Mooresville High School was established in 1861 as a two room boarding academy. While the school had undergone many transformations throughout the years, the heart of the Pioneer remained the same.

"I have been librarian here since 1997," Barbara Goddard said. "I am so excited to have the VLC, students love it with the couches and all the different chairs."

Traditions had always been celebrated at MHS, from the initial senior paddles that later transitioned into senior jeans, to float building for the highly anticipated homecoming parade.

"It was a lot of hard work [making senior jeans], but it was fun working with friends," senior Caitlin Barkhimer said.

Community involvement was always prevalent in traditions. The town of Mooresville worked together to put on the annual Old Settler’s Parade, followed by the fair. Attended by Pioneers of all ages, this marked the end of summer and the start to a new school year.

"Old Settlers has been a summer tradition since we were all little," senior Taylor Burnside said. "You get to reunite with all your friends, you can’t miss it. I always spent too much money on rides that could break at any moment, yet I always managed to go every year."

The spirit of the Pioneers remained through the "Sha-lah-lahs" at Wagon Trails Revue variety show, the loud student cheering sections at sporting events, and the close friendships created in the crowded hallways that many generations passed through.

"Beat 'em, bust 'em, beat 'em bust 'em that's our custom, go team, win team, fight fight fight, go blue!"

Blue and gold forever.

Mr. Tim VanWanzeele gives his goodbye speech during the Bullying Convention. He took an administrative position at Decatur Central High School as the lead principal of the alternative school program. "It is hard to see Mr. Van leave, but no matter what he will always be a Pioneer at heart," Assistant Principal Jennifer Perkins said.
Students work on computers. This picture was taken from the 1996 Wagon Trails Yearbook. This represents the transformation that technology has taken in the past 20 years.

Senior girls cheer on their classmates at the Fall Homecoming Pep Rally. It was a tradition for the girls of the senior class to decorate a pair of jeans with memories and hobbies. "Senior jeans are a fun way of expressing yourself and your senior pride," senior Mikala Elstner said.

Boys in the class of 2000, pose in cheerleading outfits with their paddles for the Powder Puff game. Paddles used to be a tradition for MHS during Fall Homecoming week, but have changed into senior jeans in the past couple of years.

Students solve problems on a chalkboard in their math class. This picture was included in the 1983 Wagon Trails Yearbook. These two pictures demonstrate how much education has evolved over the years along with the technology.

Senior Sam Farrington writes a program for the mill for his Ben Davis class. Farrington took this class to prepare him for his future plans involving cars and heavy machinery. "Area 31 is a great experience to prepare myself for my future," Farrington said.

Broadcast, Newspaper, and Yearbook staff members enjoy iMacs in their new studio. After a year of renovations, the VLC was equipped with brand new computers including these new iMacs. "I have been trying to keep this program alive for the past five years and now we are in Disney Land," Broadcast Adviser Andy Marine said.

MHS was around longer than the teachers and students roaming the halls had been alive. Many wonderful and fun traditions were started decades ago, but still thrived. Like a lot of great traditions, some could always use revamping. Students respected traditional events but were always eager to create new editions to bring into the current times. Whether the Pioneers were building floats for fall homecoming, or retweeting Mrs. Amy Selby’s tweets for spirit points, the heart of the Pioneer was alive and well.
Mrs. Amy Selby runs the best dressed competition before first period. The themes included college spirit, camo, blue and gold, prep, and jersey days. "Having the best dressed competition in the morning is a way to make my morning a million times better," sophomore Hunter Thomas said.

Junior Taylor Baxter leads the junior section in the Roller Coaster cheer. The juniors battled the seniors for the satisfaction of a win while the freshmen trailed behind. "Girls run things the best so I thought I would step up and lead the best class at Mooresville High School," Baxter said.

Senior Nick Lyon screams for the Pioneers during the Homecoming game against the Franklin Grizzly Cubs. Lyon spent the past three years working for the opportunity to lead the crowd. "I waited all of high school to lead the students and can't wait for the rest of the games," Lyon said.
Putting Rumors to Rest

The Homecoming of 2014 was a new experience for everyone. The Homecoming events took place outside on the football field for the first time in four years.

"Last time we had a pep rally outside I was in eighth grade," senior Dana Nokes said.

Throughout the week, many rumors were circulating around the school about the change in events. The rumors were later put to rest by Principal Brian Disney.

It was said that Dr. Disney was going to cancel the Powderpuff game and that it was never coming back.

It was also rumored that senior jeans were not going to be allowed during school because of a possible distraction, when in all actuality they were completely untrue.

"I even heard that freshmen were trying to make their own freshman jeans," junior Macy Hohlt said.

Many students were also unsatisfied with the choice of themes throughout the week.

Dr. Disney made a trip to the yearbook class to discuss the rumors flying. The students and Disney talked for a class period about all of the concerns students had, confirmed that they were just rumors, and there would be no drastic changes to the traditions of Mooresville High School.

"The traditions at Mooresville make it Mooresville and I won't be trying to change them anytime soon," Dr. Disney said.

Tug of War creates a serious competition between the four classes and teachers. Juniors Anee Frechette-Houchens and Erika McKibben tugged with all they had to defeat the freshmen. "I couldn't help but match my bestie," McKibben said.

Sophomore Savannah Morris claims the Homecoming Princess crown. Morris was among five candidates for Princess. "I really didn't see it coming but I'm thankful my friends were happy for me," Morris said.

Senior Alley Guffey is gratified with the title of Homecoming Queen. Guffey's candidates were gracious to her win. "I was surprised because I've never been on the ballot before," Guffey said.

Senior Austin Bridgewater runs the ball while Alex Fabert takes a pass play. Bridgewater played varsity his senior year. "I'm going to really miss the guys, the coaches, and all the great times," Bridgewater said.

Pioneers Exceed Expectations

The Mooresville boys varsity football team members came into the Plainfield game 2-1 and they were hungry for a win. Plainfield is one of their biggest rivals and it was their time for victory.

The first quarter began and Red Pride scored a field goal. Pioneers charged back with a touchdown; although missed an extra point, the Pioneers pulled ahead by three points.

During the second quarter both teams held off with no points scored. Second play of the second quarter, Plainfield’s starting running back split his femur on Pioneer’s Ross McDonough’s helmet during a play.

“I was so confused,” McDonough said. “I just heard this huge ‘pop’ then all of sudden this guy was on the ground. It was crazy.”

The third quarter started and Pioneers pulled ahead again with another touchdown. Red Pride responded with another field goal, closing the quarter with a score of 12-6, Pioneer’s lead.

The Pioneer’s were ahead going into the fourth quarter, but they still needed one more push in order to seal the victory.

“We were all pumped, but we knew that this isn’t in the bag yet,” junior Clint Moore said. “Plainfield is a tough team.”

The Pioneer’s closed the game with another touchdown, followed by a two point conversion; the final score was 20-6.

“I knew my boy’s could do it. That’s why we train and prepare so rigorsly,” Coach Chad Dockery said. “We go to war out there, and this time we won.”

The Pioneers went to war and they did win. They finished the season 5-6; nonetheless, a good season for the Mooresville Boys Varsity football players.

by Tristan Schaeffer
Senior boys anticipate the football team's next play, hoping for another victory. Senior Tyler Snyder tried to get everyone hyped for the game. "I love showing our guys support," Snyder said.

Number 83 senior Brian Strong, is in position and ready for the play. He prepped strongly in order to help improve the team. "I love my boys. I know we have what it takes to pull it off every week," Strong said.

Sophomore Jake Perkins dashes towards the propped football in order to punt it towards the other team. Perkins also played soccer on the junior varsity team. "It's so fun," Perkins said. "I love being apart of a team and having responsibility."

Varsity quarterback Alex Fobert, takes charge of the Plainfield vs. Mooresville football game. Fobert was very excited to have the opportunity of being the quarterback for his team. "It just enjoy what I do," junior Fobert said. "Win or lose, I love being out there with my team."
Back On the Field

Improving the Program

The JV football team improved immensely compared to its previous season. The team members continued to grow and become closer as a team; although, they knew they were getting better, they didn't lose focus.

"I feel like those guys have improved tremendously, considering the fact that their roster is always changing. In one week we can have as many as 10 guys playing up on varsity, so they have to adapt," Head Coach Chad Dockery said.

"I hope the end result is a positive play. I focus on my objective and look out for my team. I also focus on my block," sophomore Garrett Fehrman said.

Fehrman was the starting offensive right tackle for JV.

"Our biggest improvement this year was our record. We finally understand that hard work pays off," sophomore quarterback Kyle Wise said.

Along with the JV team, the freshmen team also greatly improved by achieving all of their goals. They wanted to give everything they had on every play and limit turnovers.

Adjusting to high school football was hard for many freshmen, but these boys pushed through and played their hardest every game.

by Becca Stevens

The Junior Varsity defensive lineman are ready to defend their field at the beginning of the first quarter. Brett Bridwell, Jaedon Scott, and David Masters played together as a team and had each other's back. "The guys adjusted well to the game. We never know what's going to happen so I'm very proud of them," Coach Chad Dockery said.

Sophomore Braxton Neighbors carries the ball down the field. Neighbors was a leader on and off the field. "We wanted to do everything we could to win," Neighbors said.

Freshman Eli Bunch tries to gain yards for the Pioneers. Bunch was the quarterback for the freshmen team. "My individual goals are playing my best every game and keep my teammates into the game," Bunch said.
Freshman Jordan Dinwiddie calls out to her teammates. The loss against Terre Haute South challenged the team. "Teamwork is key in sports and life," Dinwiddie said.

Freshman Elise Gregory spikes the ball. The team sharpens their abilities. "We learned to play as a team in our first game against Northview," freshman Lucy Stultz said.

The Face of Victory
New JV Team Produces Successful Season

The team found success throughout the season from the first home game to the Mid-State tournament. The Lady Pioneers consisted mostly of first time team members; nine of the twelve girls were in the freshman class.

"The girls worked so hard this season, and got better as a team as well as individually," JV head coach Hannah Quakenbush said.

One of the most important elements for the girls was finding their strengths and weaknesses. Staying focused was essential.

"The game brings out the true colors of everyone. I strive to be the same on and off the court," freshman Abby Karnes said.

There was one defining factor that had a significant part in adding unity between the girls. Head coach Jim Wheeler continued coaching after his wife went through medical challenges.

"Even after [she] was in the hospital, Coach was at every practice and game to inspire us to do our best," junior Mary Bryant said.

Setting Up for Success

The Lady Pioneers came back for the season full of hope and determination. The team was ready to get to work; the girls began the season strides ahead. They were beginning with experience.

“We were so impressed at how the girls used their experiences every game to better themselves and make improvements,” Coach Danielle Davis said.

After Coach Jim Wheeler had a family emergency, the team was left without a head coach for a week of practices and games. The Lady Pioneers pushed through and won half of their games for the week.

“I was really proud of how well we played against Terre Haute South while coach was gone,” junior Abby Wilson said. “It was the first game we took to five and we fought hard to the end for Brenda.”

As the season progressed the team experienced multiple winning streaks and strong wins against talented teams. More mental knowledge for the game was learned and skills were improved at each practice. The girls were very focused on the upcoming sectionals at the end of their season; winning them was the ultimate goal.

“We have been working hard everyday and putting in extra time so that we can make a run for sectionals this year,” junior Reagan Roberson said.

The girls pursued their main goal for the season and for the first time in more than 10 years the Lady Pioneers advanced into the semifinals of their sectional. After beating Martinsville they fell to Plainfield, but would end their season much stronger than they began it.

by Sarah Ray

Two of the Sarahs go up for a block. Having three Sarahs on the team was a challenge throughout the season. “Having so many Sarahs on the team gets really confusing at times but we got some good laughs from it,” junior Sarah Head said.
Playing For Brenda

The JV and Varsity team wear their, "We play for Brenda," shirts for the Greenwood game. The team wore them to support Brenda, Coach Wheeler’s wife, as she recovered from her brain injury. “It was really important for us to be supportive so we made shirts and did a cheer for her before every game,” junior Erika McKibben said.

Kia Hreno attempts to tip the ball over the block. The Pioneers were up against a strong block the entire night. “When I’m up against a strong block I try to swing through it,” senior Hreno said.

Senior Taylor Waldrip prepares to serve the ball. She was one of four seniors on the varsity team. “Volleyball has been my life for the past six years,” Waldrip said. “It’s a bittersweet ending but I have had a lot of fun and will definitely miss playing.”

Same Heart. New Start 13
Another Successful Season for Pioneers

Freshmen and sophomores usually aren’t the typical grades associated with a varsity sports team. Seniors and juniors typically come to mind instead of underclassmen. The varsity soccer players, however, did not have a typical season.

“It was a good experience,” freshman Thomas Polson said. “The upperclassmen [shared] their knowledge of the game with us.”

After sharing knowledge and growing as a team, the boys beat Franklin, one of Mooresville’s biggest rivals.

The boys continued to work together and win more matches. Along with winning, however, the team also lost, but learned from the losses.

“This team [is] a hard working group having fun and being creative with the game,” Coach Jack Polson said.

The boys defeated Danville in the first round of sectionals, making it to the championship game. The boys fell in the championship game, but were able to look back at a successful season.

“That was the best win of the season,” freshman Xzavier Amones said.

by Austin Webster

Senior Michael Eineman runs to beat Ben Davis to the ball. The boys gave it their all that night. “I enjoy just being on a team and having fun,” Eineman said.

Varsity Goalie junior Michael Ronan warms up before the game. The team faced Franklin in a tough match. “My favorite part of playing soccer is being successful as a team,” Ronan said.
Senior Brandon Thiede walks with his mom on senior night. Brandon was all smiles that night as he celebrated his last year of soccer with his fellow seniors. "It was sad...but it was a great feeling to know we were seniors," Thiede said.

The Senior Boys Michael Einges, Hunter Koch, David Lawson, Brandon Thiede, and Austin Webster celebrate their senior year of soccer together. The boys each recorded audio to play before the varsity game thanking the coaches, teammates, and parents. "I'm going to miss representing the school," Koch said.

Senior David Lawson attempts to keep the ball in bounds. He attempted to stop one of the Ben Davis Giants players from getting further down the field. "That was probably the greatest win of the season," Lawson said.

Blocking for the boys' Junior Varsity team were booming in the season. With an excess number of players, the JV team decided to reinstate the C-Team. The C-Team members played alongside the JV players.

During the season, many of the JV members were injured, which allowed the C-Team a lot of playing time. However, their time on the field was not all fun and games. Due to a misunderstanding between schools, Mooresville's C-Team ended up playing Plainfield's entire JV team.

"It was our freshmen and sophomores against their entire team, including juniors and seniors. That was not fair," sophomore Nicholas Phillips said.

The game was discredited, and both the C-Team and the JV team returned to Plainfield a week later to play a fair game.

The boys spent a tremendous amount of time scrimmaging and conditioning to improve their foot skills and communication on the field.

"[It was] a great summer of conditioning, practicing intensely, and learning to be creative with the game," varsity coach Jack Polson said.

The team members ended the season with great improvements in their skills and their team morale.

"We play really well together. We get off the game sometimes, but we always get right back into it." Grimes said.

Sophomore Danyel Ricketts and other defenders run after the ball during the game against Franklin. The girls won the game 6-2. "I give 110 percent. Anything the coach tells me to do, I do it," Ricketts said.

Sophomore Emma Pedigo hugs sophomore Kendra Payton after making her first goal of the season. It was the first score against Franklin. "My goal at the beginning of the year was to score 2 times and I've already scored 3," Pedigo said.

JV Girls Achieve Goals for the Season

The new soccer season kicked off with a lot of new changes, including a new coach. When asked about her prior experience, Coach Lydick laughed. "I played soccer from the time I was six until I was ten," Coach Jamie Lydick said.

Coach Lydick has played other sports which helped her with coaching this team.

The majority of the girls that were on the team were freshmen, and new friendships were made between the girls during the season.

"I love meeting people, making new friends, and working out," sophomore Danyel Ricketts said.

Coach Lydick and the team set goals for the season. Coach Lydick's goal for the team was to win 50 percent of their games during the season.

"As long as they do their jobs and come out to play every day, they can achieve their goals," Coach Lydick said.

Even though Coach Lydick did not have very much experience with soccer she helped motivate the girls.

"Coach Lydick was really understanding. If you had a problem you could always go to her," freshman Lexy Ellis said.

"The most rewarding part is just seeing them have fun," Coach Lydick said.

Kicking it Home

Memorable Season

With a victory against Plainfield for the conference championship, and one win shy of making it to regionals, the Lady Pioneers made the most of their season.

"If I could redo anything from this season I would win sectionals, all we needed was five more minutes," Coach A.J. McCaids said.

It was said to be a tough loss at sectionals. The girls were ahead one to zero until the last five minutes of the second half. It was one of their top goals to win sectionals.

The girls were ecstatic to see the student section that went to Plainfield to support the girls, and watch their team take home the mid-state conference championship title.

"The moment when we won conference and ran over to the group of guys from school was just, so surreal," sophomore Natalie Guffey said.

"One of my main things I remember the most was getting to be a part of both teams," sophomore Kendra Payton said. "It was amazing getting to experience conference and sectionals, and I loved being able to go through it all with my best friend, Emma."

With 14 wins, a mere three losses, the Mid-State Conference title, and having stood their ground to avon in the sectional championship game, the seniors on the team were happy to leave behind a winning legacy.

Sophomore Olivia Walton attempts to steal the ball to take it to goal. Being a forward required quickness and anticipation, and Walton exhibited both. "I started playing soccer when I was younger because my sister played, and I love playing forward," Walton said.

Sophomore Shelby Fink bodies up with her opponent to win the ball. Fink started later in the season but she still felt connected to the team. "As the season went on and we all became closer and were like a family on and off the field," Fink said.

Senior Liz Allen takes a corner kick. She had not missed a game since she was three. "Every game McAdams always pulls me aside to give me a short pep talk," Allen said. "He tells me he believes in me, and wants me to show my talent every time I walk on the field."

Senior Halie Gardner tries to get to the ball first to set her team up for a shot. Gardner always thought about her future before a game. "I prepared myself before big games by putting my headphones in, zoning everything out, and thinking of what it was going to take to pull out a win," Gardner said.

Freshman Miyah Chambers aims her club towards the golf hole. Chambers worked hard to improve her putt. "Now I putt left hand over right. It helps with the shoulder stance," Chambers said.

Freshman Olivia Roberts carries her bag to pick up her ball after a hit. Roberts had played for two years. "Our team has one of the tightest bonds," Roberts said.

Girls Team Bonded For The Chance To Win

The girls golf team saw a lot of new faces. A majority of the team was cast up of new freshmen girls.

In the beginning, it was a new concept for them because they did not know how to interact with one another.

"[My favorite part of golf this year was] the bus rides because we came closer as a team," sophomore Shelby Summers said.

As time continued during their season, the girls united together and formed bonds as a team.

Along with these bonds, however, the girls still focused on playing well and representing Mooresville at their matches.

Senior Amanda Gifford puts the ball at the match against Whiteland. She had been golfing for five years and led the team as a higher rank. "This season was definitely the best season throughout my years of golf," Gifford said.

Freshman Kaitlyn Trosper lines up her swing before she follows through the hit. Trosper took direction from her coach in order to improve her swing. "My favorite part was having people on my team that cared about how I was doing," Trosper said.

"You constantly have to improve how you play and there's always something that needs to be worked on," sophomore Allison Freund said.

The girls really put their hearts where their clubs were.

"The kids all worked really hard to improve," Coach Jeff Franklin said. "After the first three summer practices, I knew we would be okay and I started to get excited about having a good season."

"We had a great team because the raw ability and determination was there," senior Dana Nokes said.

The girls were proud of how their season went and the seniors wished the girls luck for their years to come.

Freshman Miyah Chambers aims her club towards the golf hole. Chambers worked hard to improve her putt. "Now I putt left hand over right. It helps with the shoulder stance," Chambers said.

Freshman Olivia Roberts carries her bag to pick up her ball after a hit. Roberts had played for two years. "Our team has one of the tightest bonds," Roberts said.
Baker Breaks MHS Boys Tennis Record

Squeaks of shoes and the soft thump of tennis balls hitting rackets could be heard when the boys were out on the courts.

The players liked to have fun, but knew sometimes things had to be taken seriously. When it was time to practice, each boy would be on the courts, on time, and ready to play. They cheered each other on while the players improved their skills.

"Being a senior didn’t make tennis special in any way," senior Chandler Gunnell said. "But it did make me sad knowing this was my last year."

The team got to end the season on a good note. Senior Peyton Baker broke Mooresville’s record for the most wins in a high school career. The previous record was held by Jason Dowden since 2006 with 46 wins, and Baker’s record ended at 51 wins. This was a major accomplishment for Baker and the team. Every point counted in the long run.

"Breaking the wins record has always been a goal of mine since freshman year," Baker said. "Without the encouragement and support of my teammates, I wouldn’t have been able to accomplish what I did."

"Thank you to the team and the great leadership of our captains and seniors," Coach Mike Teders said.

by Makayla Hughes and Nessa Johnson

Senior Peyton Baker and junior David Freund high five after a set. The boys’ high five signified their team bond. "We high five to make sure we’re on the same page before every point," Freund said.

Every Point Counts

The boys line up as each team’s players were announced. The team performed this routine before every game. "I like how we get together and pray before a match, and we yell ‘Mooresville’ as loud as we can," junior Darien Hamilton said. "I get so excited and then I’m like, ‘Oh yeah, I have a broken arm.’"
A Race to the Finish
Supporting the Team

Together stood a huddle of people dressed in shorts and yellow jerseys. The coach shouted words of encouragement to get everyone pumped up. The team broke apart and the runners got into their positions.

They wore determination on their faces. A loud “bang” filled the air and the runners took off. Stomps of feet made a loud booming sound, as though it was thunder.

One could have just barely seen them in the distance. Together as a team, they ran. They pushed each other to the limit to get ahead of their opponents. Some runners fell behind, some took the lead.

However, it did not matter who on their team came in first, second, or third place. What mattered was that together, as a team, they tried their hardest.

“My best moment was when I was watching my best friend beat her record and being there for her at the finish line,” sophomore Brianna Casilli said.

Winning never mattered to the cross country team. Even though cross country is a personal sport, it is also a team sport.

“Teamwork plays a really important role in sports. Without teamwork, what’s the point?” Mr. Adam Allen said.

Not all significance is held in the matter of winning, a runner’s personal time is important too.

Sophomore Madison Vauters’ personal time after the meet at Cascade was 18.51 minutes. This was her best time.

“I was so happy to finally beat my time before,” Vauters said.

Other runners such as junior Kyle Forsdick had a personal record time of 19:09 minutes. Many runners improved to the best of their ability.

by Taylor O’Neal and Stephany Bailey

The team forms a huddle to pray for a safe meet, and to earn another victory. They prayed before they began every race. “In the huddle we pray that everyone is safe and then we say our chant,” sophomore Brianna Casilli said.

Senior Peyton Lindley strides to the finish line. Teammates were cheering and encouraging Lindley. “When I’m running all I do is focus on finishing the race and how good it will feel afterward,” Lindley said.

Sophomores Savannah Morris and Madison Vauters receive first and second place awards at the John Mitchell Invitational. “That was one of my best times,” Vauters said.

Sophomore Jack Dillon and freshman Max Comer run together to give each other support throughout the race. The runners had endured a lot due to the harshness of the course. "Our workouts are really hard, but they're worth it in the long run," Comer said.

Senior Quinn Cavin shakes hands with his rivals at the John Mitchell Invitational. As they had walked up there it was announced that they were in second place. "Attitude is highly contagious in the team atmosphere," Cavin said.

Freshman Abbigail Mendenhall and Sophomores Savannah Morris and Madison Vauters start the race off with a bang. Just before they took off there was nothing but silence at the starting line. "It's always a bit nerve wracking before the race... we always tell each other good luck," Morris said.

Junior Kyle Forsdick and freshman Ethan Wymer maintain a steady pace, side by side, at the John Mitchell Invitational. They had kept up with the lead participants throughout the duration of the race. "It makes me feel good inside that I can do this," Forsdick said.
Making New Friendships

The Memories and Friendships that were Made

A lot of memories and friendships were made between all three squads. Being a freshman on a team can sometimes be intimidating, but it sure was not for the freshmen cheerleaders.

"The upperclassmen were very welcoming, because they are really crazy and we eventually joined in on their craziness," freshman Grace Teders said.

The competition team was a combination of all four grades.

"My favorite memory from this season was competing," junior Sena Hornsby said.

The competition team practiced all summer long. They started off without confidence but that changed by the end of the season.

"As a whole the members of our program improved in every aspect of cheerleading, including mastering stunts that were not even possible a year ago," Coach Katie Tutterrow said.

The large amount of practices that the girls have really brought them closer together. All of the cheerleaders also went to cheer camp at Purdue over the summer.

"UCA cheer camp definitely brought us together," freshman Madi Walls said.

by Anna Payne and Mackenzie Sims
Senior Gracie Norton claps after finishing a cheer with her teammates. This was the first pep rally in four years that had been held outside. "My favorite memory was cheer camp. A lot of the girls come out of their shells and made new friends by the end of the camp," Norton said.

The Freshman, JV, and Varsity squads cheer together at the winter homecoming to get the students excited for the game. The squads were preparing themselves to toss up there flyers for a stunt while they cheered. "My favorite part of games were going to all of the football and basketball games and supporting them through their victory," sophomore Alexis Aichinger said.

The Freshmen, JV, and Varsity squads drop banners during the introductions at the winter homecoming game. Each game the cheerleaders presented the starting line up to the fans. "My favorite of cheering at basketball games is how the game can change in a matter of seconds," sophomore Savanna Boller said.

Junior Sena Hornsby claps during a yelling contest at the winter homecoming pep rally. Hornsby cheered alongside all of the other cheerleaders during the pep rally. "My favorite part of pep rallies are the games and cheering on the participants from each class," Hornsby said.

Performing Arts groups shine at Wagon Trails Revue

Bright, blinding lights shone on the stage. An air of excitement filled the auditorium as each act prepared for their moment in the spotlight. It was time for Wagon Trails Revue to begin once again.

For 44 years, the yearbook staff had hosted a variety show to fund the yearbook. Bands, choirs, orchestras, and soloists worked with the yearbook team to create a fun show and advertise the yearbook sales.

“It’s our last Sha-la-la-lah,” senior Matthew Collins said. This mantra became a favorite among some of the seniors, who tearfully sang along to the closing slide show’s anthem, “Yesterday Once More.” The annual slide show depicted photos from recent and past shows. It was an emotional walk down memory lane for both the students and teachers.

“Music has impacted my life greatly. I have made many of my best friends through band,” senior Sierra Lowe said.

“I went to Mooresville my whole life and this is only my first year attending Wagon Trails,” Guidance Secretary Lori Smith said. “I thought, ‘Boy, was I missing out. Why haven’t I done this before?’ It was so good.”

The show sold out completely on opening night and almost completely on closing night. It was a wonderful opportunity for different groups to come together and support each other’s performances. Wagon Trails Revue was the only time that all of the bands, choirs and orchestras perform and shine together.

Solo Acts

Senior Tiffany Bridwell - “Don’t Know Why”
Senior Elijah Pingleton and junior Bailey Delong - “Say Something” Senior Alyson Laplante - “Not About Angels”
Seniors Maryssa Small and Hannah Shelton - “Poor Unfortunate Souls”
Junior Adriana Culver captures the audience with her solo. Culver loved feeling challenged to improve with each performance. "When I'm on stage, the world basically stops," Culver said. "I become my character and nothing else matters for those minutes I get to perform. It's a true blessing."

Senior Austin McKinney plays the baritone saxophone. McKinney was a part of the concert band since seventh grade. "My favorite part of band is Wagon Trails," McKinney said. I like seeing the other acts and being back stage." Both concert and jazz band played magnificently at Wagon Trails. A special piece performed by the jazz band included clarinets. It was the first time the jazz band included clarinet players in their ensemble.

Senior Catherine Deal stands with her twin sister, senior Casey Deal, and the Madrigal King, senior Brendan Rollin during Wagon Trails. Catherine Deal had an amazing experience performing in Madrigals as a first-year member. "Everyone works hard and is dedicated to making the group as good as we can be," Deal said. "My favorite part is the feeling we all get when we nail something in a performance that we've been working hard on."

Orchestra Director Sheryl Fyffe conducts the symphony orchestra as the musicians perform their music. Wagon Trails had the largest concert audience that both the symphony orchestra and the full orchestra had played for, and setting up for the performance can be a little difficult. "With orchestra there is a lot of set-up involved because of chairs and stands, all while trying not to trip over one another's instruments," senior Peyton Lindley said.

Real men wear... dresses? Senior Austin Webster and junior Tristan Schoeffler bravely don sequin dresses in a yearbook skit. The boys, who were portraying Johnny Carson and Jimmy Fallon, could hear the laughter and cheers of the crowd as they came on stage in the dresses. "I heard [the applause] and it made me think, 'They really think this is funny. Wow. This is awesome!' Then I remembered I was in a dress," Webster said with a laugh.

Santa tells his elves to go find pixie dust for his reindeer. In "Reindeer Guide Santa's Sleigh?", the reindeer needed the pixie dust in order to fly or Christmas would be ruined. "I like that my character thought highly of himself and I get to be a showoff," Nokes said.
Freshman Jordyn Andrews puts together a care package for Riley kids. Students put together these packages to give patients activities to do while they were in the hospital. “My favorite part was the joy I felt knowing I was doing something for Riley Children,” Andrews said.

Senior Gracie Norton smashes a pie into Mr. McAdams’ face at the pep rally to raise money for Special Olympics. The teacher with the most money in their jar was pied and the money went toward the cause. “I am so thankful for everyone who supported the event,” Norton said. “Pieing McAdams in the face was awesome, he was such a good sport!”

Keeping the Spirit Alive

Each morning students gathered in front of the main office wearing their best get ups to compete in the best dressed contest.

Carrying on the tradition of spirit days, Homecoming week was filled with exciting new themes. “Throwback Thursday” was one of the most popular themes during the week.

“I dressed up everyday for Winter Homecoming because it was my way of showing my school spirit,” freshman Brian Fleener said.

The freshmen dominated spirit week by providing the most kids at the best dressed contest each day, and many went all out to win the entire contest. Spirit points awarded by Mrs. Amy Selby, made every grade compete each day to rack up the most points by the end of the pep rally on Friday.

There were also new activities during the week, including Dance Marathon, which was a huge success. The Riley Hospital fundraiser became a part of spirit week and was held before the game. Over 100 students signed up and went beyond their goal of raising $5,000 for Riley.

Students danced, played games, raced through an inflatable obstacle course, and also put together care packages for patients at the hospital. The grand total for the fund raiser was announced at halftime of the JV game after students, “danced for those that couldn’t.”

“I was excited we met our two goals; we raised more money and had more students attend,” Mrs. Barbara Goddard said.

Fans flooded into The Curry Center Homecoming night, eager to watch the Pioneers beat the Whitleand Warriors. The team faced off against the Warriors for an important conference game. The JV fought hard but fell short against Whitleland; however, the varsity kept a steady lead throughout the night and was able to pull off a win.

“I came into the game with confidence that we would win,” senior Lane Weaver said.

Another highlight of the evening was the king and queen crowning of Gracie Norton and John Green, who both played an influential role in homecoming. At the pep rally earlier that day, Green gave his last rap for the Pioneers.

Junior Sophie Shock races to the half court line in the relay race. Each group raced on a small tricycle. "Pep rally games allow you to get hyped for the upcoming game," Shock said.

Bailey Suter makes a layup increasing the Pioneers' lead. The boys had a significant lead for most of the evening. "My senior Homecoming was special to me because not only was it my final Homecoming, but it was also a huge conference game against Whiteland," senior Suter said.
Moving Forward Together

Basketball has become an excellent vehicle for great humanitarian efforts and for organizations to market to the people. This became true for the Boys Varsity Basketball team when they played Franklin Community in the Champion's Together game.

The goal was to raise awareness for the special olympics and the cause thereof. The theme of the game and the motto for this campaign became: "spread the word to end the word." The word became all the offensive language/ name calling towards those off the court, that were in "need."

"All the money that was raised through donations and shirt sales, all went directly back to the organization," junior cheerleader Kristin Worth said. "Who wouldn't want to support this?"

The team worked out and warmed up in their Champion's Together shirts, while the cheerleaders cheered them on with theirs on too.

"It was a good cause with good people," senior Lane Weaver said. "I'm grateful to help make a difference."

Money donations and teeshirts were just some of the different ways that the organizations raised awareness and generated funds for this great cause.

Although the Pioneer's lost, they played extremely well while still supporting such a great cause. Not only did the team show excellence on the court last year, they also demonstrated and lived out the purpose of Champion's Together off the court.

The players and the coaches were all extremely grateful that they could support this and work together in order to raise awareness and spread the word to end the word.

"The boys fought hard that night and they were all thankful for the opportunity," Coach Bob Carter said.

The Mooresville Boys varsity basketball team races down the court against opposing team, Terre Haute North. The team fought all year to finish with a 19-5 record. "It takes a lot for a team to do well during the year," junior K.C. Earls said. "We trained hard and without a doubt, we left it all out there on the court." The team did an excellent job in all of their tournaments in the 2014 season. During the Rushville Holiday Tourney, the team snagged two victories, one against Rushville Consolidated and the other against Lapel High School. Hard work really paid off for the Pioneers.
Pioneers Are Back
Improving Their Skills

The boy's freshman team ended its season 14-7 and the JV completed the season 11-10. "The JV team really improved throughout the season," Coach Oggy Brewer said.

The JV had a rough beginning to the season, but was overall successful. "I like being around my teammates and watching everybody improve," freshman Sam Norton said.

The freshmen team lost to Plainfield during the game in the tournament.

"It felt pretty good going out there and giving it my all every game," freshman Bradley Axsom said.

Injuries always came into play. That was the case for the starting center of the freshmen team. "It was painful and hard to watch my team struggle in some games throughout the season, and I knew that I could help the team out," freshman Parrish Fehrman said.

Junior Clint Moore goes in for the shot for the JV team. Moore has played basketball since he was three. "I don't really think of anything during the game," Moore said. "Just how to help out the team."

After stealing the ball freshman Eli Bunch runs down the court to make a basket. In the game against Greenwood, the Pioneers got the win. "I think about just doing anything I possibly can think of to help out the team," Bunch said.
Freshmen and JV Girls Dominate

The girl’s JV team ended the season at 18-2. While the freshmen girl’s team ended the season at 11-11.

Both teams were determined to help out each other and win the games. The freshmen girls won the county championship. This meant a win against all the teams in Mooresville’s surrounding areas.

“The team stuck together as one and we helped each other a lot,” freshman Lindsey Cordray said.

The JV team was close to a county championship, but lost to Greenwood early in the season.

“It was rough to lose a county game early in the season, but we learned from it and pushed harder,” freshman Kaylen Underhill said.

The JV team was almost undefeated, but lost two games during the whole season.

“Playing on JV was a lot of fun. I enjoyed practicing with varsity and improving on my basketball skills,” freshman Jordyn Dinwiddie said.

Freshman Shelby Waldrip gets ready as her teammate looks for an open girl who is ready to make the points for a win. Waldrip has been playing the sport she loves since a very young age. “My favorite part about playing is getting close with my teammates and having fun,” Waldrip said.

Freshman Jessica Lux looked for a teammate to help her work the offense. Lux was a part of the freshman team.

“Our coach always said that the main key to the game is defense,” Lux said.

Junior Mackenzie Bailey surveys her options on the court during an intense rivalry game against Martinsville. Bailey played varsity for two years. "I like the first few practices because we can see everyone's strengths and weaknesses," Bailey said.

Senior Sarah Corbin goes up for a layup against two opponents. Corbin felt her senior year was different than any other year. "Our season was successful because we moved together on the court as a whole, one with each other," Corbin said.

Sophomore Sam Walsh scores two points while making a layup. Walsh played varsity for her sophomore year and had no regrets. "I just wish we wouldn't have given up in the fourth quarter against Homestead," Walsh said.

Junior Lauren McBryar waits for an opportunity to arise to score in a game against Southport High School. When asked what she would change about her season, McBryar only had one regret. "I would have changed getting a concussion," McBryar said.
A Team of Dreams

The season was one for the books. The varsity girls accomplished new feats for the program as a whole. The team reached higher levels than could have been expected.

The Lady Pioneers had an overall record of 24-5. Throughout their season they won games against some of their biggest rivals like Decatur and Martinsville. Winning the games that they did landed the team an invite to the Hall of Fame Tournament. The tournament was invite only, meaning that the only way to compete is to receive an invitation. The tournament was also broadcasted on TV.

Even though the Lady Pioneers fell to Heritage Christian with a hard loss of 49-27, they still left with their heads high, knowing they competed.

"It was such a big deal for us to be invited to the tournament because of the minimal amount of teams competing," junior Mackenzie Johnson said.

The Lady Pioneers also reached a new level of competition when they won sectionals. Winning sectionals did not seem like an unusual feat for the ladies, except for the fact that winning gave them a 7-peat Sectional Champions title. The Lady Pioneers have held the Sectional Champions title since 2009. They once again won the title of the the 2015 Sectional Champions against tough teams like Avon, Plainfield, and Martinsville.

"We all reached individual goals, but reaching the 7-peat this season meant we conquered one of the toughest team goals as a whole," senior Kellie Cavanaugh said.

The girls individually grew as players when it came to their skills and abilities. But the team grew as a whole from the numerous wins and fluency on the court. All of the team members of the Girls Varsity Basketball program played together as a whole with the thought of winning on their minds. No player played for their individual self, but for the better of the team and that resulted in the opportunities to play in the Hall of Fame Tournament, the Sectional Champions Title, and a winning record.

"Anytime a team can do what these girls did this year, you can count on it being a successful season," Coach Mark Hurt said.

Senior Kellie Cavanaugh drives the ball to the basket while keeping out of reach of her opponent. Cavanaugh felt she accomplished all she wanted. "My teammates made my senior year perfect," Cavanaugh said.

Junior Mackenzie Johnson leads the team down the court. Johnson played varsity for three years. "I watched my sister and ended up loving the game," Johnson said.

Sophomore Goes to State

Typically, it is unheard of for a sophomore to win Sectionals and Regionals, let alone go to state. Oddly enough, that is exactly what sophomore Christian Warren did. He wowed everyone by winning Sectionals and going to Regionals. Then, he further shocked the crowd by conquering Regionals and moving on to State.

“When you have the work ethic Christian has, winning will come naturally,” Head Assistant Coach Nicholas Brobst said.

Only a few of the wrestlers went to Regionals, including seniors Mitch Andrew Sanders also went to Regionals, but lost in his first round.

“I had to drill hard and had to lose a good amount of sweat during each practice,” Warren said.

The team prepared for each meet by warming up and eating a healthy diet. They could choose to not eat healthy, but that might mean that they would not make weight. If they didn’t make weight, they weren’t able to wrestle in their weight class.

“Making weight is not that hard for me, but some people struggle with it,” sophomore Marcus Camden said.

Exercise, healthy diets, and commitment are essential to a wrestler’s success.

by Makayla Hughes

Freshman Spencer Cox resumes his match after he makes a point. Points were acquired by escaping an opponent’s hold or by taking down the opponent. “I try and have fun, otherwise there’s no point,” Cox said.
Sophomore Taylor Adamson attempts to get out from underneath his opponent. The wrestlers were divided into weight classes which defined who they were going to wrestle. "When I am wrestling I feel as if I was born to do so," Adamson said.

Senior Mitch Anderson prepares for his match by walking around the gym. The boys would walk around and stretch to warm up and loosen up their muscles. "I feel better the more matches I wrestle," Anderson said.

Junior Levi Samuels tries to break out of his opponent's hold. This was Samuels' first year on the team. "It's a majorly competitive sport," Samuels said. "You get very sore and worn out."

Sophomore Kaleb Sanders looks to the sidelines during his match. The coaches and teammates were on the sidelines during the matches, rooting for their ally. "You do not have to be super at wrestling, you just have to put in the time and effort," Sanders said.

Reaching New Heights

The swim team had an extremely successful season. Not only did they win the most meets compared to the previous two years, they also had four individuals break records.

"As a team our goal was to do our best. We trudged through grueling practices to better ourselves," junior Seth Heitmann said.

Breaking school and personal records was the focus for the team. The hard work at morning and afternoon practices was key to all of their success. The focus on individual performance led to winning more meets than the past two years combined.

"We paid more attention to small victories. We encouraged the 'drops in time' to be the focus rather than the win or loss," coach Amanda Miller said.

Haley Wilson, Ashton Johnson, Macy Sutkowski, and Nicholas Phillips all broke records during the season. Johnson broke the record for 6 dives with a score of 238.7 and the 11 dives record scoring 363.15. Phillips broke the record for 100 breaststroke with a time of 1:06.98. Wilson broke the 50 freestyle with a time of 27.11 seconds. Sutkowski broke the 6 dives record with a score of 193.6.

"It wasn't until the middle of the season that I realized it was possible and as I knew I could I went for it and broke it," Sutkowski said.

The team's morale was also a large contribution to the success. No matter what the odds were, everyone supported one another. The support was not only shown at meets, but practices as well.

"During the meets we stayed in a huddled group on the bulkhead where we could see the races and get one another excited," senior Austin McKinney said.

"The best and most defining moments of our season were when a teammate broke a school or personal record or won a close race," junior Alan Payne said.

Junior Dylan Rogier getting ready to begin a race. Rogier swam individual and team relay events. "I love when my team cheers for me because it makes me more excited to race," Rogier said.

Junior Haley Wilson dives into the water during the medley relay. Wilson broke the girls' 50 meter freestyle record. "In the moments before a big race, there is a lot of nervous energy, but once you take your mark a calm washes over you," Wilson said.

Sophomore Thomas Weber comes up for air while swimming the breaststroke. Weber enjoyed having his teammates cheer him on. "We supported each other by chanting and cheering on the bulkhead," Weber said.

Sophomore Nicholas Phillips is about to jump off of the starting block. Phillips broke the school record for the 100 yard breaststroke. "Jumping off of the starting block is a rush of excitement, and adrenaline," Phillips said.

Sophomore Isabella Crayton is getting ready to begin the backstroke. Crayton swam in relays and did the backstroke. "I love the adrenaline rush I get before the official tells us to make our mark," Crayton said.

Breaking Records
It’s All Routine

In a team of mostly upperclassmen and only one sophomore, it was easy to be confused with who was responsible for doing what in varsity baseball.

Though all members of the varsity Pioneers were equally important, the catcher was one of the most essential players. He had to oversee the ball at all times, be prepared to throw or catch the ball, and had to communicate with all members of the team so everyone knew what was happening. It may have seemed overwhelming to a lot of people, but catchers like senior Peyton Baker and junior Tyler Weldon did this on a routine basis.

“Varsity baseball requires dedication to the team, a will to win, and a competitive spirit,” Baker said.

The pitcher could make or break the game. If the pitcher was having an off day, it could have resulted in a loss for the team. That is why other pitchers trained throughout the game, so they were set if a switch was made.

The coaches often encouraged the pitcher from the sidelines while pushing him harder, saying that he would switch after one more out.

The infield had to keep an eye on the outfield, the batter, and other infield positions. The ball could come from anywhere, and they had to be ready to get an out. Infielders had to be excellent catchers and needed a good eye for catching pop flies. Junior Austin Long strove all season to be the best third baseman he could be.

“I relax and take ground balls to prepare for each game,” Long said.

Outfielders needed to have a strong arm. They stood way out in the boondocks, watching for any balls that may have come their way. After obtaining the baseball, they had to throw it to the cutoff or the pitcher. Outfielders also needed to be fast.

Though the players on the field were important, don’t forget about the guys on the bench as well. They were necessary for the spirit of the game, rooting their teammates to victory. While the other boys were on deck, on the field, or even batting, the guys on the bench were needed to support them while distracting the other team. The other team might have been so caught up with the sidelines that it could mess up a play.

“This may be one of the most talented teams top to bottom we have seen at Mooresville in quite a few years,” Assistant Coach Kyle Davis said. “We have a lot of guys that now have multiple years of varsity experience.”

Senior Justin Martin swings as he is up to bat. Every batter was told to wait for the right pitch, and Martin took those words to heart. “My favorite part was winning the Battle of 67 against Decatur,” Martin said.

As the opposing team bats, junior William Ferrill keeps a close eye on the front of the field. Ferrill was one of the team’s first basemen, so he had to be ready to catch the ball and get an out.

“I make it look easy, but it’s really not,” Ferrill said.

After a hit from a fellow teammate, junior Kaleb Owens rounds third base before heading home. He scored a point without being tagged, which helped the Pioneers catch up to the opposing team, the Northview Knights.

“Trust your skills, trust your teammates, and trust your coach,” Owens said.

Junior Braydan Bain hikes up his leg, aiming for the strike zone that ranges from the batter's shoulders to the knees. If the batter were to miss the ball when it was in the strike zone, it was a guaranteed strike. "Varsity baseball is an experience that you can have if you work hard and put the time in during the off season," Bain said. "This baseball team has one of the best player bonds that I've ever been a part of."

Sophomore Ryshen Dow pitches the ball to try to strike out the batter. Dow was just one of the eight pitchers for the JV baseball team. "I hit in the tunnels, listen to music, and field ground balls before most games," Dow said.

The Turn Around

Coming Together As One Team

Having to play the same team back to back could be a big advantage or disadvantage. For the Pioneers they wanted to win it all.

The Pioneers always had a rivalry with their next door neighbors Decatur. The first night Mooresville lost 6-3 at home. The next night Mooresville came out to play with the help of Coach Phil Munzer and Coach Josh Morgan, this time at Decatur.

"I told the boys that they played tough and that they needed to find a way to win," Munzer said.

They were ready for a win.

"They are a rival so that made us feel even more excited," sophomore Eric Brickley said.

This time the boys came out with the 12-3 win. They were all excited coming out with the rivalry win.

"We're having a successful season as a team," sophomore Kwnten Schmitt said.

The team went on a winning streak after that game and boosted everyone's confidence. by Mackenzie Sims

Freshman Mason Burris throws the ball back to his pitcher during warm up. Burris always tried to stop the ball so the other team couldn't score. "My favorite part of this season so far is going to El Rodeo with my team," Burris said.
Sophomore Ashley Cox tires the ball at the hitter. Cox played both JV and Varsity for the Pioneers. "My favorite part of the season is beating teams we haven't beat in the past," Cox said. "It's kind of like revenge, but in a competitive way."

JV Adapts To New Coaching Styles

Getting used to new coaches is hard for every player, but having a different coach for two years in a row was a hard adjustment.

"We love our team. We work together and make it fun for everyone. Bad games or not; we back each other up and make it work," sophomore Morgan Crawford said.

Coaches Michelle Davis and Jamie Lydick took over the team last season and changes were made.

"The girls needed to focus on every play for every pitch," Coach Lydick said. "You have to be on your toes and know what to do before the play happens."

All the girls enjoyed the team and they had good chemistry. They worked together to get the job done. They did adjust very well to the new coaching styles and their record showcased that.

Returning and new JV players were excited to see how the season would play out. Overall it was a great year for JV players and coaches.

"I love being able to play with not only my teammates, but my best friends," freshman Erin Stanley said.

Freshman Erin Stanley gives other freshman Jailyn Jones a pep talk before she takes the plate. Jones played left field, catcher, and infield for the Pioneers. "When I go up to bat I think about where I need to hit the ball in order to help out my team," Jones said.

New Feats for the Pioneers

The Lady Pioneers’ softball team set a new standard for the year. The girls made a point of creating five team goals to achieve during their trying season.

The goals consisted of beating Greenwood, reaching a batting average over .300, becoming sectional champions, winning half of conference games, and scoring in the first inning.

The Lady Pioneers struggled with waiting until about the fourth or fifth inning to score their runs, always keeping the game intense.

"It was difficult always coming back in the fourth inning, but that was our inning," freshman Cami Henry said.

Throughout their season they achieved all of their goals. The ladies beat Greenwood, finished out the season with a batting average of .336, were runner up in sectionals, won over half of their conference games, and scored in the first inning on multiple occasions. The girls went on a fifteen win streak with only one game breaking it, eight games in.

"This is the best season we’ve had since I started coaching here," Coach Traci Ball said.

"We meshed really well too, it wasn’t just all about the wins for us. We were more than just a team. We had all grown up with each other and we were like sisters." junior Paige McGraw said.

Senior Liz Brock meets the ball for a base hit in a home game against Cascade. Brock tied throughout the season for first in conference in stolen bases. “I take advantage of every opportunity I have to get in a scoring position because I am confident my teammates will hit me in,” Brock said.

Senior Jackie Falin sprints toward the infield to catch a fly ball. Falin returned to center field after breaking her wrist in the previous season. “I love being part of the outfield squad again,” Falin said.
Freshman Gabby O’Riley dives for a pop-up bunt while playing third base. O’Riley was one of four freshmen to play varsity. “I really enjoyed being part of such a strong team with great chemistry,” O’Riley said.

Mooresville’s defense honors the playing of the National Anthem. The girls later went on to win against Martinsville. “It’s always a great feeling to know my teammates trust me in right field,” freshman Brook Wilson said.

Sisters Morgan and Brook Wilson zone in on the batter while waiting on a play. Morgan and Brook played a year apart from each other. “I’ve always played with Brook, so you could say we know each other’s strengths and weaknesses,” Morgan said.

Sophomore Maddie Bombei awaits a grounder at shortstop. Bombei started at shortstop all season. “I’m not afraid to get dirty as long as I stop it for my team,” Bombei said.

Sophomore Camille Roloff sprints to first to beat out a throw. Roloff played second throughout the season. “Every time I make contact I run it out to put pressure on the defense,” Roloff said.

Freshman Kate Disney, sends a serve over to the opposing team. As a freshman, Disney worked hard in order to play varsity and was excited to perform for the Pioneers. "I loved playing tennis this year," Disney said. "I was able to share in a lot of fun memories."

Sporting the pink #PrayForPerkins shirt, freshman Morgan Fitzpatrick lob one over the net. Fitzpatrick was the youngest of three sisters to play for the Pioneers. "I love playing tennis and I love supporting Mrs. Perkins," Fitzpatrick said. "It was a win-win for me!"

After being diagnosed in January with breast cancer, Mrs. Jennifer Perkins feels immense support from her fellow staff members and students alike. Staff members and tennis players wore shirts like, Morgan Fitzpatrick (right), to raise money and show support. "It was amazing seeing all the support. We've never had that type of crowd before," Assistant Coach Rachel Wathen said.

All Heart: Both On & Off court, teams brings kindness

The Pioneer Tennis team, the season was one for the books. Both Varsity and JV did great! The JV squad alone finished: 12-1-2.

"This is the best they've done in as long back as I remember," Coach Teders said.

The Pioneers has 3 available coaches in order to help and instruct. With this greater availability, Assistant Coach Rachel Wathen was able to really pour into the JV team. The team saw great improvements and will be able to compete for the next few years.

"I was able to really talk to the squad during matches and encouraged them along the way," Wathen said. "These next few years should hold some promise, the team just keeps getting better!"

The Pioneers' had a great season and are looking forward to many more.

"Last season was so fun and at the same time, so rewarding," junior Jessica Langley said.
Playing For Keeps
Boys Golf Ranked All Year

When it comes to golf and especially high school golf, "rankings" were everything. Rankings were a way of telling other schools how good you are and how far you'll go in the IHSAA tournaments.

Fortunately for the Pioneers', the team was ranked 20th in the entire state. Then, after a win at the Brownsburg Invitational, the Pioneers jumped to 18th.

"It was really awesome being ranked; it showed people we mean business," junior Tristan Schaeffer said.

After a tough loss at the Mooresville Invitational, the Pioneers' dropped down to "honorable mention."

"It didn't matter where we were at," junior Sam Wells said. "We were still ranked at that's what matters."

The Pioneers rode their season out and ended up with a great finish. They advanced to regionals by scoring a 322 and placing third in the sectional.

"We are a young team and there is always room for improvement," Coach Ernie Adams said.

Training to Succeed

Determination is Key

Before the race, the runners waited in anticipation for the gun shot to start the stampede towards the finish line. They thought of all the training they did and prepared to accomplish their goals.

Without a track, the team had no where to practice, nor did they have hardly any home meets. This had not stopped the team though.

Although it was challenging for the team to practice and meet in the same place, they still made it work. "People would think running is running no matter where you’re at, however that’s not the case," Coach Megan Jenkins said.

In often cases, the Mooresville track and field team had to meet at other schools, such as Plainfield and Monrovia.

The teammates had to make do with what they had. The seniors had especially stepped up to the plate, by helping out the other members with training.

"It was difficult, but it helped us handle adversity and overall made us better as a team," junior Tyler Early said.

When they were faced with obstacles, they used their determination to overcome it. With determination, a few students had broken records. Senior Sarah Corbin had broken her record by a total of 2 feet and she had also made it fourth in state in discus.

Corbin had competed in the discus competition at the IHSAA State Finals. She now holds both the shot put and discus records at MHS.

Several track and field athletes also made it to regional competition. They included: Maddie Vauters (3200), Taylor Ellis (long jump), Aaron Culver (high jump), and Michael Anderson (shot put).

Sophomore Taylor McConigal participates in the varsity 100 hurdles. McConigal had become a better runner and had improved throughout the season. "At the beginning of the year I didn’t give one hundred percent, now I’m starting to train way harder," McConigal said.

by Stephany Bailey and Taylor O’Neal
Mooreville’s track was under construction and is in the process of being transformed into a new turf field with a new track. For the season, this means that the team only had one home meet before construction began. “The new track is going to be awesome,” freshman Delani Bruce said. “I can’t wait until we have turf.”

Sophomore Madison Vauters runs with junior Kayla Covey at a home meet. Vauters had definitely left her mark on the school, she had broken 4 records that were 28-32 years old. Kayla participated as a member of the first ever Unified Track Team at Mooreville High School. “I love Kayla’s smile and how much fun we have,” Vauters said. “It just warms my heart every time we run together.”

Senior Sarah Corbin broke her record from past year by 2 feet. Corbin had also made it 4th in state, and was selected to compete in the Midwest Meet of Champions. “It was great going in and beating my records from the last year right off the bat because it showed how hard I worked in the off season,” Corbin said.

Standing Out
May the Chorus be With You

Seniors Brendan Rollin and Madi McGuire play the roles of Princess Leia and Han Solo in their Star Wars Themed show. Spotlighters' performance included several Star Wars elements including an opening credits screen before their show. "Our whole show is one storyline," McGuire said. "Darth Vader takes me away in the beginning and I am alone in jail until Han Solo rescues me. Han and the Jedis train to overthrow Vader and the rest of the empire. After a long battle, Vader is defeated." This storyline created a completely different show than Spotlighters had ever taken on before. Their show featured props such as light sabers; it also included costumes for characters such as Darth Vader and Han Solo.

Seniors Tristan O'Reily and Elijah Pingleton smile out into the crowd. Both had a passion for performing and a dedication to choir. "Performing allows me to let out everything I feel," Pingleton said. "The stage is where I am the most comfortable."

Junior Cameron Dougherty sings out during the Spotlighter Invitational performance. Community Night had been a tradition for many years at the high school. "I like performing on community night because it's always filled with excitement," Dougherty said.

Sophomore Abby Mann belts out her solo in the choir’s opening song “Shiver My Timbers.” The girls took on a unique theme for their competition show. “Our pirate show is so different because we are more like a broadway musical and we do a lot of acting,” Mann said. “We get to make a special character out of ourselves and use it the entire show. It’s a lot of fun and most people have never seen anything like it.” Finesse included pirate costumes and frizzy hair with dirt smudges on their faces to add to the effect. The choir brought their unique show to four different competitions throughout the year and performed for several home events.

Finesse members Natalie Guffey, Michelle Bosaw, and Lucy Newton sing the opening song for their performance during Spotlighter Invitational. The weekend was both fun and exhausting for the choirs. “It is so fun to perform and design rooms even though it’s a long weekend,” junior Newton said.

Sophomore Jaimee Schuck looks out into the crowd as she performs. She was a prominent leader of the front row during the show. “Standing out and being a character is fun, and that’s what’s great about our pirate theme,” Schuck said.

Orchestra Members
Bring Home 42 Gold Medals from ISSMA

ISSMA stood for the Indiana State School Music Association. Students performed difficult pieces—to be critiqued by judges. The orchestra proudly brought home 42 gold medals from ISSMA.

The instrumentalists practiced diligently to learn the new music. The orchestra played three pieces from a selection called "Capricol," including "Basse Danse," "Pavane," and "Marrachins."

"Orchestra adds variety to my otherwise pencil-and-paper school day. I've made and saved
friendships through orchestra," senior Peyton Lindley said.

Sheryl Fyffe's direction led the orchestra to this magnificent accomplishment. Her encouragement pushed students to achieve new levels of mastery in music skills.

"For any ensemble, we directors are always 'raising the bar' for our students. Each day a week can bring new techniques, new music, new styles," Mrs. Fyffe said.

After performing, students received gold, silver, or bronze medals and the chance to move on to state qualifications. The orchestra performed in the most difficult division and still received impeccable scores.

"It feels great to be a part of a group that cares so much about music, but in the end the gold medals don't matter. What matters is the fun we had as a group," senior Haley Taylor said.

Senior David Lawson plays the cello in the concert orchestra. Lawson won a gold medal when he performed a solo called "Danse Rustique," which qualified him to perform for State Contest. "[Performing at ISSMA] is very erve wracking, especially while warming up and waiting to be judged," Lawson said.

Senior Elzie Randolph dons a homemade Viking costume during Octoboo. Octoboo was the orchestra's annual Halloween performance, in which the lobby and stage were decked out in spooky decorations. "[Octoboo] is a chance for everyone to get to play together, and we also get to play with the band so that's nice. A lot of people focus on sports, so orchestra and bands don't always get a whole lot of recognition. It's nice to go got that recognition," Randolph said.
Anatomy of Our Orchestra
Learn About Our Different Instruments and Instrumentalists

Violas are similar to violins, but are larger and sound lower. A person who plays a viola is called a violist. The violists sit next to the violinists in the orchestra. Typically, the violins play the melody of a song while the violas play the harmony. "My sister was in orchestra and I always saw her performances, so I decided to try it and loved it. I like the sounds of the [viola] better than the others," junior Steven Grimes said.

Basses are the lowest instrument in the orchestra, and they are seated behind the cellos. The average bass is anywhere from five to six feet tall. "I thought [ISSMA] was amazing. I really enjoyed it and would always do it if I could. I really like music and I love playing the bass because I really get into it sometimes," senior Brandon Thiede said.

Violins make up the largest part of the orchestra. Violins produce the highest sound in an orchestra. The violin section is split into two parts, Violins 1 and 2. The more experienced or skilled instrumentalists play Violin 1, but that doesn't detract from the talent and dedication of Violin 2 players. "My favorite thing about playing the violin is how it offers an outlet. Playing violin lets me express myself in a unique way and provides stress relief," junior Haley Viewegh said.
Marching Band

The Mooresville High School Marching Band's season was overwhelmed with emotion as many seniors had their final show of their high school career.

As it total, 11 of the band members were seniors. Many of which were either section leaders, or just mentors to the younger kids in general.

"Losing the upperclassmen will give the underclassmen the chance to step up and fill the shoes," senior Brian Roskowski said.

It turns out that the show title Burdened, had no affect on these band members though.

"We are losing a larger class, however, the ensemble is growing in size," Band Director Jason Freeman said.

They placed 11 out of 40 in the day show at the State Fair and 12 out of 16 in the finals.

"I'm excited to see how the seniors have influenced the underclassmen and how they will take what we taught them," senior Kellie Schlangen said.

The band will continue to play their best as the remaining students continue on without their peers.

Show Choir Band

Behind every great show choir is a great band. It may not receive as much recognition as the choir performers, but without the band, the show would suffer.

Always at competitions performing with Finesss and Spotlighters, the band is extremely important.

"The difficult keys and notes made it hard, but it was tons of fun," junior Sam Kern said.

"At first, I wasn't sure I would enjoy show choir band, but when it came down to it, I love the challenge it brings me," sophomore Hannah Nicholson said.

The Pioneer Regiment performs their show Burdened at the Indiana State Fair. The underclassmen really pushed to perform well that day with so much pressure. "While the band will be young next year, I have no doubt they will perform beautifully," senior Sierra Lowe said. Photo by Jill Crail.
Pep band plays at senior night in full support of their fellow members. The band played selections from Katy Perry, Neil Diamond, and The White Stripes. "Playing trumpet is very enjoyable and I will continue to play," freshman Dakotah White said.

As the teams play, the pep band supports with cheers and music. The cheers were loud and often lead some of the crowd. "My favorite part about pep band was getting to be a big part of the environment at the game," senior Austin McKinney said.

Saxophone players jam out to one of the popular tunes. The saxophone section held the largest variation of people from all four grades. "Finding time relevant music is satisfying when you can play it," senior Brian Roskowski said.

Jazz Ensemble had its ups and downs. The band always struggled to practice and play fun jazz music without complications.

Clarinet and flutes, for the first time in their high school careers, were allowed to play in a piece the Jazz Ensemble performed.

"It was fun to play new styles. Flutes are not typical in a jazz ensemble so it as unique to try something out of the ordinary," sophomore Sarah Swanson said.

The ensemble performed "Cute" by Neal Hefti/arr. Mike Story and "Any Way You Want It" by Steve Perry and Neal Schon/arr. Paul Murtha at Wagon Trails.
Moving Up This Season

The Indiana High School Color Guard circuit was made up of seven classes including; festival, cadet, regional A, AA, A, open, and world. Mooreville High School Color Guard was part of class A.

In earlier years the guard was in class AA. The guard competed as a participant in the State Preliminary Competition. The whole guard felt accomplished with what they had done in the season.

"I thought we were going to be fine. I was positive we were going to be competitive and a crowd favorite as usual. The guard was working hard and had taken major strides performance wise and that made the entire staff believe we could be great in class A," Instructor Chris Sparks said.

When the guard moved up to A they had to become more emotional and put more performance into the show. The show was very meaningful to the people in it and the people watching.

"I really liked the dance feature because it's such an emotional part of the show and its where the performers can really portray how they feel and could possible relate," Natalie Bell said.

Choosing their pose, the guard gets ready to start the show. The theme was based off Sleeping Beauty with music from Maleficent. "I liked working together like a team and developing such an emotional connection with everyone in the guard," sophomore Cora Murray said.

All the rifles are leaning toward Wilson as she catches. Wilson's catch was a mood change for the rest of the show. "I felt the show actually portrayed a story, rather than just a performance we put on an actual story, and during the season we all just grew so close. We became a family," senior Nicole Gilmer said.

The whole guard was in the same pose to give emphasis to the soloist. Senior Tristan Tate was the main soloist of the show with a minute and a half solo. "Goodnight, Rose, was a great way to end my high school color guard career with. I loved performing the show and the story that went along with the show," Tate said.

56 Wagon Trails
Freshman Isabella Crawford is the only freshman that spins a rifle and saber in the show. Crawford is very into guard. "It has been a wonderful experience being the youngest weapon member," Crawford said.

Senior William Rhodes and junior Kaitlin Darlington started out the production by dancing on the path while everyone was in the back corner doing character dance. Rhodes was the second male to join color guard. "I feel honored to have been part of such a wonderful program," Rhodes said.

Sophomore Christina Wilson prepares herself for her solo toss. Wilson had been part of guard for six seasons. "I liked how when everyone was nervous we would pump each other up to get ready to perform," Wilson said.
The Royal Court announces the arrival of Queen Elizabeth’s arch rival, Mary, Queen of Scots. Queen E’s Lady in Waiting was actually played by a male, senior Austin Webster. “The role was originally written for a girl, but was made to where a guy could play it in drag” Webster said. “It sort of became a theme this year with Wagon Trails and the play that I would wear a dress my last time on stage.”

Playwright Phyillis Montague (senior Maryssa Small) introduces her niece, Monique (senior Olivia Seyerle) to the rest of the cast. The duo, the crazy perfectionists they were, caused the cast and crew a lot of headaches during rehearsals. “It was really fun playing Monique because she is so different from my personality,” Seyerle said.

Queen Elizabeth I (senior Hannah Shelton), in unladylike fashion, listens to the Spanish ambassador’s warning to not harm Queen Mary. Elizabeth claimed she only wanted Mary’s kilt and had no desire to have her killed. “It was a lot of fun to play England’s Queen,” Shelton said. “I was especially happy to wear my American Flag Converse with my dress.”
Actors and members of the stage crew within the play move the throne room dais on the stage. Senior Nessly Johnson played the role of Aggie, the stage director who tried to keep everyone in line. "Playing Aggie was so enjoyable," Johnson said. "I love playing any character, but getting to yell across stage and be a little aggressive was fun."

The royal court surrounds Queen Mary of Scotland (senior Alyson LaPlante), as she arguably sings to Queen Elizabeth (senior Hannah Shelton) "The Throne is Rightly Mine." The two queens feuded throughout the entire musical. "I really loved playing this part," LaPlante said. "I got to be really sassy with everyone and the costumes were a lot of fun, too."

Chief Stage Director Louise (senior Olivia Carlton) is fed up with Monique hovering over her. "Lilly and Libby were Louise's ditsy and sarcastic assistants. "This was the last production with my original cast mates," Carlton said. "I've been with all these seniors since freshmen year and even though it was our final curtain call together, I loved every minute of it."

The pregnant Violet (senior Sarah Novicki) laughs after Saul cracks another joke about Polly. Violet actually had her baby during the musical within the play while she was supposed to be playing the "Virgin Queen of England". "My favorite thing about being a part of the spring play is how often our lines pop out in our normal lives," Novicki said. "It's always funny when a spring play line fits perfectly in a casual conversation."
The Life of a Royal...

During the coronation the King and Queen emerge and take their crowns. Seniors Andra Owens and Quinn Cavin were elected by their fellow classmates as prom royalty. They were crowned by the class of 2014's queen, Ariel Halstead. "I never expected to be prom queen so it was a big surprise when they called my name," Owens said. "Everyone that ran [for king and queen] looked like royalty, though." "It was a really great honor to be crowned, I had an amazing time at prom," Cavin said.

What are friends for?

Junior Avery Selch beautifies her friend, junior Tiarra Delph, by reapplying some lipstick. Girls spent lots of time and money for that perfect look on that special night. "It was complicated finding a color to match her skin tone," Selch said. "But helping my best friend get ready for prom made the experience that much more enjoyable."
Bust A Move! Smiles on all faces as the crowd cheers on the girl whose smile can be seen all around school, junior Kayla Covey. Senior Allison Cox stands in the crowd and cheers on her fellow Best Buddy member. This was Covey’s first year at prom and she made sure to get the full experience. “I had a lot of fun,” Covey said. “I really like to dance and picking out my dress was not hard at all.”

To the right to the right...everybody gets down to the Cupid Shuffle. Senior Taylor Burnside was lucky enough to attend two proms. She went with her boyfriend to Monrovia’s prom, and then a weekend later busted a move at the best prom in the Downtown Marriott. “I had a blast being there,” Burnside said. “I couldn’t ask for a better time. Prom is something that I’ve always looked forward to going to and it was wonderful. It’s one night that we all just let loose and have a ball, and I sure did.”
Saying Goodbye

On Saturday, May 30th, seniors’ alarm clocks rang early in the morning. They eagerly got up and got ready, put on their caps and gowns, and started toward Mooresville High School one last time.

Each student restlessly sat in the South Gym, equally nervous and excited. The day they had waited for their entire lives had arrived. Several speeches were given, including one from valedictorian Tristan Hetland, who stressed the importance of the past and also true friendship.

“Wherever we go and whatever we do, may we always be friends when we meet again,” Hetland said.

Graduates were awarded their hard earned diplomas, and then turned their tassels to become official alumni. Following was a slideshow, showing all who attended the transformation of seniors from small children into young adults.

“Watching the slideshow was amazing because it shows how far we have come,” senior Liz Brock said.

Administrators were proud to present the class of 2015, and wished them the best for their futures.

“You are the leaders of tomorrow,” Mr. David Marcotte said. “Go forward and make your mark.”

Senior Traver Harper walks across the stage to receive his diploma. This was a defining moment in each student’s life. “I am excited for the future, but I know the only easy day was yesterday,” Harper said.

MHS underwent major construction over the summer. The project came to a close in August and welcomed students with more to offer, including a brand new Virtual Learning Center (VLC). The VLC boasted couches and chrome stools where students could take a load off, along with phone and laptop charging stations around the room. The school transformed to fit the needs of students and their love of new technologies. Alumni took tours of the school to witness how their alma mater had graciously formed to meet the needs of the youth of 2015.

One of the most anticipated times of the year for choir students at MHS is Spring Spectacular. The all girl group, Sensations, sang Hakuna Matata as a part of their Disney medley for the performance. "Being in Sensations has helped me become a better singer. Because of that, I made Finesse for next year," sophomore Jordan Wallman said. This event was an opportunity for students involved in the choir program to showcase the progress they had made during the school year under the direction of Mr. Jason Damron.

The Concert Band begin to play with the opening note. The band director, Mr. Jason Freeman, pushed them to master their songs for performance. Freshman Travis Blackburn and the rest of his classmates have a close relationship as they often proudly refer to themselves as "band kids", setting them apart from the rest of the student body.

The Mooresville High School Chamber Orchestra tune their instruments as they prepare to perform at Wagon Trails Revue. The students play everyday in their orchestra class in order to further their talent as individuals and as a group. "I have been playing for] three years and I really love it," Matthew Harden said. Being a member of Orchestra allows students to express their love for music through their playing.

Members of the Mooresville High School Madrigals harmonize as they sing their final of three songs during the annual Wagon Trails Revue. The students beamed with pride as they left the stage, kicking off their season with a great start. "Being the President of Madrigals this year has been such a great opportunity," senior Casey Deal said. "My favorite part of the year was when we all knew that we exceeded our expectations of the group by receiving Grand Champion." Every member of the choir became a part of Madrigals because of their love for music and expressing themselves through song.

Same Heart, New Start 67
Moore News Goes Live

Around 2010, the Broadcast Team was streaming its show live. The school discontinued its contract with the Channel One streaming service, ending the live distribution. Live streaming returned to MHS better than before via YouTube.

Using the new Blackmagic ATEM ME/1 Production Switcher and Ultrastudio Minirecorder along with various new cameras and lights, the broadcast team of 16 pulled off live format productions. Its two shows, “Fast Break” and “Moore News,” were captured as if they were being broadcast live.

“While the shows still aired through My Big Campus, I’ve spent the entire year setting us up for YouTube,” executive producer, senior Austin Webster said.

A channel was set up to start hosting the announcements for teachers to access and show to their classes through email. Though a globally used service, Webster found a way to keep the shows private.

The team was notably small, but a tight knit group of hard workers. Many staff members worked on daily segments, reports, and packages from bell to bell. There were also a few staff members who were in their fourth and fifth years in the program due to their love of what they do.

“I joined broadcast in eighth grade, and it contributed to my decision to pursue broadcast and journalism in college, so I stuck with it,” senior staff member Madi McGuire said.

Along with having great workers and a great team, many leaders emerged in the program.

“The team works great together. In fact, six members invest in weekly leadership training after school,” Adviser Andrew Marine said.

Those leaders have established a firm foundation for the broadcast program to grow. With a new lab and a young group of leaders, the broadcast has started down a path of success.

The Pulse Crew poses for a group picture for its first spread of the year. The staff consisted of 9 freshmen, 3 sophomores, 1 junior, and 2 seniors. “I feel like their big sister or something,” Editor senior Nessly Johnson said. “They have great ideas full of enthusiasm.”

Your Pulse Is Back
Young Blood Revives Old Paper

Following a year with a loss of many seniors, the newspaper staff was nonexistent the first semester. Come second semester, however, a plethora of freshman hot off journalism class brought the paper back.

“I decided to join the newspaper staff because my older sister loved it and told me to take it,” freshman Jessica Baker said.

The staff may be mostly underclassmen, but everyone got along well.

“We may enjoy different things or not agree on something, but we always share a love for newspaper and work hard to create it together,” junior Shelby Parsons said.

One of the few seniors on staff, Nessly Johnson stepped into a leadership role as editor of the paper. She was new to being the head of a publication and took the challenge head on.

“The hardest part was just learning how to be an editor and picking out how to manage the issues,” Johnson said.

“I was so pleased with the way Nessly was able to manage our young staff, and the progress we made in just a semester,” Yearbook and Pulse Adviser Ada Clark said.

After a semester hiatus, the school’s pulse came back.

Publications Staffs Get New Computers

The renovations in the 2013-2014 school year brought a new lab to the publications staffs. Along with the new space, the broadcast, yearbook, and newspaper staffs were given new Apple iMacs to work on.

“I was so excited when I walked into the lab the first day of school and saw all the Macs,” Yearbook Co Editor in Chief senior Hannah Shelton said.

The Macs posed a new threat to avid PC users in the publications. Apple’s MacIntosh computers had an entirely different interface than Microsoft’s Windows. Adapting from the Windows Operating System to the Mac OS was a major learning curve.

“It was an interesting hurdle, I’m not used to the Mac Operating System, but it definitely works better than the computers we used to have,” senior Broadcast Member Ethan Gabbard said.

“We have Disney World,” broadcast adviser Andrew Marine said.

The iMacs were a step-up from the dated HP towers that served as the main tools of all three staffs for nearly a decade, and are also the only ones in the school. Equipped with all the necessary programs and power needed to fuel all three publications, these computers were a helpful tool and blessing to the students on staff and will benefit the programs for the years to come.

Junior Yearbook Member Claire McElhaney works on her page on one of the iMacs. The new computers added a new level of productivity to the design process of the yearbook. “I don’t have a Mac of my own, so I love getting the privilege to work on them at school everyday,” McElhaney said.
Presentation Pressure
Students Enhance their Public Speaking Skills in Speech Class

From smooth talking politicians to high school students, giving speeches is an important part of life. Learning how to communicate to crowds is an essential skill that Mrs. Melanie Kassen's speech students learned to wield.

Public speaking could be difficult. Some students felt anxious when in front of crowds, and nobody wanted to be singled out with shaky hands or sweaty palms. Luckily, some students didn't feel nervous while presenting.

"I wasn't nervous [coming into speech class]. I'm a very confident person with my public speaking abilities," senior Bailey Briere said.

Speech students not only practiced speaking in front of an audience, but also learned about different types of speeches. The students presented informative speeches, persuasive speeches, instructive speeches, and more.

They told fairy tales and even debated one another.

"[My favorite speech was] the informative speech because I got to pick a topic I really enjoyed. It was hard for me to condense all my info into the time limit," Patrick Quyle said.

Mrs. Kassen was passionate about speech because public speaking skills are helpful in all parts of life. Not only would it be beneficial in job interviews and college, but also in knowing how to better communicate with friends and family. Kassen had a speech degree from IU, and she greatly enjoyed pursuing a speech major.

"It was fun. I loved it, but I didn't know I wanted to do a speech major until I took my first speech class in college... I found out they were going to pay me to talk and I said, 'Where do I sign?'" Kassen said with a laugh.

Blake Hicks prepares to demonstrate how to properly ride a longboard. Hicks had known how to longboard for a few years and decided to present this for his demonstrative speech. "I wasn't nervous. I can talk to people pretty well," Hicks said.

Academic Teams Study and Compete to Showcase their Knowledge

At the end of the day, some students couldn't wait to get out of school and go home; however, some dedicated scholars wished to enhance their knowledge and utilize their academic skills by joining academic teams.

There were five different academic teams: math, science, history, English, and fine arts. The teams went to competitions to put their knowledge to the test. Students had a great time studying together.

"I like the overall camaraderie that I have amongst my peers," Matthew Collins said.

The theme for the year was Rome, and each team focused on different aspects of Roman life. The students researched everything from Pliny’s work with volcanoes to Romulus and the myth of the foundation of Rome.

“I’ve studied numerous books on Roman art and multiple Wikipedia articles. I had to do a major touch up on my Roman numerals and my knowledge of circles, arcs, and cords,” Jillian Holt said.

The students had a blast expanding their knowledge and making friendships.

Olivia Seyerle is full of smiles working with the Academic Teams. Seyerle was a member of English Academic Team for six years and History Academic Team for three. Each year brought fun memories of participating with her friends. “There was one time we got a bunch of questions in a row right that were just guesses,” Seyerle said.

Ethan Hall throws his head back with laughter after the competition. Hall enjoyed Math and Science Academic Teams because the subjects were constantly growing and evolving, meaning there would always be new facts to learn. “[My best memory was] just hanging out with fellow intellects,” Hall said.

The scoreboards are blank before revealing each school’s score. The English, Fine Arts, and History Academic Teams each placed in second in their very first meet. “There is a lot of fellowship between the people that are working together. You can make a lot of friends and can learn in the same process while having fun doing it,” Tristan Helland said.
Art Speaks
Often Louder Than Words or Actions

With every brush stroke, slip and-score of clay, scratch of a pencil, clink of jewelry, and snap of a camera, students worked diligently in the art classrooms. Several noises had come from these rooms.

Shouting and laughing and chatter filled the small space that was the art hallway. If one had entered one of the two rooms, it became a completely different environment.

For MHS students, art classes became really important and made a great impact on their days. "Art classes are a good getaway where you can be creative with your own ideas without fear of being questioned or judged," junior Morgan Cobb said.

Hidden underneath all of the sports and academic programs, there have been many talented students who are blessed with the amazing ability to create something with just an art tool or their hands.

Creating was often used as a way for students to express themselves in ways which they couldn't in a classroom full of desks and white erase boards.

"These art classes are one of the few that gets you out of left-brain thinking," senior Sarah Corbin said.

Students were not the only ones who thought this way either. Many teachers and administrators talked of the significance of art classes.

"Art classes will always be held highly important at MHS," Brian Disney said. "Creativity is a good skill to hone, and our school is a wonderful provider of such."

by Taylor O'Neal

Sierra Disney's clay bust lay finished on a shelf in Mrs. Valerie Summerlot's room. "Disney had always been talented when it came to clay. "Working with clay is just what I do best," Disney said.
"Being able to create makes life a little more enjoyable," Mr. Devin Tudor said. "It is important to create everyday."

"Art is personally important to me because it is my way to relate to the world," Mrs. Diane Evans said. "It also can solve a lot of emotional and physical issues."

"Art influences culture and culture influences art...art is a part of everyday life," Mrs. Valerie Summerlot said.

"Why is art important to you?"

Masks made by seniors Heather Harris, Taylor O'Neal, Grant Bailey, and sophomore Stephany Bailey lay finished in Ceramics. Students had worked hard throughout the week to make them. "Making masks was my favorite part of this class," Stephany Bailey said.

Students of art classes are taught to show complete detail in their paintings. Junior Brooklyn Todd clearly showed this in her art. "Every detail counts in art," Todd said.

Freshmen are not all new to the art scene. Art for freshman Matthew Lowe was very important. "Art has always been sort of therapeutic for me," Lowe said.

Principles of Biomed

Miss Alicia King and sophomores Garrett Fehrman and Nicholas Ward cut their heart open to analyze the chambers. The students worked in groups of fours and took turns cutting and marking the different sections of the heart. Students from Mr. A.J. McAdams and Miss King’s Principles of Biomed classes spent weeks learning all about the heart prior to dissecting. They did various activities like drawing and labeling pictures of the heart. The students marked each section of the heart with flags before cutting it open. Once the heart was labeled, the students cut it directly down the middle on the septum of the heart. Then the students examined the chambers and valves of the heart. “Seeing students excitement about feeling the structures in the heart was my favorite part,” Miss Alicia King said.

Junior Sarah Ignas folds and tapes together geometric shapes for a geometry project. Ignas started by cutting out the shapes, coloring, and folding the shapes together. “The project helped me understand how to find the volume and area of the shapes,” Ignas said.

Sophomore Amy Frone examines the chambers in her pig heart. Frone learned about what each chamber does before the dissection. “My favorite part was being able to see the chordae tendineae and being able to reach the aorta and into the left atrium and left ventricle,” Frone said.
Juniors Sarah Ray, Sophie Shock, Sarah Head, Jessica Langley play roles of the characters in the book "The Jungle" for an American Studies video project. The students worked outside of class to create a parody song that had to do with the book, and then turn it into a music video. "My favorite part of the project was being able to work with my best friends and create something really fun," Ray said. "I loved that it was something different than what we usually do in class."

Senior Dylan Johnson and junior Luke Clair-Ficko set up their trebuchet for an AP Physics project. The students worked in small groups to build their trebuchets. "Building the trebuchet was a lot of trial and error because of our lack of experience," Clair-Ficko said.

American Studies Presentations

Junior Nolan Christian presents a presentation on Nathaniel Hawthorne for his American Studies class. Students researched a specific historical person and did a presentation dressed as the person. Each student had to dress as the person they researched during their presentation. Group and individual presentations and projects were a large role in this class. "Playing Hawthorne was easy to play, but it was hard to find a costume since nobody wears fluffy shirts and large trench coats anymore," Christian said.

Physics Boat Races

Senior Olivia Seyerle and junior Jamie Grass race their boat to the end of the pool. Grass and Seyerle worked weeks on creating the perfect boat that would hold their weight during the race. Boat races had been a tradition for a really long time. The students were in groups of two and worked outside of class to create their boats. The classes raced their boats during 4th period and students from other classes came and watched. The students made their boats strictly out of cardboard and duct tape. "When building my boat I learned that putting forth a lot of effort to achieve a certain goal makes achieving that goal much more satisfying," Grass said.

Senior Kyle Finley and junior Kristin Worth paddle their boat across the pool. Finley and Worth worked together to build their boat. "The best part was seeing our boat once we finished building it," Worth said.
Prince Charming finally finds his true love once he places the glass slipper on Cinderella's foot. During the performance, the actors actually tried the slipper on people's feet in the audience in search of the runaway beauty. "I loved] to see the faces of all the young girls and hear the family's talk about how they loved it. It was a blast and unlike anything I have ever done," Rollin said.

Cinderella is heartbroken because her evil step family rips her mother's old ball gown and will not allow her to go to the ball. Senior Sarah Novicki, who played the evil stepsister, Joy, greatly enjoyed playing a mean, extravagant character. "I felt like I was made to play Joy. She was way over the top and larger than life," Novicki said. Novicki enjoyed being a part of the spring play and musical. "Theater is a way to whole heartedly jump into someone else's shoes and through that, I've been able to learn a lot about myself. It's a short but exciting escape from reality that helps ground me at the same time. Theater is a passion, even when it's just a hobby."

Dreams and wishes are impossible, according to senior Sidney Bills' character, a sassy fairy godmother. Based on the persona of Whitney Houston, the fairy godmother enchanted Cinderella and helped assist her in making it to the ball. "I redesigned [Houston's character] from bottom to top and put my own personality into it," Bills said. Bills loves the freedom performing gives to an actress, letting her become a new person on stage: "You can be someone who you're usually not, evil or good, et cetera. It lets you become someone new each time. Plus it's fun when you can wear as much glitter as you want."
If The Shoe Fits...
A classic tale comes to life on the MHS stage.

Once upon a time, on a stage not too far away, the cast of the annual musical performed the classic story, "Cinderella."

With a little magic and a lot of help, the show was a magical adventure for both parents and kids.

There were ups and downs in trying to pull together the musical. It took a village to produce a show of that size. Countless hours were contributed to sew the costumes, make props, paint the set, learn the music, and seamlessly pull it all together. Stage crew, lights and sound, musicians, and singers practiced tirelessly to learn their parts.

"The thing I enjoyed the most about this production specifically, was the amazing, hilarious, and supportive cast that I got to be a part of. They brought so many memories and laughs that I will never forget," senior Abigail Crump said.

Many unforgettable memories were made. Some were heartwarming, and some were funny. Everyone had a good laugh over one particular flub: the cast had purchased a full-size, authentic Cinderella carriage to use in the show, and unfortunately it would not fit inside the school.

“One of my favorite memories about the musical is when Abby Crump's wig fell off last year during little women. And I'm really glad that didn't happen with my mustache in this production of Cinderella," Ricky Yutmeyer, who played the king, said.

The cast also tried something new and threw a tea party for little boys and girls to attend. The children had refreshments, watched the cast perform some songs from the show, and got their pictures taken with Cinderella. The kids were decked out in princess gowns and prince costumes.

A magical carriage appears from a plain yellow pumpkin to carry Cinderella to the ball. Several chorus members were needed to portray horses, mice, footmen, coaches, and other characters in the scene. "The people involved with this musical were so wonderful and hard working. I greatly enjoyed meeting new people and hope to be involved in other musicals in the future," senior Bethany Frink said. Frink loved being a part of the chorus, where she played a horse, a ball room dancer, and a townswoman. "My favorite thing about my character was that I tried to portray the energetic wife who was really talkative and wouldn't shut up."

The evil stepsisters carry the train of Cinderella’s wedding gown on the way to her wedding. Junior Olivia Carlton made the audience laugh out loud with her character Grace, the awkward step sister. "Getting into character wasn't too hard with this part. Grace was just an extension of slap-stick comedy self," Carlton said. Carlton had been involved in the theater for years, so playing a ditzy, crazy role like Grace wasn't new for her. "Grace was a huge goof who didn't really know what was going on half the time. I enjoy getting to not be myself for a while and I absolutely love the feeling of making people laugh."
Students Helping Out

No Kid Should Fight Alone

Top Dance Marathon participants held up the grand total for Riley at the JV homecoming game. Student Council's goal was to raise $5,000, they met their goal and even exceeded it. "The Dance Marathon was more successful this year than any of the previous years," Junior Luke Clair-Ficko said. "It is a great way to give back to the community; surpassing our goal was a fulfilling feeling."

Justin Speedy and Issac Scott

Students gather from all over the school to lay down and give blood. Over the course of the school year, Student Council held multiple blood drives to provide for those in need. "I decided to give blood because my friend Jillian Holt had leukemia as a kid and people's blood donations helped save her life," senior Sierra Lowe said. Student Council hosted charity events within the school; during October, students trick-or-treated for canned goods. The council's main project for the year was hosting the Dance Marathon. In addition to charity, Student Council attended and hosted student leadership events. Students met with leaders from other schools to better their leadership skills.

An Inclusion Revolution

Senior Gracie Norton wheels Champions Together participant Mark Faulkner to the middle of the court as the grand total was revealed. Through Gracie and her NHS groups' hard work and effort to organize the event the group was able to raise $6041.38, and made Mooresville a partner school of the organization. "Champions Together helps educate people on the meaning behind the 'spread the word to end the word' campaign and raise money for Special Olympics Indiana," Norton said. "Our goal was for the student body to recognize the athletes for their abilities instead of their disabilities. They truly were my inspiration for this project."

New Friendships
Best Buddies members gather around the table at their club game night. The game night was a way for students and their buddies to get to know each other and bond. "I love being a part of Best Buddies because each time you spend time with them they always make your day," freshman Shelby Waldrip said.

Freshman Maddie Poynter holds up Easter baskets that Key Club put together for Riley. Poynter organized the basket making soon after the club was re-established. "Putting together baskets made me feel like I was bringing happiness to the kids that received them," Poynter said.

The club participated in a state wide walk through Best Buddies of Indiana to support and raise money for the program. The 5K was held downtown on April 26th. In addition, Best Buddies President Alii Cox was awarded as the Chapter President of the Year.

Alii Cox and Kayla Covey

Junior Shelby Bray and Madison Peterman sing karaoke at a Best Buddies activity night. The club put on several events both within and outside the school to help members build friendships. "In Best Buddies we always have fun and can always be who we are," Bray said. "I have made a lot of good friends."
Junior Joe Ulrey's favorite app on his cell phone was Lumosity. "This was my favorite game because you get to play games while you increase brain productivity," Ulrey said. He talked to his best friend, junior Tristan Schaffer, the most. Ulrey sent less than 1,000 texts per month. His cellphone had 543 pictures on it. "I have an iPhone 5c and I like it because it is easy to use and allows me to access anything I need through apps and the web," Ulrey said.

Freshman Hunter Brown did not have any apps on his phone. His phone was broken and all he used it for was to text his friends. Brown sent less than 1,000 texts per month. The person he talked to the most was freshman Harley Gilpin. His Blackberry held 20 pictures. "I dislike my Blackberry because it cracks and breaks easily," Brown said.

Sophomore Lindsey Baker's favorite app was Spotify. "This is my favorite app because I really love music and it helps a person find new bands and discover different music types," Baker said. The people she talked to the most were sophomores Kayla Morris and Renee Majeski. Baker sent over 1,000 texts per month. Her Galaxy s4 held 3,000 pictures. "I like social media because it helps me stay connected with news today and with my friends," Baker said.
Mrs. Alicia Richhart

Mrs. Alicia Richhart’s favorite app on her cell phone was Pinterest. “This is my favorite app because why not,” Richhart said. She sent more than 1,000 texts each month. She talked to her husband, Chad, the most. Her iPhone 5s held 986 pictures. “I like my iPhone 5s because it gives me access to different things like maps, coupons, and email,” Richhart said.

Sophomore Justin Peck’s favorite app was Twitter. “I like Twitter because there is always something going on,” Peck said. The people he talked to the most were junior Kaleb Owens and sophomore Tirzah Delph. He had 281 pictures on his Galaxy. Peck sent more than 1,000 texts per month. “I like my Galaxy because it can do everything and it keeps me in touch with my friends,” Peck said.

Junior Carissa Ooley’s favorite app on her iPhone 5c was Instagram and Snapchat. “These are my favorite apps because you can use pictures to communicate,” Ooley said. She talked to her boyfriend, senior Austin Webster the most. Ooley sent more than 1,000 texts per month. Her blue iPhone 5c was holding 1,789 pictures. “I like my phone because I have dropped it a lot and it hasn’t cracked,” Ooley said.

Freshman Alyssa Bauer used her phone mainly to check social media and to text her friends. Her favorite app was Instagram because it was a way to share all of her pictures. Each month she sent more than 1,000 texts. The person she talked to the most was her best friend, freshman Broghan Reynolds. Her iPhone 5s held 1,789 pictures. “I like social media because it keeps me connected to my friends and it’s a great way to waste time,” Bauer said.

Brand New Experiences In The Making

The common thought about high school is that it's seven periods in a day and not just four, but for many students they have already thought about their jobs and futures.

Many students left Mooresville High School to participate in the Work Based Learning Program or intern at a job they were interested in pursuing.

"There is something for everyone with Work Based Learning," Mrs. Aimee Kroll said.

Ben Davis Area 31 Program was designed to allow students to take part of their school day to obtain a job experience. Going half days wasn't just to learn the skills of a future job, it also helped students get multiple credits to graduate. Many students loved taking this opportunity to prepare themselves for their future.

"It has opened many doors for me," senior Michael Anderson said. "There were plenty of different jobs and internships that students were able to take advantage of.

To be in the program, students still had to have a good work ethic and take part and do well in school work.

"I figured I would have a better work ethic," senior Cody Garmon said.

Cadet teaching allowed students to go to an elementary school or stay in the high school to see if they wanted to pursue a career as a teacher.

This opportunity provided many opportunities such as cadet teaching, firehouse cadets, and interns at the hospital in town.

Senior James Stanley focuses on learning how to work a new tool. Stanley loved going half days for the Ben Davis Area 31 program. Programs at Ben Davis, such as Machining, focused on teaching students the mechanics of different tools and machines for their future trades. "I have learned a lot about my vocational class," Stanley said. "I enjoy the time between schools so that I can go to Ben Davis in the morning and pursue my machining career."
Junior Breanna Bates sits in a chair describing to the early childhood development class about the weather that day. Bates loved teaching the kids how to count by hundreds and tens. "I chose to do the Area 31 Career Center to better prepare myself for college," Bates said.

Junior Carissa Ooley sits around a table in Miss. Clunie's fifth grade class while she helps the kids with math stations. Ooley loved the kids and also being able to get to know them each personally. "My favorite part is interacting with the kids in groups and getting to know them," Ooley said.

Senior Aellig Warren gets ready to enter the St. Francis Hospital doors to start her day off at her internship in the ICU unit. She enjoyed being able to start her day off with something that she loved to do. "Ever since I got to experience my nephew being born I took an interest in being a delivery nurse, so I decided to do this internship to get a taste of what it's really like," Warren said.
We Workout

Work Hard & See Results

Students were very involved in fitness classes. Athletes took APC (advanced physical conditioning) to be able to improve and get stronger in their sports. Students were also enrolled in regular gym class, yoga, and lifeguarding.

“She worked hard. Her main thing is building her confidence. She is starting to understand what weightlifting does for her. She is very athletic and has a great work ethic,” Dockery said.

“All of my maxes have improved and I want them to keep improving. I love seeing new results,” Barr said.

The athletic department was very involved in weightlifting and they understood that athletes need to improve and get stronger mentally and physically.

“We have great commitment from our community and all of our coaches to be able to give our athletes what they deserve to be able to compete. They understand how important it is to make our athletes better. We are trying to give them an advantage over other average athletes,” Dockery said.

Alex Fabert (right) was a clear example of how weightlifting improves athletes.

“He goes above and beyond. Fabert shows great initiative and spends countless hours in the weight room. He was picked for USA football, an extremely hard organization to be chosen for. He does everything possible to improve his game,” Dockery said.

“I always want to do my best and improve in football,” Fabert said.

by Becca Stevens

Freshman cheerleader Alexa Barr is almost down at a 90 degree angle as she pushes up 205 pounds as she tries to increase her squat max. Barr improved immensely since first semester of APC (advanced physical conditioning). She is in the heaviest weight lifting group for girls in her class. “I wanted to become stronger and improve athletically,” Barr said.

Sophomore Sam Walsh benches the bar for a warm up of two sets of 10. Dockery left a warm-up on the board for every athlete in the class. “Considering I’m only lifting 45 pounds in this picture, I do actually do well in the class and lift a good amount,” Walsh said.
365 pounds on the bar, junior Alex Fabert squats down to see if he can improve his max. Fabert is the starting quarterback for the varsity football team. He took this class to improve as an athlete and perform better in football. He was not only a leader on the field, but in the weight room as well. His maxes improved all year. “My favorite part of APC is getting big for football. I had the goal to gain 15 pounds and 20 pounds on all of my maxes,” Fabert said.

Freshmen boys, Drew Beaven and Benjamin Taylor are in lifeguarding. Taylor “saved” Beaven as if he was actually drowning. Coach Joe White taught this class. They swam three days a week and the other two they spent learning the ins-and-outs of lifeguarding. “I love getting in the water and practicing my lifeguard duties. I also like the responsibility of saving people’s lives,” Taylor said.

Students in lifeguarding have daily tasks they have to achieve to be able pass this class. Sophomore Pierce Roark was saving his lifeguarding partner for their final exam. “My favorite part of lifeguarding is saving the babes. If someone is drowning, I will be able to help because I know what to do know,” Roark said.
Ms. Sharon Eickoff taught English 10 at Mooresville High School. She worked tirelessly to teach students writing skills necessary to pass the ECA.

"Students should take every opportunity given to them to prepare for the English 10 test," Ms. Eickoff said. "This test is merely a stepping stone, and this doesn't determine who you become."

Students relax after writing constructive responses. They had been writing essays over books of their choice. "I do stress a lot on a daily basis. The work load is quite huge and it would be nice not to stress too much," sophomore Savannah Phipps said.

Tests Galore...
Enduring the Stress

Students endured the many hours of studying for tests. Not only did they study for their daily classes, they also had to study for standardized tests.

These tests defined whether they graduated or not. Many students took one their freshman year which was Algebra I ECA. They also took one their sophomore year which was the English 10 ECA. If they didn't pass these tests, they had to take them until they passed.

Some students also had to undergo after school athletic and academic activities. On top of that, they also had to conquer the hours of homework afterwards.

"It is difficult to tackle both homework and soccer, but it's helpful to get into a habit of working hard," junior Elizabeth Young said. For the last couple weeks of the school year, students experienced a different kind of schedule. There was a red schedule and a green schedule for the ECA tests.

Red schedule made the odd period numbers 65 minutes long and the green schedule made the even periods 65 minutes long.

The most stressful things that juniors and seniors went through was the SAT and ACT. The pressure was suffocating; 100 points can make a difference to wanting a dream job.

Surviving the stress and making a future is starting to make an impact on student lives.

"I think students absolutely go through stress because of the increased demands within the educational system, in addition to the activities they are involved in," Mr. Burgess said.

"Make sure you study hard and make sure you get it right the first time so that you have more opportunities in the future," junior Samuel Baughman said.

New Foods Bring New Thoughts

MHS Students Adjust to Healthier Options

During 2014, the students of Mooresville High School underwent a drastic transformation of food and drink options in the cafeteria and in the vending machines around the building.

"I love the new vending machine options now. All of it is so much healthier," junior Kassidy Andrews said.

Instead of the traditional candy bars and sodas found in the vending machines during 2014, new items had replaced them. Granola bars and low calorie snack packages appeared, causing quite an uproar.

Despite any animosity toward these new food options, the students at Mooresville learned to accept the changes for the reason they were implemented. The goal was to create healthier students through the Healthier US School Challenge (HUSSC).

"Chick-fil-a sales stopped because they did not meet the requirements to be sold as an a la carte option," Daniel Williams, Food Service Director, said.

Due to Mooresville's participation in the HUSSC, food served in the cafeteria also underwent transformation. Fruits and vegetables became a mandatory element to the students purchasing school lunch.

"I'm not really sure how I feel about it yet, but I think the changes will be good in the end," junior Logan Madden said.

Mixed feelings over this matter led students to think about the foods they ate. The beginning steps in creating a healthier student body at Mooresville High School had begun.

by Claire McElhaney

Joe Sh Hansel, Holly Littell, and Sarah Ignas sit to eat lunch together. They sat with each other everyday last year. "We all pretty much bring our lunches, but we love all the Snapples and drinks we can get now," junior Hannah Kiggins said.

Students in favor of MHS food changes

Journalism In Denver

Student Publication Members explore the streets of Downtown Denver. Six students from both Broadcast and Yearbook were able to attend the JEA Convention to better their skills in Journalism. "My broadcast competition was very helpful to me because it gives me constructive criticism on what I still need to work on," senior Austin Webster said. "I can use the skills I learn for my future." In addition, Broadcast members Madi McGuire and Seth Haimann also participated in competitions and attended media tours. Yearbook editors were able to compete in write off competitions and get inspiration for future books.

10th Grade Movie Trip

Sophomores Emma Pedigo and Nicole DeSotel grab their snacks and find a seat. The entire sophomore class went to a theater to watch the movie Selma to get a better understanding of the discrimination apparent in the 1960s. "I enjoyed the field-trip because it was educational, but it was also a relaxed way to learn outside of the classroom," Pedigo said.
Leaving the Classroom

Creative Writing

Creative Writing students observe murals and paintings in the Indiana Museum of Art. Each student had to find a piece of art to write a poem about. "I really liked that Mrs. Clark gave us a personal tour of the museum because I had never been before," senior Nellys Johnson said. "I wrote about The Sound Room, which is a huge room with different colored wires hanging from the ceiling. If you wait in the room you can quietly hear people say 'I love you' in different languages." The piece of writing was put into poetry books that were made up of ten different types of poems. Creative writing allowed for kids to express themselves through several different forms of writing. Going to the Indiana Museum of Art was a way for the class to find inspiration outside the classroom.

Sports Marketing

Junior Bryce Hart explores the Federal Reserve of Chicago's interactive stations. Sports Marketing went to the Reserve and the Chicago Bears Stadium to better understand different aspects of business. "I am interested in the financial part of business, so it was neat to see how the system works," Hart said.

Christmas Caroling for Gilly

Students volunteered over Christmas Break to sing for Ms. Joyce Gilly's mother shortly before she passed away.

A Puritan Experience

Students took buses to Bethel Church to learn about puritan lifestyles and beliefs.

A Transcendental Day

Students took a trip to Brown County State Park to read transcendental author's works out loud.

Choir in Nashville

Several choir boys and Mr. Damron stack in a pyramid in front of the Grand Ole' Opry. Both Finesse and Spads members were able to attend the trip to Tennessee and learn about the backgrounds of different types of music. "My favorite part of the trip was touring the Grand Ole' Opry," senior Lance Lawyer said. "It has so much history." The choirs were able to tour the city and record songs in Studio B.

A Big Year for American Studies

Downtown to the War Memorials

Students were able to see the memorials for wars they learned about in class and learn about the history of Indianapolis.

Introducing the Top 20...

Well...21 (Tie for 20)

by Jordan Childers and Hannah Shelton

"I am proud of myself for achieving my goals through hard work and perseverance." -Lance Lawyer
"I have worked extremely hard to get in the Top 20 position, and the banquet was worth it. It was an honor to be part of that group, the food was epically delicious, and it was a pleasure to appreciate and be appreciated." -Tristan Hetland
"The Top 20 dinner is a great event to honor those students who worked hard over the past four years, but an even greater event to thank those who encouraged us to work hard." -Deyton Lindley
"I have enjoyed this experience with these great people." -Kirby Goodwin
"The top 20 gave me a chance to look back and appreciate all of the hard work we have put in to get here, and it was satisfying to me." -Natalie Clevenger
"The Top 20 Banquet was an honor to attend and I feel very blessed to be counted among such an elite group of students." -Quinn Cavin
"Working hard for straight A's isn't fun, but it pays off in the long run." -Carson Mulvehill
"I'm here because my junior year Mrs. Gobel told me to 'stop sucking.'" -Matt Collins
"Achieving top 20 has been a goal since I was in elementary school; to see it finally happen is a blessing." -Dana Nokes
"It was an honor to be in the Top 20. I took Coach Dockery and my 6th grade teacher because they contributed to a lot of my success in the classroom." -Trevor Baxter
"It was a struggle." -Kellie Cavanaugh
"I think I have a class with every member of Top 20." -Olivia Seyerle
"Top 20 is a great honor that everyone should work towards." -Mikala Elstner
"Giving a speech at the banquet allowed me to reflect on the 4 years of hard work and dedication that got me there. It wouldn't have been possible without the support of my parents and teachers who motivated me to strive forward on a desire to live a life of thinking, learning, and serving others." -Gracie Norton
"Before the speech I was pretty nervous but afterwards I realized the honor it was to be a part of this group and was able to celebrate with the teachers I brought." -Tori Sanders
"I like our group because we all work together to get where we are collectively." -Jillian Holt
"Being in the top 20 is an incredible honor. It took dedication and determination to be a part of this group, and difficult to keep working hard...but in the end, it all paid off. I am proud to be a part of the Top 20." -Maryssa Small
"Having a speech that actually means something is fun, except when everyone laughs during yours, and you don't have any jokes written in it." -Brian Roskowski
"Being a part of Top 20 has been a dream of mine for the past 4 years. Hard work really does pay off in the end." -Jordan Childers
"The best part was being able to see all of the people who had influenced my life beginning at a young age." -Justin Speedy
"It's an honor to be in the Top 20 with some of my best friends." -Sierra Lowe

Imagine the many people who roamed the halls of MHS throughout the years. While a multitude of generations claimed the school as their own, all students entered through the doors with the same goals: Have fun and graduate. Every generation had its own class clown, brainiac, beauty queen, and all star athlete. What role did you play? Your role made high school a fun place to be. After all, it was the many characters who filled the classrooms that made it all worth while. Whether you knew it then or not, your role impacted many lives day in and day out.
"I miss middle school because of the teachers. They made us who we are and they helped us in so many ways," Rebecca Dreher said.

"High School is basically what I expected; however, it took about a week to really know my way around," Sam Norton said.

"High School is different than middle school because high school is more lenient about things you wear and do," Brooklyn Casilli said.

"I don't miss middle school because it is really small and compacted," Thomas Polson said.

"I like high school better because the teachers give us more freedom to be ourselves," Kaitlyn Trosper said.

You have more freedom in high school, but the classes are a lot harder," Braden Bantley said.

"When I get older, I want to be a missionary. I want to travel and spread love to those who truly need it. I want to change lives when I'm older," Broghan Reynolds said.

"I want to be an ESPN Sportscaster, I would rather talk about sports than play them. Playing sports involves way too much running," Ben Neal said.

"I plan to be a cosmetologist so I can be able to interact with people and I love to do things that involve working with hair," Savannah Combs said.

"My biggest goal in life would be to play baseball professionally. Baseball is my life, it's what I love to do. Everyone always dreams about being in the 'big leagues' as a kid, and it's always been a goal of mine to work hard every single day and pursue that dream. Though I know that I have a very slim opportunity to do that, so if things don't work out with professional baseball, I would like to receive a Division 1 scholarship to a great medical school. Hopefully Indiana University so I can become a Physician or Anesthesiologist. I've always been interested in the medical field and if baseball is not what God has planned for me, I will pursue the medical field. I really liked Biomed last year and I'm interested in anatomy and how the body works. Whatever I end up doing for the rest of my life, it will be something that I enjoy doing for the rest of my life," Tanner Haston said.

In January of 2015, the Wagon Trails Revue Yearbook staff conducted a survey for the sophomore class. Statistics based on 159 responses.
Major Diseases caused worldwide panic. Severe cases of Ebola, flu, and other ailments caused sickness and even death in some rare cases.

The War on Terror was a global effort to stop terrorist aggression by groups such as ISIS. Major assaults included the public murder of an American reporter and attacks in France and Sydney.

The Interview movie caused debate with its release. North Korea threatened to bomb the U.S. if the movie was released, so many major theaters avoided showing the controversial film. The plot's premise included the assassination of North Korean leader, Kim Jong Un.
HeForShe Campaign launched worldwide for gender equality. The campaign promoted male involvement in the feminist movement. Ordinary people and celebrities alike teamed up to support the fight that has been going on for generations.

One World Trade Center reopened in Manhattan, New York, on November 3, 2014. The center of the tower was constructed with a concrete layer to withstand any potential attacks.

Anti-Police Rallies rocked the nation. Protesters gathered in public streets in New York to combat police brutality and racial profiling.

Ferguson Riots and violence were rampant over the murder of Michael Brown. Brown was shot by a police officer, and the Grand Jury ruled not to indict the officer.

Sophomore Driving Experiences

“I hadn’t even had my license for four weeks, and I almost drove straight into a telephone pole because I was checking out some guys in the school parking lot,” sophomore Madison Fox said.

“This one time I was driving so slow, that a moped passed me,” sophomore Trinity Jackson said. “I was so embarrassed.”

“The only radio stations I usually just listen to are 99.5, 100.9, or 103.3,” sophomore Garrett Febrman said.

“It takes thirty dollars to fill up my car now,” sophomore Tyler Weaver said. “Hopefully it stays that way.”

“The first week I got my license, I got pulled over. I was only going three miles over the speed limit,” sophomore Taylor Adamson said. “Luckily the cop let me go because I hadn’t had my license for that long.”

“Once I get my license the first thing I’m going to do is pick up my friends and go to Taco Bell” sophomore Carli Grass said.

Abby Crump
Place of Employment: God's Shining Light Daycare
Perks: "The daycare is really flexible with my school schedule."
Best Experience: "My favorite part of the job is when I create relationships with the kids and they now they can trust me."
Worst Experience: "Over the summer I worked every day in a classroom for two year olds. Needless to say, they are full of energy and the whole summer was very hectic."

Maddie Pedigo
Place of Employment: Walgreen's and Horse and Hound Vet Clinic
Perks: "Helping people and their animals is definitely a perk."
Best Experience: "The owners brought in a horse named Malcom, who had been abused for three years. The pelvic bone was messed up and they believed he wasn't going to live. The vet did electric therapy and now he is happy and healthy. I always feed Malcom peppermints, his favorite treat."
Worst Experience: "A German Shepard came in and had a seizure. We had to put him down and the family is was unbelievably sad. It broke my heart."

Congratulations,
Quinn. We couldn’t be more proud!
- Love, Mom, Dad
and Katie

Macy,
We are so proud of you and your many accomplishments! It’s funny to remember where we’ve been, and we cannot wait to see where you go! You’re a beautiful,
bright star. Always BE
YOU!
- Love, Dad, Alisa,

For some students, this year signified the beginning of their high school journeys. For the Class of 2015, this year was a collection of lasts that led them to the end of their MHS adventures.

While all ends were bittersweet, MHS had a way of making saying goodbye a little sweeter.

Mr. Tim Vanwanzeele said his final goodbye to the school through getting involved in a fun filled pep rally.

Mrs. Jennifer Perkins said goodbye to the normalcy of life when she was diagnosed with breast cancer. Upon notice, the whole student body supported her by making "Perkins Strong" t-shirts, and gave her the proceeds from shirt sales.

"When I first found out, my heart broke for her and her family," senior Ashley Kelley said. "I got at least 50 people on board to buy a shirt within an hour of posting. Over the span of three weeks I sold $545 in shirts. I donated all the money earned to the Perkins family."

Spotlighters said goodbye to performing on stage by creating a dance to one of the most popular songs of the year, "Uptown Funk," by Bruno Mars.

"It's always a ton of fun getting away from our normal show to learn something new," senior Casey Deal said. "It's like a last hurrah to end a great season."

Seniors said goodbye to friends they had known since elementary school with a traditional picnic in the courtyard and, of course, the graduation ceremony.

"I think it's going to be bittersweet because I won't get to see my friends every day, but I'm excited for new challenges in college," senior Dana Nokes said.

The end of the school year was inevitable, no matter how far off it may have seemed in the beginning. It was the trends and pop culture that made the school year completely unique.

Although "end" sounded permanent, no end was truly lost or forgotten. So many pictures in this book signified the end of a high school career, or the end of a decade, or the end of a fashion trend.

These ends were made anew through this book, and new memories were documented for future generations to enjoy.
A rainbow graces the Pioneers with its beauty; a great start to any Friday morning. Students had one week left before the school year came to an end. “This left a really good impact on my last week of high school,” senior Alyson LaPlante said. “I think it represented the great things that are to come after the rainstorm that high school can be sometimes.” Photo by Drew Mendenhall.

Traditions are taken seriously at MHS. The class of ‘96 enjoyed the senior picnic with their fellow classmates and friends. This picture was taken when the 2015 graduates were babies or weren’t even born yet. “The cookout is tomorrow and I am really looking forward to carrying on the tradition,” senior Hannah Shelton said.

Senior Makala Morris participates in Hawaiian day for Winter Homecoming by borrowing sophomore Jaycee Shelton’s uncle’s Hawaiian suit. Shelton’s uncle had actually worn this Hawaiian suit to prom 17 years earlier. “At first everyone looked at me funny, but then they enjoyed it,” Morris said.

Seniors enjoy the beautiful weather while having a picnic in the courtyard among friends. This was a great way to end the seniors’ reign at MHS. Teachers and members of the lunch made sure the picnic was a hit. “The picnic was a fun way to eat good food and hang out with friends on the last day of school,” senior Christopher Reynolds said.
The 2015 Wagon Trails Yearbook, Volume 70, was put together by a student staff and printed by Herff Jones Publishing Company at its facility at 2424 Midpoint Drive in Edwardsville, Kansas. This was our seventh All-Color Wagon Trails Yearbook. The publishing consultant was Cathy Wolfe, and the customer service representative was Debbie Thomas. Lifetouch Photos took the freshman, sophomore, junior, and faculty pictures for the albums. The senior photos were taken by Prestige Portraits by Lifetouch. The book was created using the Adobe Master Collection and Herff Jones Internet software eDesign. Students were able to work online and from home to get their pages completed. This was the first book that was completed in the new Virtual Learning Center using new Mac Computers. The 2015 Wagon Trails Yearbook Staff would like to thank: Cathy Wolfe, Debbie Thomas, Andy Marine, Susan Haynes, Rick Briar, Peggie Gorman, Kathy Johnson, Becky Bischoff, Marsha Green, Lori Smith, Dawn Blake, Lisa Gabel, Brian Disney, Jennifer Perkins, and Adam Allen. This yearbook staff would also like to thank the following people for contributing photos used in the book: Lindy Scott, Jill Crail, Donna Roskowski, Phil Wright, Melanie Barden, Kelly Patel, Marsha Green, and Brian Disney. For their much appreciated assistance with the annual variety show, Wagon Trails Revue, we would like to thank Mrs. Sheryl Fyffe, Mr. Jason Damron, Mr. Jerry Weber, and Mr. Jason Freeman.
