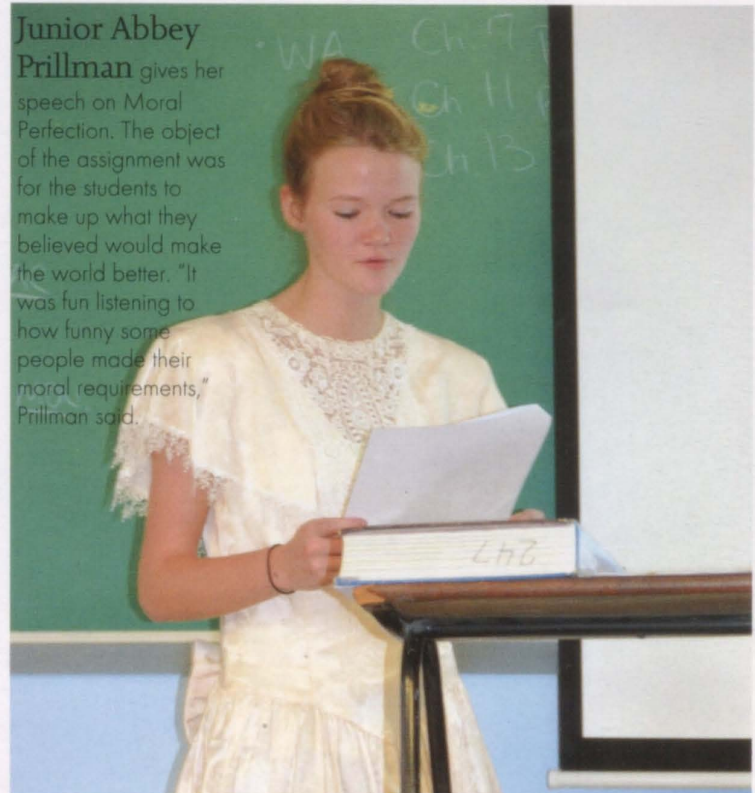

The outcome of the "connecting the characters" projects resemble this. No words were aloud to be used, just symbols. "So drawtastic!" senior Kyla McMurray said.

As a part of getting ready for the ECA, sophomore students play risk as a competition with the other sophomore classes. Each class was assigned to different platoons. "Risk is really based on relying on others," Ethan Gabbard said.

Junior Abbey Prillman gives her speech on Moral Perfection. The object of the assignment was for the students to make up what they believed would make the world better. "It was fun listening to how funny some people made their moral requirements," Prillman said.

Junior Alivia Duerlinger dresses up for participation in her American Studies class. The project was on Moral Perfection. "I liked making up my own creative morals," Duerlinger said.

Acting Out In English

English classes were determined to get students to learn and understand their assignments better. In order to do so, the teachers gave them hands on assignments to get them interacting and focusing on the main point.

In Mrs. Kelly Patel's sophomore class, the students read "Of Mice and Men", a classic tale about two bindlestiffs traveling together in hopes of achieving a life long dream.

The students were given the task of being on a court trial depicting the major plot of the story. Some had to set up a scene defending Lenny and others had to defend George, the two main characters in the novel.

"I think by acting it out we really got to understand where the characters were coming from in their actions," sophomore Sarah Novicki said.

In other classes, such as Jason Zollman's, they drew a picture that symbolized each of the main characters and also showed how each connected in the story. The first story they did this for was Shakesphere's "A Midsummer Nights Dream".

"Drawing pictures made me understand it better because it's all in front of you and easier to put the pieces together," senior Corey Smith said.

Sometimes it was easier for students to better understand the concept of stories better if they interacted with the characters. Having to sit down and connect all of the people helped when it came to reading stories, especially a Shakespeare play. "You've never truly learned anything until you apply it," Mr. Zollman said.

Learning the Lingo

Classes worked to learn the Spanish language throughout years of lessons, immersion, vocabulary, and charts.

"I'm in Spanish II and I think it is challenging but fun. Mrs. Richhart motivates us to do better in her class and won't let us slide by," sophomore Kyle Stead said.

For many it was difficult to learn the language, but for others it came easily. Studying was necessary, but by the end of the year each student came out of the class with more knowledge of the language.

"I do really well, but I don't study very much. It comes easily to me," freshman Savannah Hunter said.

Teachers helped their students understand the language.

"I offer one-on-one help, students can tweet me, or they can come in before or after school. I always ask myself what I can do to help," Mrs. Tamara Skaggs said.

Learning a new language was hard for many to do, but with the help of their teachers, students were able to excel in their Spanish classes.

Junior Ariel Halstead stands with her art projects. The students had to recreate pieces of Spanish art. "It was fun to connect something I enjoy, like art, with the Spanish vocabulary," Halstead said.

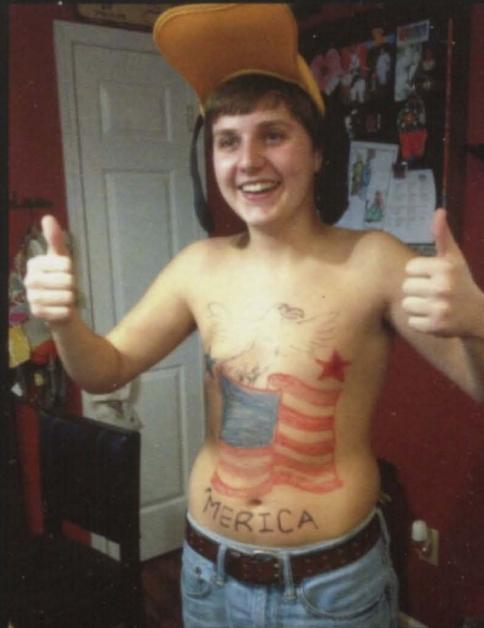

Sarah Shorter presents her piece of art. Spanish III focuses on Spanish culture more than other courses. "It was really difficult, but it was still fun because I was able to use my artwork," Shorter said.

Junior Haley Wyble works with Alivia Duerlinger on their Spanish project. The girls had fun while learning. "Even though some of the food didn't turn out well, I still had fun making the video," Wyble said.

Nolan Christian studies his homework. Christian worked hard in his Spanish I class. "It is a lot of repetition, so I just pay attention," Christian said.

Junior Morganne Belton considers her wording. Her Spanish video helped her learn the vocab. "The project was fun and helped me understand the material better," Belton said.

Junior Jesse Cordray enjoys taking his shirt off for his Spanish video. His group decided that this would help their video. "I had myself tattooed to make the video look legit," Cordray said.

About Spanish Classes?

Junior Paige Baker writes down story ideas during a group discussion in class. In Pulse, the staff referred to this as "brainstorm day." "Pulse is a change from taking yearbook because you get to see your work published monthly, rather than yearly. It's a really fun class to take since the staff is so small and being co-design editor is a great privilege," Baker said.

Senior Michael Passmore plays the role of the world's strongest man in the circus themed Wagon Trails Revue. Passmore used an Arnold Schwarzenegger accent when speaking. "I liked the mustache because it complimented my appearance as the world's strongest man," Passmore said.

Senior Olivia Scully interviews English teacher Ms. Sharon Eickhoff. Scully was interviewing her about her success in being the champion of the basketball game, knockout, during Winter Homecoming. "I've wanted to be in yearbook since elementary school, and it was definitely worth the wait. Yearbook is a great experience and it's cool to think that something I did will be seen in yearbooks by students many decades later," Scully said.

Publication Pursuit

Yearbook, Broadcasting, and Pulse classes were something you didn't want to miss!

The students were able to set up a much more elaborate yearbook. They were able to collaborate using the Wagon Trails Revue along with group exercises.

Broadcast students thrived in the learning environment provided for them. Under the lights and the cue of the teleprompter, the "talent" got to bring the show to life.

"I encourage each member to become the best journalists they can be. I celebrate when students achieve excellence," broadcast teacher Mr. Andrew Marine said.

Students were able to learn broadcasting techniques through immersive training.

"Over the course of my broadcasting career, I would say that I've improved on my cinematography the most," sophomore Ethan Gabbard said.

The creators of Pulse took a lot of time and effort when writing stories and putting together the newspaper. The newspaper was in paper copy as well as online.

"I like being an editor along with my friends. I am really proud of the contribution I've made to keep this paper going," junior Justine Christian said.

Publications classes were a big part of the school year. It kept everyone on the same page.

Junior Morgan Sussman works on her colored pencil assignment during Mr. Farrand's AP Art class. The students were given summer homework to create a sketchbook of several drawings. The students worked in their sketchbooks frequently, and watched their progress grow throughout the year.

The Future Picasso's

A lot of art, unimaginable and impossible to most of us, was featured throughout the year. People never realized what they could create until they actually had done it. Mr. Farrand and Mrs. Evan's classes really helped their students' express themselves through their artwork.

While Mr. Farrand's classes focused on painting and drawing, Mrs. Evan's jewelry and ceramics classes made quite the impression on those who took it.

"I didn't think I would like it [Jewelry], but it actually amazed me to know that I'm capable of making my own jewelry now." junior Brittany Penn said.

Students were always amazed when they walked passed a kid drawing what looked like something from a famous artist, but they responded, "just doodling." Doodling is a good way to practice your skills if you aren't very artistically talented yet.

"Whenever we talked about something uninteresting, I always doodled in my notes. It passed the time and gave my notebook some character," sophomore Caitlin Barkhimer said.

"I continually challenge my students to take the next step. The art room is a foreign environment to many of them so they are pushing themselves by just being there," art teacher Mrs. Diane Evans said, "I encourage all creative thinkers to take art classes, regardless of artistic skills. We try different things each semester to keep things lively and fresh."

Senior Alex Hicks goes into detail on her project in Mrs. Evans' ceramics class. The class mainly focused on making different types of pottery and decorating them. A Bite to Eat

Intro to Culinary Arts was an exciting class for Mrs. Dickerson to teach.

"This class was new for me and the students. It was a learning experience for both of us," Mrs. Dickerson said.

A couple of the students that took this class may have taken it just for the food, but some of the students took this class because they wanted to make a career out of culinary arts.

"I used this class to get better results on my application to college," junior Lydia Faith said.

Intro to Culinary Arts class will be a favorite for years to come because its main focus is food, and students of Mooresville High School like to eat.

by Olivia Scully

Grilled cheese is an easy meal to prepare. It was one of the first things they cooked in this class. "I enjoyed hanging with friends and doing something I enjoy," senior Joshua Killian said.

Pizza is a phenomenon that no one can deny. It was a favorite amongst the things the students made. "My favorite kind of pizza is cheese and pineapple," junior Stephanie Flanary said.

A couple of the students made a chocolate cake for a free day. It is a hard treat to beat. "Tasting new foods and learning about the proper ways to cook was my best experience in this class," junior Lauren Austermiller said.

Senior Lonna Morrow takes pictures of senior Taylor Fiesel. She learned many different things about her camera and photography. "There is so much to learn from Mrs. Scott," Morrow said.

Students take a trip to the Windy City for the day. While in Chicago, they visited the Bean and many other tourist attractions such as Navy Pier. "I liked the trip because I got to spend the day in Chicago with my best friends and take pictures," freshman Abby Wilson said.

Students do a light lab to focus on shutter speed. Many got really good pictures that they loved. "Mrs. Scott is amazing teacher and made my love for photography grow," sophomore Abby Ellinghausen said.

Freshman Olivia Hurt pretends to float away for her classmates to get a good picture. She enjoyed taking forced perspective pictures and being able to be creative. "For an out-of-the box thinker like me, there is no limit to these type of photos," freshman Alysa Carroll said.

Sophomore Halie Gardner uses rule of thirds to capture this picture. Students loved learning about photography and the different rules. "We learned a lot of neat tricks to make our photography even better," junior Abbey Prilliman said.

Say Cheese

Media Arts was not only a class, but an introduction into the world of photography. Mrs. Scott walked her students through the basic fundamentals of taking pictures and taught them how to be creative.

"I love photography because I love to capture moments that you can keep forever. It's like I can stop time for a minute," Mrs. Scott said.

Throughout the semester, students learned how to use rules such as the rule of thirds, fill the frame, leading lines, and forced perspective. This class showed students that it is possible to take a neat picture and be proud of it.

"We were always learning new things and being pushed to be more creative with our photography skills," senior Tori Hoffman said.

Not only did they take pictures, but they also learned how to edit their pictures using Photoshop.

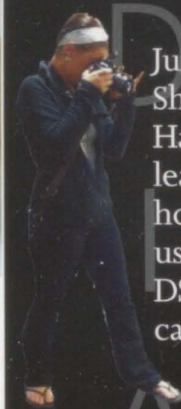

"I loved learning how to make pictures look better by using Photoshop," senior Evan Giles said.

Media Arts was the class to take. It was a class where students still had fun while getting their work done.

Did You Hear Those Speeches?

Mrs. Melanie Kassen was the instructor of both Intro to Speech and Advanced Speech. In the Intro to Speech class Mrs. Kassen taught the five basic speeches which are required to go to college: informative, persuasive, demonstrative, oral interpretation, and debate.

"The Advanced Speech class was a combination of every single class I took in college," Kassen said.

"I liked listening to everyone's perspective on certain issues," junior Rachael Crawford said.

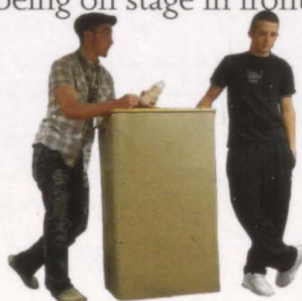

In both classes students were required to deliver a variety of speeches about pressing current issues.

"I liked watching people be nervous on stage," sophomore Jess Koller said.

Though, it wasn't all seriousness all the time: students also had the opportunity to deliver speeches as their favorite fairy tale character and discuss events that interested them.

"I enjoyed watching kids go from being terrified on stage to being pretty good at being on stage in front of an audience," Kassen said.

Mrs. Claus tries to keep the peace after an impostor Santa showed up at the North Pole. The Gingerbread Man and Little Red Riding Hood had to find the real Santa. "Being on stage is my favorite thing," Kayla Burgess said.

Crazy Christmas

Mrs. Melanie Kassen's Theatre Arts Classes put on Christmas plays to get everyone in the Christmas spirit. The plays are written by students that took Advanced Theatre Arts the prior year in the Spring.

The productions were "The Insane Christmas," by Brittany Seals, and "The Cookie Thief," by Austin Webster and Quinn Cavin.

"The plays were very well written and my students did a great job acting," said Mrs. Melanie Kassen. "It helps kids get a better understanding of what all it takes to put on a production."

Everyone in the class participated in the show in some way, whether it was as a stage hand or an actor.

"Learning the lines is the easiest part of the play, and after reading them for a while they are memorized," said freshman Avery Selch.

"The entire play was a lot of fun," freshman Beth Crail said.

Yoga could improve flexibility and balance, but also was an extremely helpful way to relieve stress. Students who took it in the morning got a jump start to their day as they became energized from their workout.

"Yoga is a great way to exercise because there are so many ways to get a good workout", yoga teacher Ms. Brittany Strohmeier said.

For people who either wanted to tone up or bulk up, APC was a class to take. Students in this class got the opportunity to learn several different ways to lift and improve their strength.

"I like APC because I like getting big," Freshmen Isaiah Humble said.

Students who took health and wellness classes had the opportunity to use what they learned to be healthy through high school and beyond.

Junior Drew Postlewaite is displaying his form during a set of pull ups. He liked being able to build his strength up during APC for wrestling. "I love squats and curls because that's what's needed when I'm wrestling," Postlewait said.

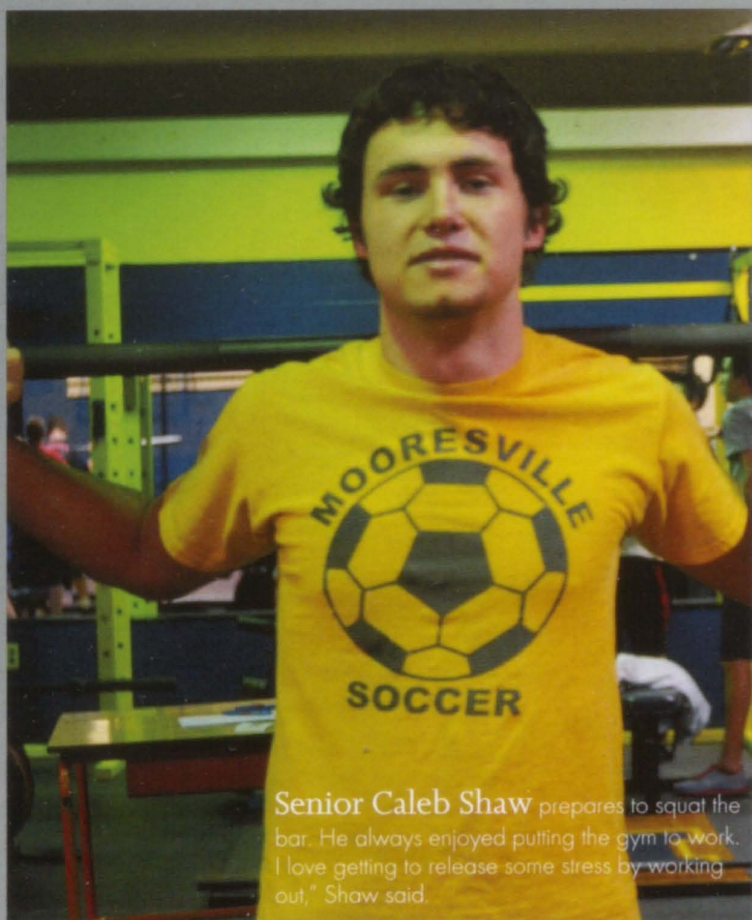

Junior Allie Taylor stretches at the start of class. She did light stretches to get warmed up every day. "Yoga is an excellent way to start off your morning with meditation and relaxation," Taylor said.

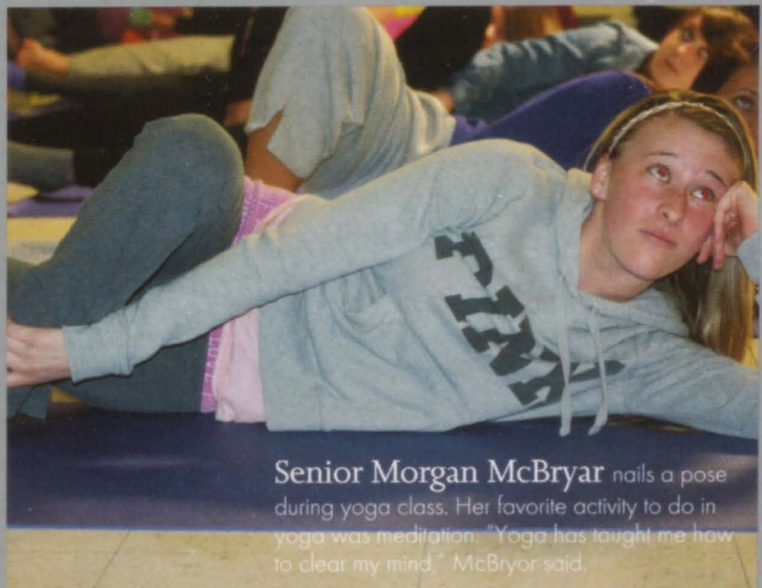

Senior Jordan Ooley focuses as he reps pull ups. He had just begun his first set. "Doing a Workout is tough, but there is a certain gratification about completing one," Ooley said.

Junior Tristan Becker is about to power clean the bar. He always focused before he performed his lifts. "My favorite thing about APC is the adrenaline rush and the feeling of accomplishment," Becker said.

About construction classes and Half Day Programs?

Building a Future

For the students at MHS who aspired to pursue a career in assembling and building, construction was the class to take.

Mrs. Lindy Scott put her classes through several activities that taught them how to form together different types of structures. Some projects included balsa bridges and skyscrapers. Through their experiences, they acquired skill and ability that they could carry with them after high school.

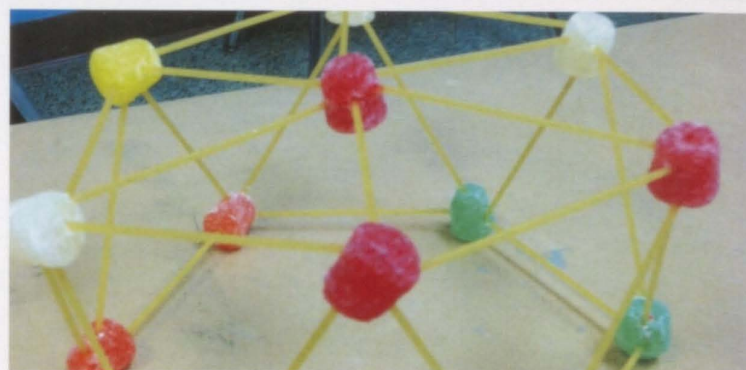

"After taking construction, I am now a handy civilian," junior Ian Milligan said.

An example of one project Mrs. Scott had her class do was when they built Geodesic Dome.

Senior Brent McCreary and sophomore Michael Andersen work together to make a Geodesic Dome. They made it by taping triangles from cereal boxes together. "I learned that anything is possible with enough tape and cardboard," McCreary said.

Junior Braxton Haas shows off his geodesic dome. He made this out of gumdrops and spaghetti noodles. "I didn't think I could make something like this out of candy," Haas said.

The students had to form a miniature structure of an actual building that requires triangular shaped pieces to make a dome once they were placed together.

"In order to build the Geodesic Dome, we had to cut out a bunch of triangles and use them to make a truss system for a dome," sophomore Michael Andersen said.

The construction classes helped set students up for future careers. These careers included general contractors, architects, construction worker, and even civil engineering.

"These classes benefited students because they learned hands-on skills that students will carry on and use in the future," Mrs. Lindy Scott said.

by Michael Passmore

Freshman Logan Smith works on his project for Mrs. Scott's class. Smith made an octagon by using cut up triangles. "We have been taught how to make large structures out of smaller parts," Smith said

Junior Kolin Rottner helps build a house. He built homes while at the career center. "I enjoy being able to work on a project that I can one day drive by and say I helped build that," Rottner said.

The Working Class

While in school, there were opportunities for students to extend knowledge through hands on experience.

At Ben Davis classes were taken that were not offered in Mooresville High School. therefore, opened up opportunities in areas of study that could be obtained at Mooresville. The classes taken at the Area 31 Career Center helped students in pursuing a certain field. Half the day was spent at school and the other half would be spent at Ben Davis.

"The Area 31 Career Center gives insight to the career you want to do in the future," junior Stefan Turpen said.

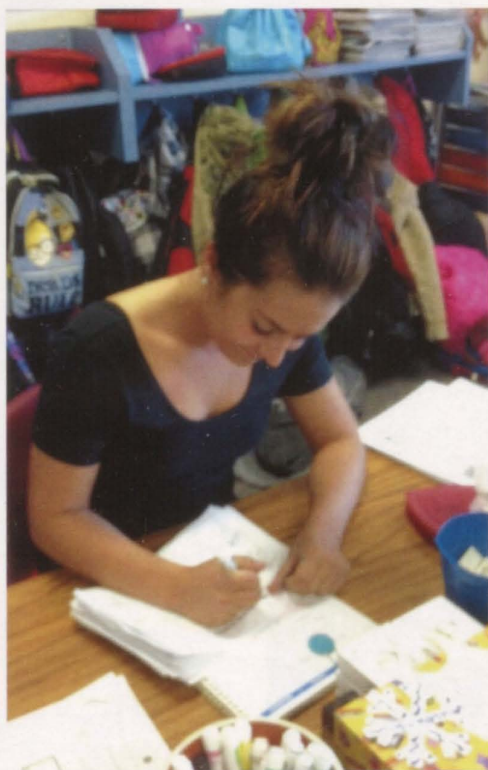

Students also left school for half days and helped out teachers at other schools. Cadets helped teachers by setting up the classroom. Cadets helped the teacher set out supplies, grade papers, and interact with the younger students. If a student needed help while working on the activity, cadets would go over to the student in need, and help them out.

The Interdisciplinary Cooperative Education program, known as ICE, was a class for juniors and seniors. The program was funded by the state and students could earn up to three credits. One credit was a classroom portion and two outside of the classroom. Students had to apply with the guidance department and prove their employment to be in the program.

"This class helps students build resumes, and learn about how businesses run," Mrs. Dana Dillman said.

by Nik Brunk

Senior Paige Martin grades papers at North Madison Elementary School. Martin helped out with Mrs. Stinson's first grade class. "Cadet teaching was a great experience," Martin said.

Senior Jocelyn Green points out certain words in a Northwood Elementary School classroom. The activity was to write down "popcorn words." "I chose to cadet teach to better prepare me for my future career of pediatric nursing," Green said.

During every summer evening, the band and guard practiced hard during the grueling drought on their show "Green with Envy."

"This season was full of fun, laughter, and excitement. As the season went on, the bonds had gotten stronger and it was hard to wave it goodbye," sophomore Ricky Yutmeyer said.

The storyline to the show was a love story. Two color guard members fought for the love of soloist Austin Aichinger.

"I look forward to marching band because when I get to the school for practice, I look around and see not my friends but my family," junior Brandon Wagoner said.

"It's rewarding to see students and parents work so hard all summer to be competitive and represent our school and community with pride," band director Jason Freeman said.

Senior Austin Aichinger plays his alto saxophone in front of the crowd during the day show at state fair in the band's show "Green With Envy." He wore a green plume because he was the soloist; therefore, performed solo three times throughout the show. "It was fun to be the soloist but a lot of pressure to be the center of attention in this year's show. I've marched for five years and created many memories," Aichinger said.

Freshman Duncan Millikan marches alongside junior Neal Jeffers during his second year in marching band. He was eager to start the summer with the new music score, Virus. "I loved hanging out with my friends everyday during the summer. We made a lot of good memories this summer," Millikan said.

Sophomores Sierra Lowe and Kellie Schlangen wait in transit with anticipation before performing their last show. They have marched for three years and have been best friends ever since. "The past three years I've marched, the hardest thing I have ever had to do is say goodbye to the seniors year after year," Shlangen said.

The Pioneer Regiment plays the day show with hopes held high. They advanced to the night show and placed 15th out of 46 bands. "My favorite part about marching band has been the feeling of family between all of the members," senior Ashley Miley said.

Junior Nick Allman is the first male winter guard and color guard member in Mooresville high school history...

Freshman Kaitlin Darlington is now throwing quads after just her first year of spinning weapons...

Junior Mackensie Letourneau's favorite item to use is the saber because she likes the challenge...

Your Canvas Within

Mooresville's winter guard started out the season with second place and gold. They kept strong and scored high scores for the duration of the season.

"I really enjoyed performing the show this year," sophomore Tristan Tate said.

The show "Your Canvas Within," was all about being able to show your true colors.

"There's nothing that makes you feel more proud of what you do than when the audience goes crazy over you," junior Cheyenne Lowe said.

In the performance, each member had a different color flag that went along with the music lyrics.

"They work extremely hard to gain recognition, not only within their 'sport of the arts,' but also within their own high school and Mooresville as a whole," guard instructor Christopher Sparks said.

by Olivia Ferrill

Freshman Natalie Bell completes a catch of her rifle after tossing it. To have good facial expressions was a major part of the show. "I love the the flag, saber, and dance features we do in the show. I've improved on my dance, rifle, and saber techniques which is really exciting for me," Bell said.

Mooresville winter guard shows its "true colors within" at the end of the show. The colors on their chest represented the colors of their hearts and also matched their flags. "The new coaches brought us together and taught us the importance of self confidence. I think we all feel a lot more confident in ourselves and in our performance, I know I do at least," sophomore Nicole Gilmer said.

Sophomore Amber Spurlock is smiling proudly in the middle of a spin. She had the orange flag because her "heart" was the color orange. "This year we have a step team feature where we add a little more hip-hop moves during the show. It let's me be free and have fun," Spurlock said.

The winter guard members raise their flags in mid-routine. As a team, the guard improved immensely from past years. "My favorite part of the show is the rifle/flag feature because I'm using the rifle and it's something I've always loved," sophomore Lynzee Smith said.

Sophomore Peyton Lindley plays the same piece from Solo and Ensemble at Italian Fest. She liked playing at the Solo and Ensemble Competition. "My group was sure we were getting silver, but we ended up with a gold rating," Lindley said.

Senior Peter Thiede takes a break from playing during Wagon Trails Revue. The highlight of his senior year was the Ireland trip. "I play the cello because it's what my sister did and it's the absolute best instrument," Thiede said.

Sophomore David Lawson waits for Mrs. Fyffe to begin conducting the song. He played the cello in the orchestra. "Playing the cello is fun and it puts me in a happy place. I really like performing in front of an audience, too," Lawson said.

Playing Together

The Mooresville High School Orchestra had a very adventurous and achievement-filled year.

The orchestra began the year by planning an eventful Spring Break trip to Ireland. Every few years, Mrs. Sheryl Fyffe takes a group of orchestra students on a trip to learn more about different styles of orchestra music.

"It was a great cultural experience to learn about the people and the land," Mrs. Fyffe said.

The orchestra also had a very successful competitive season. The entire high school orchestra went to Shelbyville, Indiana for the annual ISSMA concert. They came home with a gold medal, outstanding scores, and great responses from the judges.

Kaitlyn Lowe went to ISSMA for a solo performance and came home with a gold medal. She also earned second place in the National Federation of Music Club and the University of Indianapolis.

"I think orchestra is a very fun extracurricular activity and a great way to meet my goals for my future," Lowe said.

The Viola Trio also went to ISSMA for a small ensemble performance and came home with a gold medal as well.

"I present new challenges each year, and I feel they accept each challenge and grow to play better and become a very close orchestra," Fyffe said.

by Jessica Yeoman

Junior Kaitlyn Lowe plays a solo piece for the audience at Italian Fest. She played the same piece that she played in the ISSMA Competition. "I am proud that I made it that far and I am still striving to improve," Lowe said.

Juniors
Catherine Hagee and Michelle Majeski take a picture on a bridge in front of the water. They enjoyed spending time with their families and seeing the sights. "I loved spending time with my dad and seeing him have such a great time!" Hagee said.

I Got the Music in Me

It was the last show choir competition of the year. Spotlighters were in the warm up room while Finesse was finding out if they made finals, when suddenly director Jason Damron stopped playing the piano.

"Finesse made finals!" Mr. Damron said. "I was wondering why my phone kept going off."

The room filled with excitement for Finesse when hearing that they had made finals for the first time in six or so years. The news motivated the Spotlighters to work even harder for a chance to be in finals as well.

"When we were sitting in the auditorium, we had heard the first two names announced and we were so nervous and praying like crazy. We were screaming and felt so blessed to be breaking the six year streak of Finesse not being in finals. We knew that we gave it our all, and instead of being told we had potential, we conquered it," junior Jasmine Pygman said.

Spotlighters were the last group to perform before the mixed choir finalists were announced. Right after their performance they headed to the gym to see if they did as well as they felt and if they received a spot to perform again in finals.

"We were so pumped to perform in finals for our last show of the season. We had nothing to lose so we just made sure we had the show of our lives. It was awesome," senior Kayla Storie said.

At the final awards, Finesse received a second runner up trophy out of the top three, and Spotlighters received third runner up out of five. They were happy that the season ended on a good note.

by Tara Davis and Rachel Wathen

The Spotlighter boys sing a song about being in love with a McDonald's girl. They worked hard to make it look like were desperately in love. "It's nice to hear the reaction from the girls in the audience," junior Joe Siefker said.

Olivia Carlton performs as a freshman in Finesse. She enjoyed the opportunity to truly shine. "It's been such an honor getting to be a freshman in Finesse," Carlton said. "Everyone was welcoming and it felt like where I was supposed to be."

Senior Laurel

Gregory is surprised by her boyfriend and choir members on her birthday. It was after the final performance at Spotlighter Invitational. "It was probably one of the most special nights of my life because of the effort that everyone put into making me feel so special. Austin was just the icing on top of the cake," Gregory said.

Sophomore Taylor Jannek points to the audience while performing during the Finesse opener. She loved the feeling of performing. "It was great to grow musically and to meet and become friends with so many talented people," Jannek said.

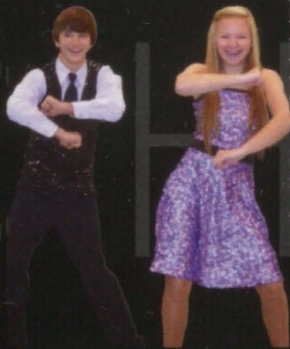

Sophomore Carson Mulvehill sings a solo in the quartet during the Finesse show. When she came out the crowd would always scream with excitement. "It was such a privilege having my very first solo in Finesse, as well as getting to perform with three other talented ladies," Mulvehill said.

Junior Jacob Tooley is in shock as his partner junior Ariel Halstead flips his head to stare at her. Tooley had a priceless expression during the performance. "It was one of the funniest parts of the show," Tooley said. It gave me a chance to be the nerd I really am."

Sophomore Ricky Yutmeyer sings with his choir. He enjoyed Spring Spectacular and dressing up. "We were told to dress nicely so I decided to wear a black shirt, with my blue bow tie, and music note suspenders to stick out," Yutmeyer said.

Freshman Reagan Roberson stands tall next to her older sister Rileigh at the Spring Spectacular performance. Reagan participated in two choirs throughout her freshman year. "Being in choir has been a fun experience," Roberson said, "I plan to follow in my sister's footsteps in choir."

Makin' Music

Mr. Jason Damron and the choirs had a very successful year. They had many great achievements and phenomenal performances.

For the first time in Mooresville High School history, the Madrigals concert choir made it all the way to the ISSMA state finals. They came home with a gold rating and fifteenth place in the state.

"It was such a feeling of accomplishment to see how much our hard work had paid off," Damron said.

ISSMA state finals was on May 4, which was also the same day as prom. Because Madrigals performed at 4:28 p.m., they were rushed to get ready for prom. Most of the girls went to state finals with their hair and makeup ready for prom.

"It was really stressful to prepare for both events, but at the same time it was exciting," senior Olivia Meek said.

Sensations, the all girls concert choir, also had an outstanding year as well. They went to ISSMA qualifications and came back home with a gold rating.

"I really enjoy Sensations because so many girls have moved up and it's so awesome to watch them improve," junior Hanna Cassidy said.

Overall, the choirs worked hard in order to bring their best performances throughout the year. Each choir put forth different types of effort in order to succeed.

by Jessica Yeoman

Senior Harrison Schafer plays the role of the king at the Madrigals Dinner. They played Royal Squares in which each member from the skit is asked a question from a person in the audience. "It was a magical time and I loved every minute of it," Schafer said.

The band laughed after senior Freddie Basso would say "BLUUUE" after every rehearsal of the school fight song, "Washington and Lee."

"I love playing in pep band! It's all peppy and stuff," Basso said.

The members showed off their blue and gold colors on their pep band shirts. They were always ready to support Mooresville's basketball teams and pump up the crowd. As the band took route down the school hallways with their stands and pep band folders in hand, they smelled the scent of the buttery, salty popcorn being made at the concession stand. The band heard the audience applauding as the previous game finished.

The band started to set up for pre-game when drum major senior Megan Passey raised her hands and said "Instruments up! Let's play Illinois Loyalty." The crowd stood and clapped along to the beat of the school song while the cheerleaders chanted out the lyrics. The band played many songs until band director Jason Freeman yelled "Third quarter break," which was when the band dispersed to get snacks and relax during third quarter. The pep band traveled to Terre Haute South twice for the girls' basketball team.

The jazz band plays the song "In the Mood" for Wagon Trails. Jazz band played during the fall and winter only. "I love jazz band because it's easier to get things done in smaller ensembles. When tasks are accomplished faster, it leaves more time for us to joke around and have fun," senior Hannah Jones said.

Sophomore Ethan Gabbard's favorite instrument to play is guitar because of its "infinite possibilities..."

Senior Ally Phillips' favorite part of band is the standard of perfection. She has never forgotten the words "pour your milk with greatness" from her marching band drill instructor, Mo Barkley...

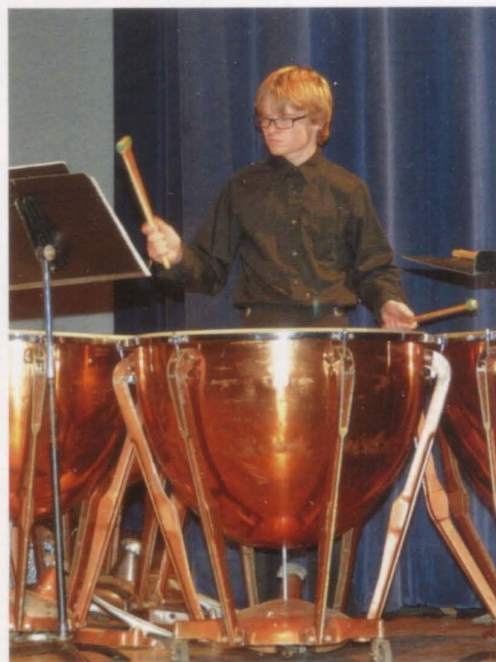

Freshman Caleb Pepple can play the electric bass guitar and the electric guitar...

The pep band plays "The Vamp" under the direction of senior Austin Aichinger. Every member had to memorize the notes and choreography because there were none written for it. "I enjoy getting to go to all the games and cheering our basketball teams on," senior Jon Stapert said.

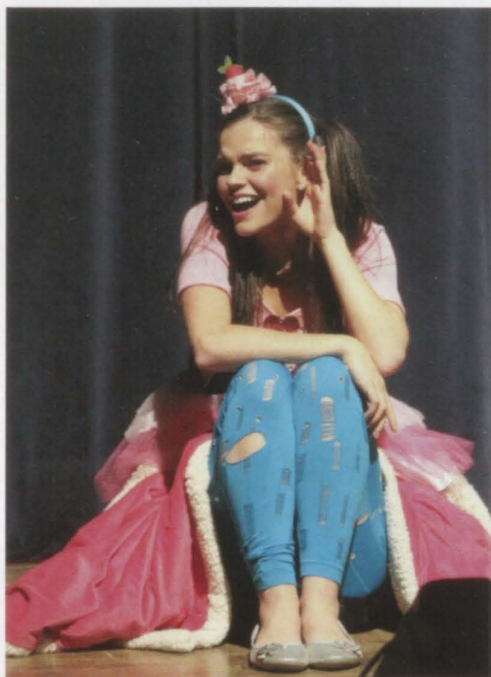

Junior Taylor Hernly plays the timpani for performance. The percussion ensemble won gold at solo and ensemble. "Getting gold was a big achievement for me. I've gotten gold three years in a row now, and I love showing off what my instructors worked so hard to teach me for all of these years," Hernly said.

The concert band stands for applause after performing their three concert pieces. They performed in Shelbyville for ISSMA in April and received a gold for sight reading and a gold for their three concert pieces. "I like playing 'On Wings of Magic.' It's upbeat and fun," freshman Beth Crail said.

performs in her contortionist act. As she waited for a response from the audience, she motioned to them for dramatic effect. "Being able to introduce the next performance in my act and it all fitting together is great," Norton said.

The girls in Sensations prepare to sing their first song of the season. The girls gave it all they had that night. "I really enjoyed singing in front of everyone," sophomore Justine Jennings said. "It was a lot of fun."

The Show Goes On

Each year Mooresville High School holds the Wagon Trails Revue as a fundraiser for the yearbook. Wagon Trails has performances by the students in Spads, Finesse, Millenium, and Sensations.

Students in Concert Band, Jazz Ensemble, Symphony Orchestra, Chamber Orchestra, and Full Orchestra also performed that night. For the two nights that the show went on, there was a total of $8,538 made in ticket sales.

"Being a part of Millenium gives me the chance to be in a school activity and hang out with a lot of my friends. I love it," Jess Yeoman said.

The members of the yearbook staff also had the role of being in skits in between each of the musical performing groups. This years theme for the skits was "The Greatest Wagon Trails Revue on Earth."

"My favorite part was doing the funny things and making people laugh," senior Michael Passmore said.

The staff participated in acts such as "The Roaring Lion", in which the lion learned to roar. The mimes, clowns, bearded lady, and world's strongest man also had appearances in the show.

"I love being able to see the audience laugh and cheer for the students on stage. These kids work so hard to create an enjoyable show, and it's great to see their hard work pay off," yearbook instructor Mrs. Ada Clark said.

The clowns prepare to set off the cannon. A clown was shot out of it into the audience. "It was funny watching the reaction of the crowd when the inflatable clown was shot out," junior Maddy Cooper said.

Junior Lindsay Wittell was a lion that couldn't roar...

Senior David Trusty had a solo during the closer of the Spotlighter's performance...

TRAILS

Freshman Corey Spaulding

interrupts the show to talk to his grandpa, a.k.a. Austin Webster. Corey played a seven year old kid named Timmy, who constantly interrupted the actors during rehearsal. "I enjoyed playing the role of Timmy. He was funny and kinda immature, like myself," Spaulding said.

Play On!

"Play on" was a play within a play. Most of the characters had two roles: their role in the play within the play, and their role in the actual play. Confused yet? Well, the actors were confused too, starting out.

The play consisted of three acts. The first act was a normal rehearsal of the play; something you might see if you sat in during a rehearsal of a production.

The second act was a dress rehearsal of the play within the play. The cast was surprised when Phyllis, the play-write, had shown up to rehearsal with three new scenes.

"My character was fun to bring to life," sophomore Alyson LaPlante said.

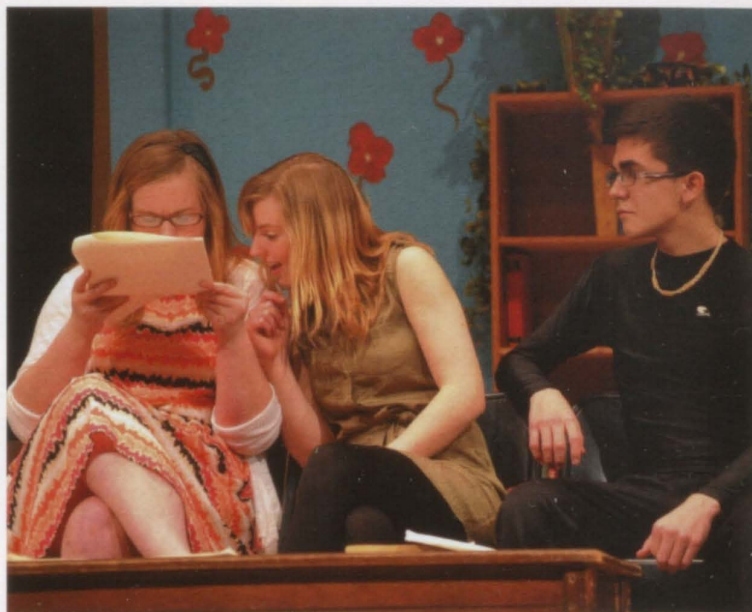

The final act was the actual play within the play, and it was a disaster. The cast had gotten stage fright and said some crazy lines. Also, two characters came onto the stage drunk.

"It was easily the most fun I've had with a play," sophomore Quinn Cavin said.

The play was a hilarious comedy. The entire cast and stage crew had a great time.

by Hannah Shelton

The actors look over the new scripts that Phyllis, the play-write, had brought them two days before opening night. Phyllis completely changed the plot of her play. "I really loved having one of the lead roles my first time acting," sophomore Ricky Yutmeyer said.

and junior Ariel Halstead, a.k.a. Penny and Aggy, follow script as the actors continue to make fools of themselves. The play was very comical. "The time commitment was worth the connection I made with the fantastic people involved," Halstead said.

The cast of the musical join together and sing their hearts out in one last performance. The show went off without a hitch. "I played 'Moon Face Martin. I loved singing 'tweet-tweet' like a blue bird," senior Ryan Coleman said.

Senior David Trusty disguises himself as a sailor. He was trying to hide from the captain while also trying to impress Hope Harcourt, played by sophomore Abby Crump. "The best part of being a sailor was learning the Charleston," junior Cody Rusher said.

Junior Jackie Harris converses with her daughter and future son-in-law about their engagement. She was more excited than the couple was about the wedding. "The musical was the most fun I have had in a very long time," Harris said.

Anything Goes

"Most people pick the musical based on the performers they'll have," Mr. Jason Damron said. "I also liked the music from it."

"Anything Goes" was a comedic musical set on a cruise ship. It was about a man, Billy Crocker, who ran into his past love, Hope Harcourt, when she was sailing to get married.

He ended up befriending a robber, Moon Face Martin, who gave him the passport of the number one wanted con man. So Billy, played by David Trusty, had to disguise himself to hid from the captain of the ship. The whole time that was happening he was also trying to win back his love's heart. He tried to distract her fiancé by having Reno Sweeney, played by Becca Ford, get him to fall in love with her.

Eventually Moon Face Martin, acted by Ryan Coleman, and Billy were thrown into jail, but were trying to escape before Hope got married.

"When we were in jail I sang the song 'Be Like The Blue Bird'," Ryan Coleman said.

The play ended with Billy escaping just in time to stop the wedding. Reno ended up marrying Evelyn Oakleigh, Hope's fiancé, played by Brendan Rollin, and Hope and Billy got married.

"I thought it was the perfect end to the musical," Crump said.

In Memoriam David Kevin Conklin

October 19, 1994 - August 28, 2012

Angel From Above

by David Kevin Conklin

They say in heaven an Angel is no one in particular, but if you were an angel in heaven you would stick out the most.

They say an angel has a smile that lights up the whole west coast. So, you have all the reason to boast.

They say an angel has the softest touch. They say their brightness is far too much.

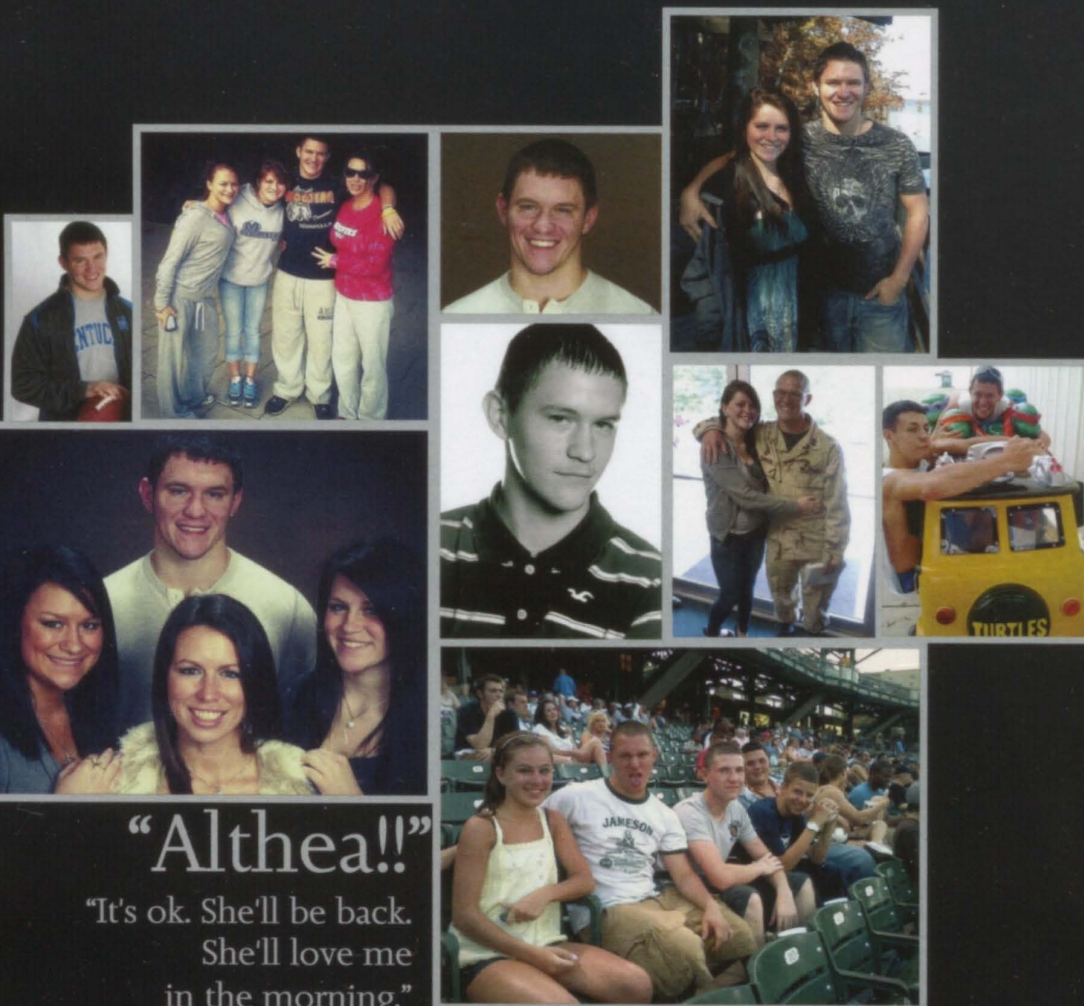

They say, once you fall in love with an angel, that your heart beats so hard you feel it in your ankles.

They say an angel's love is sweeter than sprinkles. They say that an angel pushes away all of your stress and you'll have no wrinkles.

They say I make them jealous. They wonder how someone so rebellious could be so overzealous. But what they don't understand is how to live.

I am so lucky you know how to live. I am so lucky that you know how to give. You give me your love which is exactly why I say you're an angel sent from above.

It's like you soared from heaven as a gorgeous turtle dove.

"Althea!!"

"It's ok. She'll be back.
She'll love me
in the morning."
(in his Italian accent.)

A MESSAGE FROM THE FAMILY OF DAVID KEVIN CONKLIN

Kevin had a million dollar smile. He was the type that loved that smile in return. Even if it meant making you mad to get you to do so. He loved his friends and family and always stood up for them. Kevin touched the hearts and lives of many in his short stay here with us. Adopting everyone & them he in return. His heart was as big as the universe.

Our time here is precious, so remember to love the ones you are with, laugh more than you should, guard your hearts and tame your tongues.

The next time a negative thought, any negative thought, comes across your mind, give it to God before you give it power with your words or actions.

You Are Not Alone. There will ALWAYS be someone that loves you, needs you, appreciates you and is proud of you - and - if you can't think of anyone, call us.

Life is beautiful! It is AMAZING! It is about success. Success is about overcoming challenges. Challenge is difficult. Sometimes we think SO Big, we forget about the little successes. Once in a while, it is okay to have your big success simply be to make it through another day. Take time to congratulate yourself for the small things. Pat yourself on the back and be proud. You did it, and remember, you Always can.

CLASS OF 2013 YOU ROCK!!!! Now show 'em what you're made of, PIONEER PRIDE and we will always have our stories and grand memories with many, many more to come and our guardian angel. Thank You, Mooresville.

COLOPHON

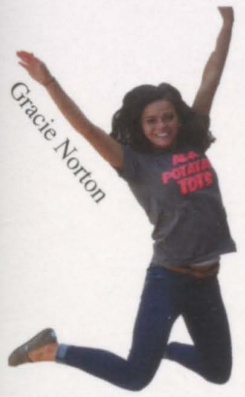

The 2013 Wagon Trails Yearbook, Volume 68, was put together by a student staff and printed by Herff Jones Publishing Company at its facility at 2424 Midpoint Drive in Edwardsville, Kansas. This was our fifth All-Color Wagon Trails Yearbook. The publishing consultant was Cathy Wines, and the customer service representative was Debbie Thomas.

The book was created using the Adobe Master Collection and Herff Jones Internet software eDesign. Students were able to work online and from home to get their pages completed.

The 2013 Wagon Trails Yearbook Staff would like to thank: Cathy Wines, Debbie Thomas, Andy Marine, Susan Haynes, Rick Briar, Peggie Gorman, Kathy Johnson, Becky Bischoff, Marsha Green, Karen Cochran, Dawn Blake, Lisa Gobel, Chuck Muston, Jennifer Perkins, and Tim VanWanzele. This yearbook staff would also like to thank the following people for contributing photos used in the book: Dr. Phil Wright, Lindy Scott, Suni Johnson, Pete Majeski, Charlotte Ferrill and Kelly Patel. With their much appreciated assistance with the annual variety show, Wagon Trails Revue, we would like to thank Mrs. Sheryl Fyffe, Mr. Jason Damron, Mr. Jerry Weber, and Mr. Jason Freeman.

NOW YOU'VE HEARD...

Mr. Muston waves good-bye to students. This was a very emotional day for everyone. "We are grateful for Mr. Muston's dedication to MHS staff and students and we wish him the best of luck in everything he does," Mrs. Jennifer Perkins said.

Varsity players latch fingers as the opposing team is being announced. The girls both felt nervous for the first game of the season. "It was a long season but we always came together as a team when it mattered the most," sophomore Hannah Lindsay said.

AP Physics students test their projects. They built trebuchet launchers. "It was fun building even though we weren't sure how it was going to work. In the end we were successful and it was neat watching everyone launch the objects," junior Morgan Smalling said.

Mum's The Word

When students heard that they had to come in to school in early August, they thought they'd heard enough about change. Little did they know, as the year progressed, what they'd hear would have more and more of an impact.

In November, they heard that long-time Principal Chuck Muston would retire at the semester. As they made schedules for 2013-2014, students learned about the "Success Period", how they will only have six classes and that their new principal's name was Mr. Brain Disney.

Just when they thought they'd heard it all, a bathroom caught on fire, causing smoke damage that canceled school and required all upstairs classes to be moved for days. All this made students and staff members wonder... What will we hear next?

by Maddy Cooper

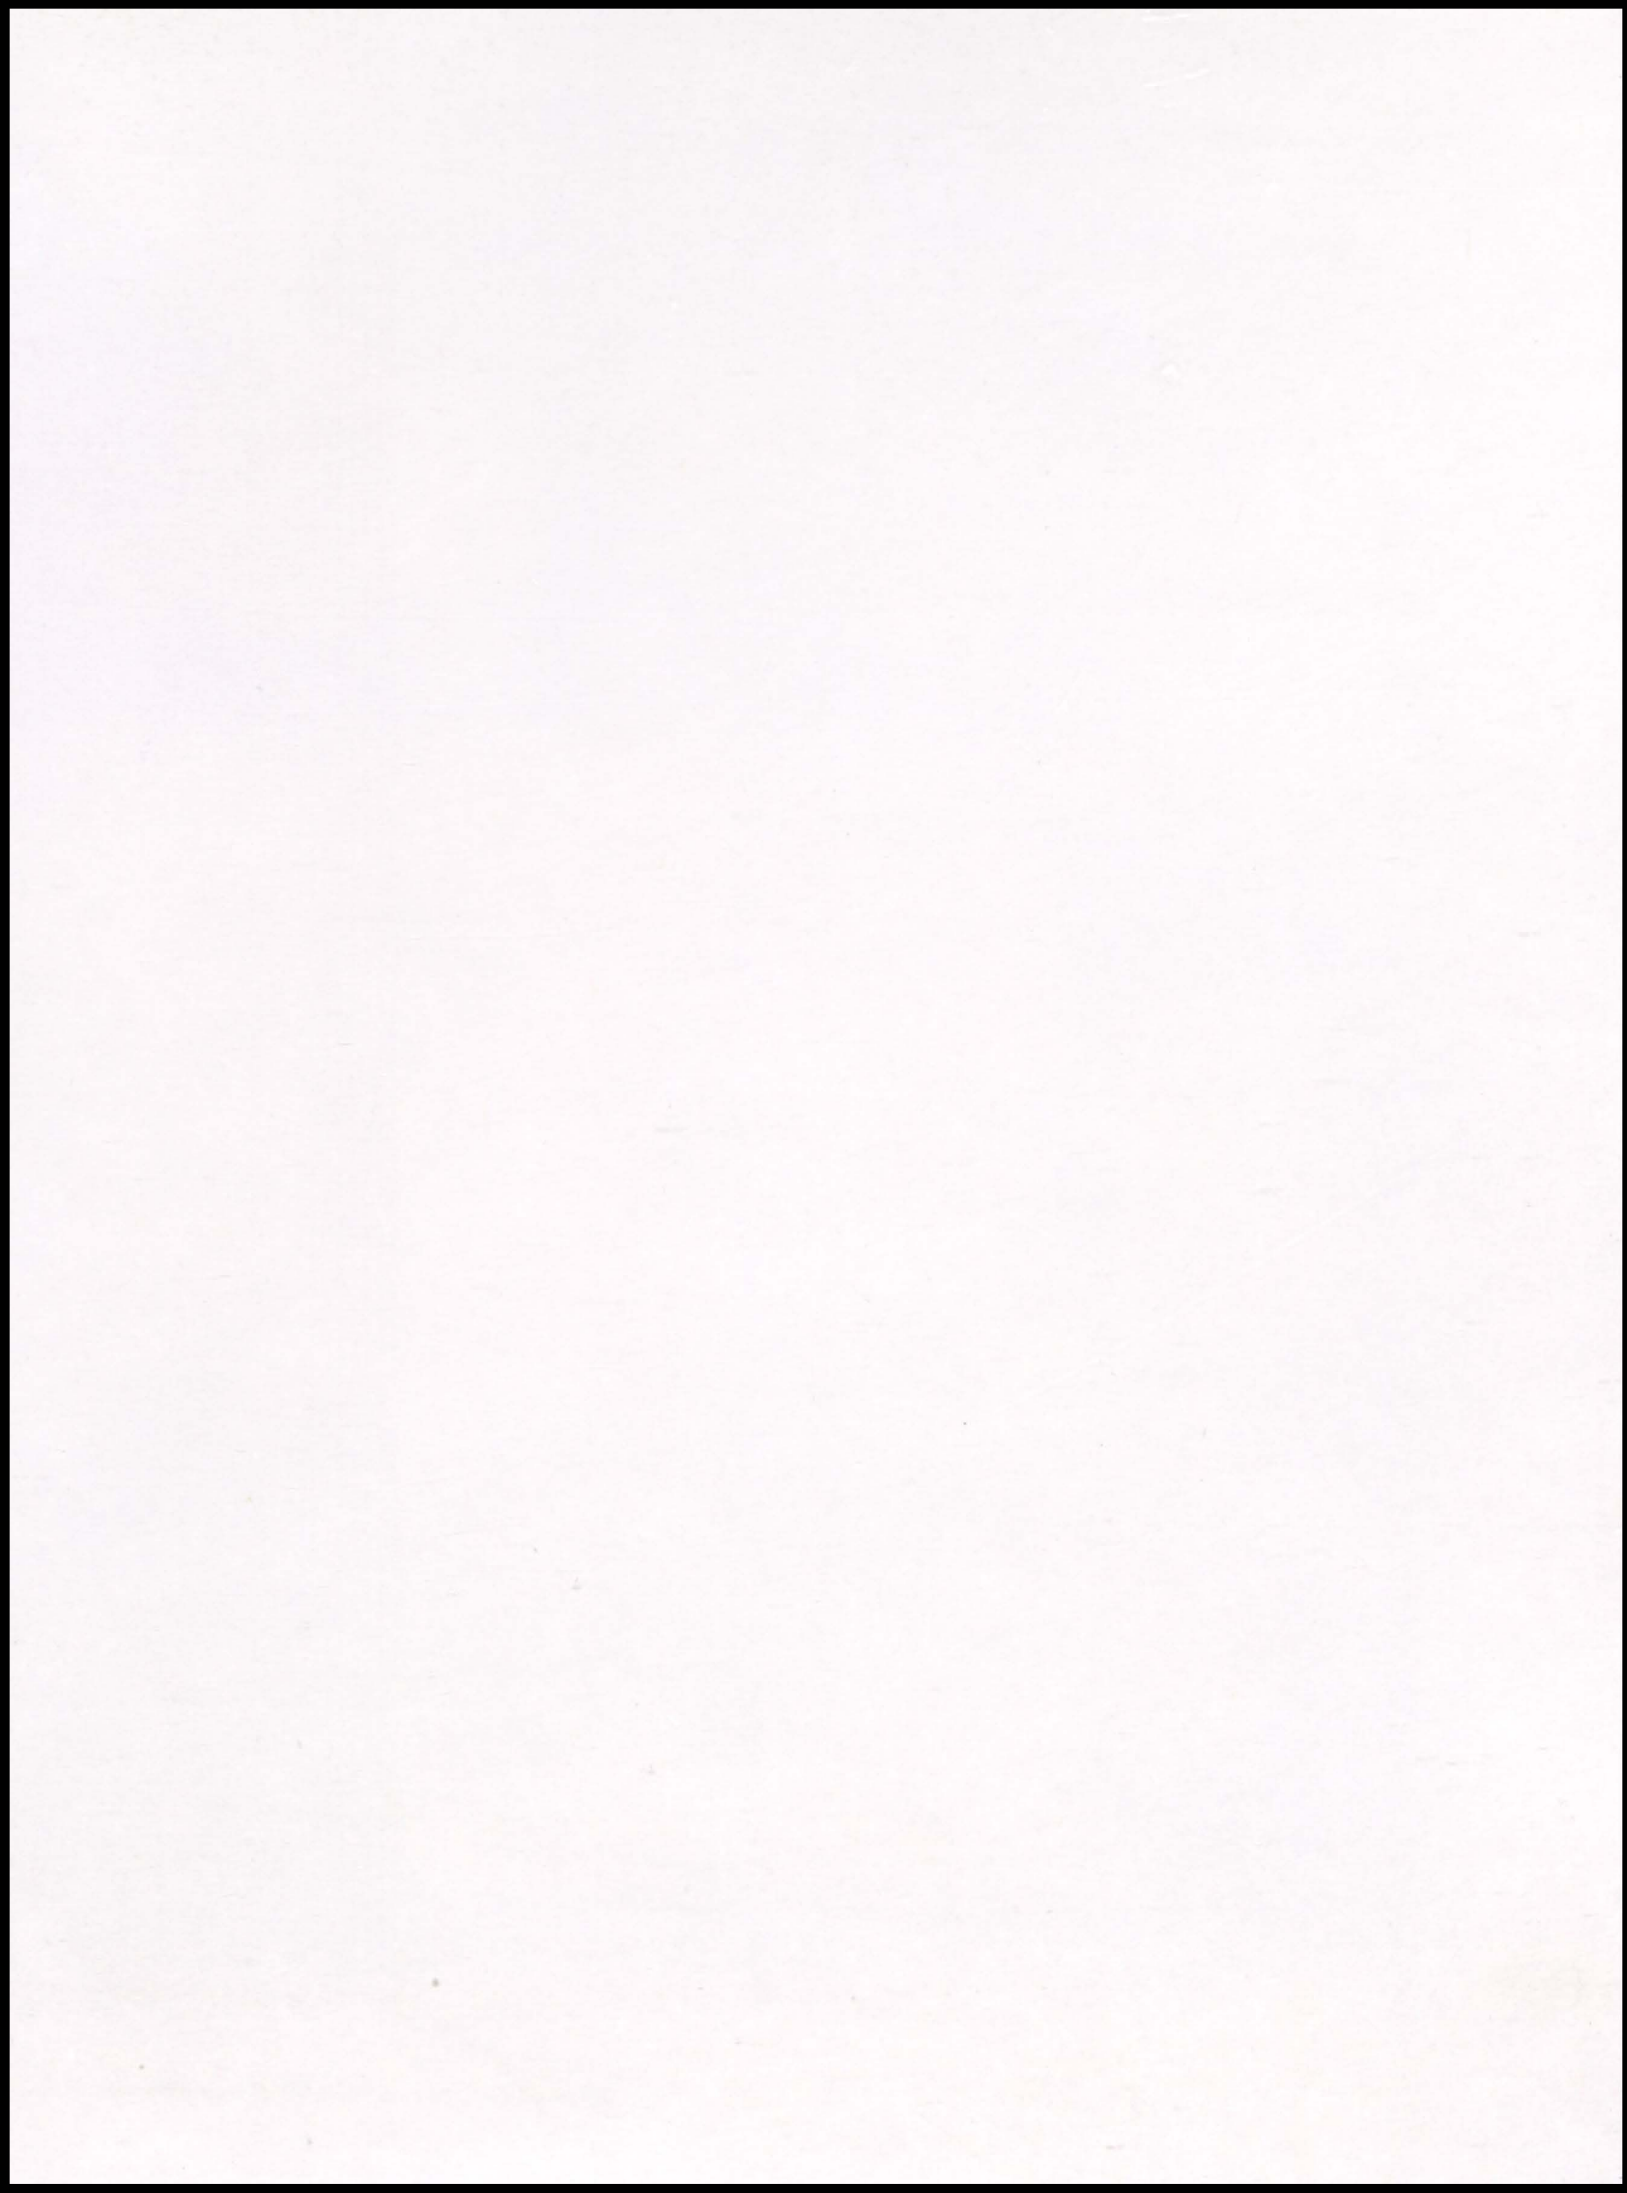

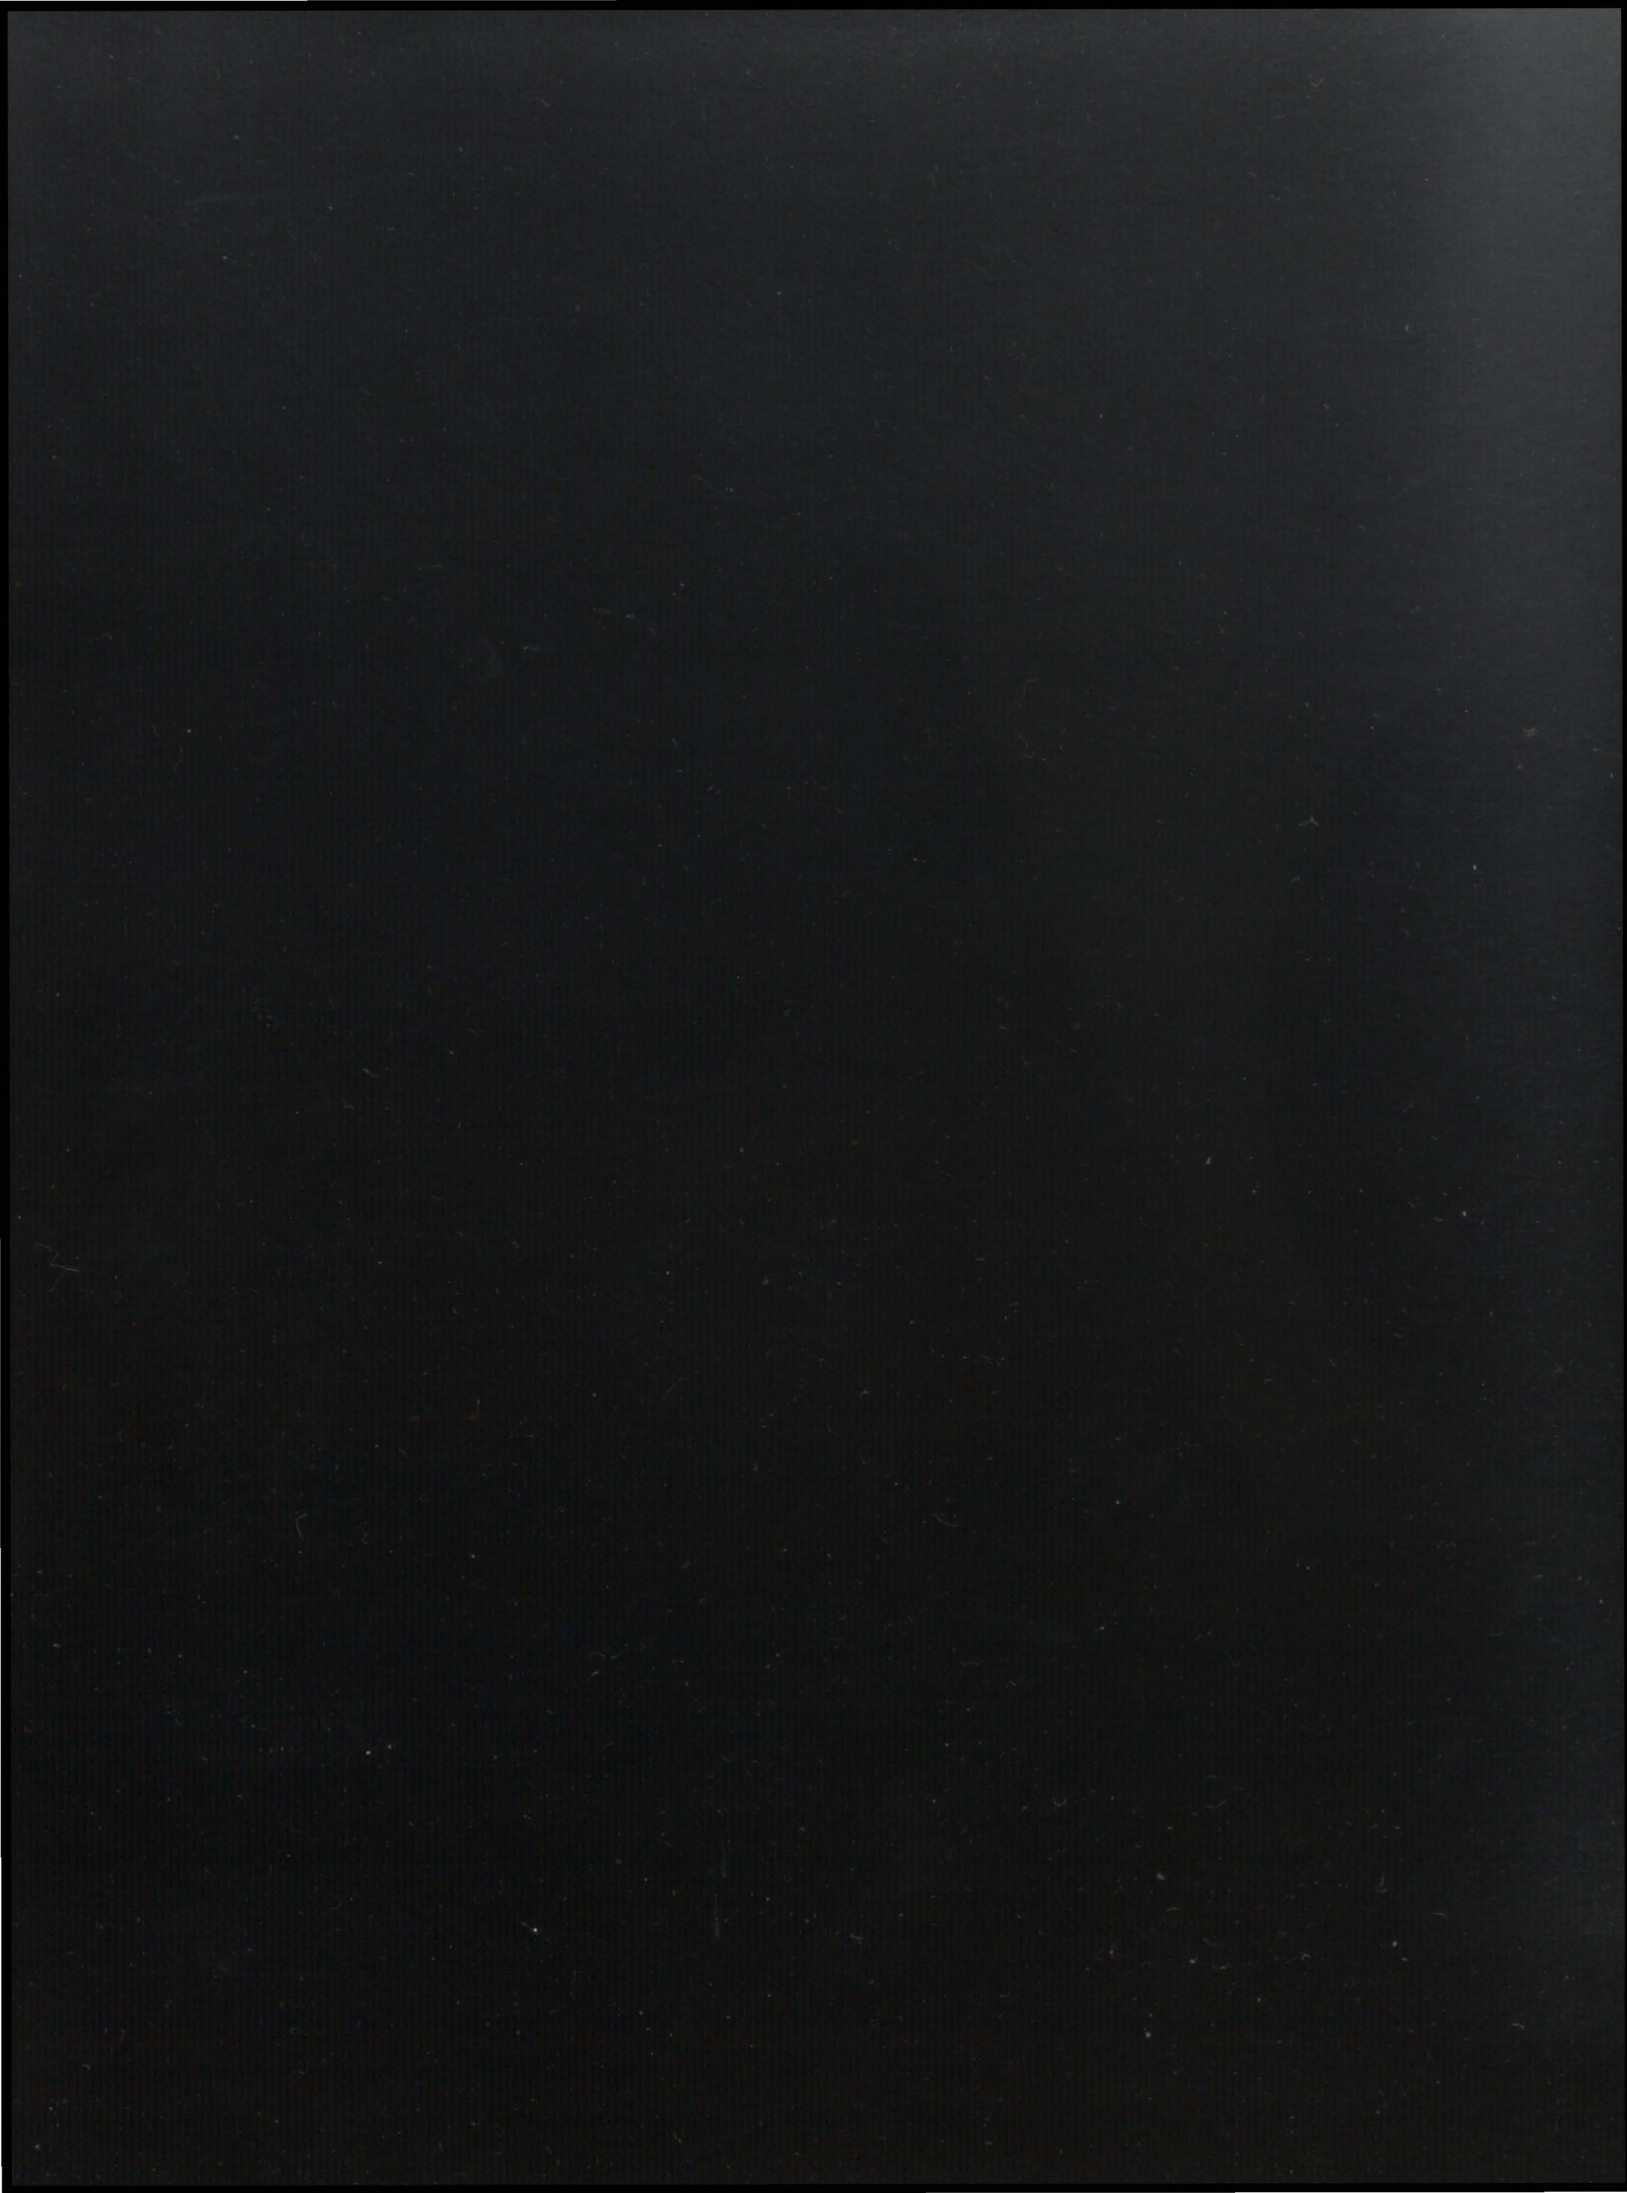

Mrs. Barbara Goddard tapes off books to get rid of. With help from students the library was packed up before Spring Break. "It's sad to see the old library be emptied out, but it's very exciting to anticipate what the new one will be like," Goddard said.
